SCOTTISH NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Reports from the provinces of Scotland show that the Trade prosperity still continues. The coast towns in the vicinity of the Clyde, along with Edinburgh, benefited greatly by the incursions of Glasgow trippers on Monday last, and the showery weather which prevailed provided a harvest for the wide-awake cinema proprietors. In Greenock, where the rain caused many to break their journey to the court, one manager opened at 12 noon, and did record business, and in some of the other towns the result was the same. In Edinburgh, one manager informed me that he had a queue outside from 2 till 9.30 p.m., and I saw others who were in a similarly happy position.

During the week I have been among the miners and iron workers, and find that they are as keen on pictures as their more fortunate brethren who follow their avocations on the face of the earth.

ABERDEEN.

In the Granite City the whole of the houses report business as good. The Gaiety, where Mr. Dove Paterson provides up-to-date programmes, is doing exceptionally well, but whatever Mr. Paterson attempts succeeds. Striking personality and real talent in elocution are Mr. and Mrs. Paterson's chief assets, and their "speaking pictures" are the talk of the North. Last week the Gaiety bill of fare included "On the Great Steel Beam," "The Hermit," "The Law of Humanity" and "Withering Roses," while a speciality is the latest wires of the world's news, worked in conjunction with a London daily. The musical arrangements are in the capable hands of Miss Nelly Ambler, and the projection is all that can be desired.

The Coliseum, Belmont Street, is another of the Dove Paterson Halls, where the best is always to be found. Of last week's subjects the principal were: "When the Debt was Paid," "Big Bob Awaits" and "Pimple's Dash for the Pole." Topicals and illustrated songs make an ideal entertainment. The musical director at the Coliseum is Arnold Matthews, whose selections never fail to please. The Dave Paterson halls can claim to be under Royal patronage.

On Monday evening the Territorial week in Aberdeen commenced, and the aid of the cinema was enlisted. The arrangements were placed in the hands of Mr. Dove Paterson, who, in the Music-Hall screened the British Army film to a large audience and aroused enormous interest. The film was also shown on Tuesday and Wednesday, and again the large hall contained its full complement. The cinema has been of exceptional advantage in recruiting in Scotland, and Aberdeen did well to follow the lead of Glasgow in this respect.

The splendid new Picture Hall in Union Street, which has been erected and fully equipped at a cost of something over £14,000, will open its doors to the public this week-end. The new venture will be named La Scala.

ANNAN.

Before renewing the licence of the Albert Hall, Annan, the licensing magistrates visited the hall and inspected the exits. On the applicant agreeing to put in a new staircase at the back entrance and exit, and carry out some minor alterations, the licence was renewed.

CAMBUSLANG.

In the Premier Hall, Mr. James George was entertaining a fine audience with a nicely-balanced programme of drama and comedy. "A Fight for a Fortune," and Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss were the attractions, and the applause denoted the appreciation of the audience. The Premier is a commodious hall, and has a very roomy curved balcony.

CARNOUSTIE.

The special spring holiday programme provided by Mr. Alfred Ruse, of the Pavilion, was the means of attracting good houses from the Monday onwards. The tit-bits were: "Amid Raging Beasts," "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "The Death Weight," and a good mixture of comedies. This week the entertainment consists of tabloid operas, and that excellent drama, "The Vampire." The Pavilion has a seating capacity of 1,050, and is one of the most comfortable halls on the East Coast of Scotland.

DALKEITH.

Wilson's Electric Pictures, which are housed in the Foresters' Hall, are, as the day-bills state, like "Charley's Aunt," still running, and so long as Manager Flynn contiues to book attractions like "Sixty Years a Queen," which was shown to crowded audiences last week, the "run" is likely to last. The Royal Film Agency's exclusive proved a great draw, and the good people of Dalkeith are fortunate in having such a subject provided for them. The Sunday shows at the Electric still continue, and the result of the present agitation to end them is awaited with much interest.

DUNFERMLINE.

I was fortunate in having a chat with Mr. Rowett Haddow, the resident manager of the Olympia Picture Palace, Dunfermline, while he was in Glasgow last week. Mr. Haddow informs me that cinematograph business in Carnegie's birthplace is still on the boom, and that no one has reason to grumble. At the Olympia, "Grist to the Mill," "The Cowboy and the Baby," "The White Rose" and "Broken Threads United" proved good draws, and the house was well filled twice nightly.

FALKIRK.

The Electric Theatre has the advantage of being under the personal supervision of the managing director, Mr. J. E. Atkinson, who also runs the Empire at Motherwell. In Falkirk, Mr. Atkinson has achieved remarkable success, and his hall is the rendezvous of all who have an interest in the best of cinematography. Last week's subjects included "The Wreck," "Jerry's Mother-in-Law," "Moonshiner's Last Stand," and many comedies. The pictures are well projected, and Mr. H. H. Charlesworth's orchestra supplies delightful accompaniments.

GRENNOCK.

A visit to Greenock revealed the fact that the winter's good business shows no sign of slacking off. This Clyde-side town has an advantage over others in the west of Scotland, inasmuch as the exodus of holiday-makers from it, is more than balanced by the numbers who make Greenock and Gourock their headquarters for excursions to the many resorts to which special facilities are afforded by steamers plying from the port. The picture houses naturally get the benefit in the evening, and good business is the result all the year round. On Thursday evening I found the B.B. Cinema invaded by the 5th Battalion of the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, who came to witness the last part of West's Army film, which has been screened at this hall for a week or two. The "Tommies" enjoyed their visit to the full. The Army film was backed up by one of Mr. Clayton's best selections.

La Scala has had a change of management, and here I found my old friend, Mr. Phillips, who will be remembered as the indefatigable director of the information bureau of the recent Cine exhibition in Glasgow, installed in full charge. I wish Mr. Phillips every success.

GOUROCK.

This fashionable Clyde holiday and yachting resort has had its fill of holiday-makers during the past week, and the season may be said to have commenced in earnest. The picture-lovers of Gourock are catered for in the Picture House, and Mr. Chas. T. Lawson sees to it that they get the best. Last week's programme included "Snatched from Death" and "The Wells-Blake Fight," with a pleasing selection of comedy and interest.

HELENSBURGH.

Across the river from Greenock and Gourock lies Helensburgh, another of the Clyde's popular resorts, and here La Scala has commenced to reap the benefit of the summer season. On the Glasgow holiday—Monday last—Mr. Campbell opened his magnificent hall from 3 till 10.30, and gave a continuous show. During the whole time every seat was occupied, and with good, well-projected pictures, and Mr. Hugh Murray's delightful music, visitors were able to enjoy a programme every bit as good as they could have found in any hall in Glasgow. Monday's programme included "The Heart of a Jewess" and "Caught Courting," while the latter half of the week saw the production of "The Girl and the Tiger." La Scala is an up-to-date hall, and is provided with private boxes, circle, stalls and balconies.

KILBOWIE.

As Brazil is famed for nuts, so Kilbowie, on the Clyde, is famed for sewing machines, for it is here that the great firm of Singer have one of the largest works in the kingdom. For the multitude of workers in this and other industries, the New Kinema provides excellent entertainment. During the last week "The Passion Play" was the star. To "The Rosary" which was also shown, Mr. Flockart sang the song of the same name. At the end of the week, "Though Your Sins be as Scarlet" was the top-liner. "House full" has been the order of the week.

KILMARNOCK.

At the Electric Picture Hall, Kilmarnock, business is quite good, and with three changes a week and a star in every programme it ought to continue. Last week Mr. Talboys screened "The Secret of the Black Mask," "The Water Rat," "Folly," "At the Foot of the Scaffold" and "From Out the Flood," a galaxy of stars seldom shown in one week, but a programme which is characteristic of the usual fare at the Electric. There is a continuous show from 7.30, with matinées on Wednesday and Saturday.

Mr. Cummings, at the Kilmarnock Palace, runs an attractive variety programme in addition to pictures—but for the latter he always selects excellent subjects. Last week the picture programme was headed by "The Chinese Death Thorn," while the animal drama, "In the Coils of the Python," was no less successful.

MOTHERWELL.

I found Mr. Mundell, at the Cinema House, in a happy mood. His programme was pleasing, and his hall well filled. "The Romance of Erin" and "The Original Will" topped the bill-of-fare for the first half of the week, and "The Outlaw" and "The Race for a Million" the latter half. The Vivaphone "speaking pictures" are a pleasant feature.

At the Empire, Mr. Cunliffe, resident manager for Mr. Atkinson, of Falkirk, was proving that good pictures are attractions, no less than popular turns. With six well-selected pictures and five turns, Empire patrons have variety in every shape, and full houses are the general rule.

The Pavilion is Motherwell's newest and largest house of entertainment, and Mr. Alex. Murray believes in featuring the best pictures. "The House of Temperley" and "The Gunfighter" were two stars which figured prominently in an excellent programme. The first half of the week found no less than three exclusives. Business at the "Pav." is naturally on the up grade, and programmes such as noticed above will soon ensure a regular clientèle.

The Theatre, a beautifully designed and well-fitted hall on the Buchanan circuit, is now under the management of Mr. H. W. Ebbutt, who has succeeded Mr. Pattonhausen. "In the Hands of London Crooks" proved a rare attraction, and seats were at a premium, the "house full" board being requisitioned. Mr. Ebbutt, who for the last ten years has managed the Grand Theatre, Falkirk, on the same circuit, is well-known in the theatrical and cinematograph worlds, having graduated from the Theatre Royal, Croydon, to Drury Lane, where he had five years' experience under the late Sir Augustus Harris. After touring under various well-known managements, Mr. Ebbutt was selected for the responsible position at Falkirk, and for ten years the Grand has prospered under his management. In Motherwell, Mr. Ebbutt will have ample scope for his abilities, and I wish him the best of luck.

TROON.

One of Ayrshire's most popular holiday and golfing centres, Troon is well served pictorially by the Picture House, which has a holding capacity for a thousand visitors. The theatre has been opened for two years, and during that time Mr. A. Muir Gilchrist (son of Mr. Gilchrist, of the Eglinton Electreum, Glasgow) has presented to his patrons nearly all the top-liners released in that period. This week the programme includes "The House of Temperley," and another of the Sherlock Holmes series, "Reigate Squires." Future bookings include the whole of the above series, with W. W. Jacob's comedies, and "Snatched from Death," "Germinal," "King of the Air" and "The Curse of Greed."

"WAR AUTOMOBILE" FOR LUBIN FILMS.

The "War automobile," especially equipped for use in the production of a five-reel battle spectacle entitled "The Golden God," was one of the most interesting things used in connection with the picture. The machine was a big six-cylinder car, equipped with every possible thing known to the accessory shop—searchlights, headlights, sidelights, and mounted with rapid-fire machine guns with operators. Other armament and guards gave the machine the appearance of being a 1950 model motor-car, the period of the play. The picture was made at Las Vegas by the Lubin Stock Company.

Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

The Executive Committee of the Association met at Broadmead House, Panton Street, Haymarket, S.W., on the 8th inst. The minutes of the previous meeting (March 18th) were read and confirmed.

The Secretary presented correspondence:—(1) From the Incorporated Association of Film Renters respecting a form of agreement, promising to bring the matter before the Committee. (2) From the Incorporated Association of Film Manufacturers acknowledging with thanks resolution re licensing of film stores. (3) From the solicitors to Mr. M. J. McVittie asking if the Association's solicitors would act as London agents. It was agreed that this matter be left in the hands of Mr. Alfred Harris, hon. solicitor. (4) From the Secretary of the Protection Fund asking for further contribution by way of levy to expenses incurred in promotion of scheme. It was agreed that the Secretary confirm his reply that the Association declines to contribute further. (5) From Mrs. Hichisson asking the Association to support her in the event of opening on Sunday in defiance of London County Council. It was agreed that the Association could not support the action.

Dr. W. Fowler Pettie presented a report from a sub-committee to the effect that a conference was held on March 27th at the offices of the Incorporated Society of Authors, when the following societies were represented: — Touring Managers' Association, Theatrical Managers' Association, Incorporated Association of Kinematograph Manufacturers, Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, Film Renters' Association.

The following resolution, proposed by Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy, seconded by Mr. Haddon Chambers, was carried unanimously:—

> "That the appointment of a Joint Board to protect the common interests of authors, film manufacturers, exhibitors, renters, theatrical managers and the film trade generally would be to the advantage of all parties concerned."

Two delegates were to be appointed by each Association represented. On the motion of Mr. F. W. Ogden Smith, seconded by Mr. W. Lacon Threlford, Dr. W. Fowler Pettie and Mr. A. E. Newbould were appointed as the representatives of the Association.

A letter was read from the Home Secretary asking for the opinion of the Association as to the removal of the regulation with respect to spool boxes where films containing nitro-celluloid were used. After a lengthy discussion, the Secretary was instructed to forward the following letter:—

> The Rt. Hon. R. McKenna, M.P.,
> Secretary of State, Home Office.
> DEAR SIR,—Your letter of March 19th was considered by a large and representative meeting of my Committee yesterday, and I am directed to thank you for giving exhibitors the opportunity of considering this important matter.
> With a very intimate knowledge of the Trade, my Committee is of the opinion (a) that the amount of non-flammable film in use is so negligible in comparison with inflammable film for which spool boxes must be used, that no practicable advantage would accrue from the suggested alteration in your Regulations, spool boxes not being readily detached and reattached; (b) that any such alteration in your Regulations is unnecessary, it being the contention of exhibitors, reinforced by legal opinion and the decision of stipendiary magistrates, that where only non-flam film is used, the place of exhibition is exempt from the provisions of the Cinematograph Act.
> If, however, you are prepared to make further alterations in your Regulations, my Committee would very greatly appreciate the opportunity of offering suggestions."

The hon. solicitor, Mr. Alfred Harris, reported on the following cases:—(a) Alexandra Halls (Midlands), Limited, v. London and North Western Railway Company; (b) Mr. Arthur Schrynemakers, Southend-on-Sea, v. Great Eastern Railway; (c) Wilson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company; (d) Application for licence in Liverpool; (e) Stockton licensing conditions.

The Secretary presented a report re the Annual Dinner on behalf of the sub-committee.

The attention of the Committee having been directed to the extensive practice which prevailed in the Trade of making illicit payments to illegitimately foster business, the following resolution, moved by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. A. Cunningham, was unanimously agreed to:—

> "It having been brought to the notice of this Executive Committee that renting and manufacturing firms, whilst not knowingly permitting bribery, have taken no definite steps to prevent or check this practice, this Committee earnestly requests every member of the Association to bring before the Executive Committee any case that can be taken up in order to eliminate the evil."

It was resolved that Article 25 of the Articles of Association should be amended at the Annual Meeting (due notice having been given) by altering the number of directors from twenty to twenty-five.

In accordance with the Articles of Association, one half of the Executive Committee falls to retire each year, and the following gentlemen having signified their intention to stand for re-election, were duly nominated, on the motion of Mr. F. W. Ogden Smith, seconded by Mr. W. Lacon Threlford:—Dr. R. T. Jupp, W. Lacon Threlford, F. W. Ogden Smith, Dr. W. Fowler Pettie, J. Bussey, J.P.

The following nominations were made by Mr. E. W. Pashley Peall, seconded by Mr. F. R. Goodwin, for new members:—Messrs. A. Campbell (chairman, Liverpool branch), Alderman T. Thompson (Northern District), J. P. Moore (chairman of Birmingham and Midland District branch), W. Evans (Middlesex District branch), A. D. Thomas (South Wales District), Alderman Farrell (Irish branch).

It was resolved to hold a General Council Meeting at the offices of the Association on Tuesday, April 21, 1914.

Thirty new members were duly elected.

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

A visit to Messrs. Gaumont's Dublin branch well repays an exhibitor, as there is always to be found something out of the ordinary, besides a fine selection of feature and exclusive films. Booking is at present proceeding for "King of the Seven Dials" and "The Great Python Robbery," which are released towards the latter end of this month. Another exceptionally powerful film is the Nordisk drama, "Life." I noticed that Messrs. Gaumont were booking "The White Lie," featuring Mdlle. Regina Badet, and "Martin Numa," by the author of "Zigmar."

At the Princess Cinema, in Rathmines, Mr. Bradlaw has been having a bumper week with "A Court Intrigue." A topical, in the shape of "Curragh Races" was also screened, and drew the people in in no uncertain fashion. The film of each day's racing was screened the same evening. This house, under the managing directorship of Mr. I. I. Bradlaw, has always made a feature of "topicals," and the Trotting Matches at Jones' Road, Dublin, were also screened.

I was extremely glad to learn from my old friend, Mr. Norman Whitten, that the General Film Supply had their hands full of business. This, however, is scarcely to be wondered at when one considers that Mr. Whitten gives his personal attention to every order, no matter how small. Mr. Whitten told me that he had made a capture in the shape of a new camera-man, Mr. Benny Cann, who was with Pathé Frères for some time, and has been through a campaign. If the film of the "Curragh Races" was taken by this gentleman I can only say that his work is extremely good. Mr. Whitten is at all times glad to hear from Irish exhibitors desiring "topicals" of local events filmed, and I can safely say that they will not be disappointed with the quality of any work they may entrust to the General Film Supply.

The Kinetophone is coming to the Grafton, and will be in full swing by the time these notes are in print. This invention drew packed houses when it was shown at the Royal Avenue house, Belfast, on the same company's circuit. There is always a fine programme on view at the Grafton, and last week was well up to the average in this respect. A Keystone comedy, "The Gusher," held pride of place in the "light" line, while "The Face of Fear" supplied the "heavy." Mr. R. Bell continues to guide the destinies of this theatre in first-rate style.

At the Picture House, Sackville Street, the programme was also excellent, the best film being, in my opinion, "The Cast of the Die." A very attractive comedy, "The Joy Riders," was also on the screen.

Mr. Kay continues to give a good programme at the Grand Cinema. Last week, amongst others, we had the film "Beauty in a Seashell." In the early part of the week "Sophie's Hero" was screamingly funny and was enjoyed by everybody. "The Three-Mile Limit" was also screened.

By means of a donkey cart the Dorset Street Hall is capably booming the film "Hidden Fires," a large poster of which appears on one side of the cart. The rest of the programme is up to the usual high standard of those shown by Mr. Sullivan.

The Brunswick Cinema, looked after in champion style by Captain Smallman, recently showed "Amidst Raging Beasts" and "When the Earth Trembled." This little theatre continues to do well.—At the Electric, Oldcastle, Co. Meath, "The Battle of Paardeburg" was recently featured. "Paulette's Necklace" was also starred, and proved a big attraction. The projection here is of the best, while the programme is being supplied by the Gaumont Company from their Dublin branch.

Last week at the Park Street Picture Theatre, Dundalk, Mr. Louis Forster secured a stirling attraction in the film "The Pendleton Roundup." The different scenes were very ably described by Montana Jim, and altogether the entertainment proved very much to the liking of the good people of Dundalk. The "turn" was supplied by Billy Sherlock, comedian.

Mr. A. H. Poulter is showing—for the first time in Dublin—"The Last Days of Pompeii," to which he is giving a good deal of street advertisement, and I have little doubt but that packed houses will result. There is always a film "out of the ordinary" to be found at this popular house.

Mr. Maurice Elliman featured at the Theatre de Luxe "Kelly from the Emerald Isle" and "The Avenger."—At the Mary Street Picture House, Mr. O'Russ screened "Bianca," together with a programme of well-varied films.—"In the Shadow of a Throne" is being shown exclusively at the Waxworks, in Henry Street.—A fine Broncho film, "The War Correspondent," was a recent attraction at the Town Hall, Dundalk, and another film was "The New School Marm of Green River."—At the Galway Cinema—in addition to a well-selected programme—we had, last week, "The Iron Trail."

ON AND ABOUT THE YORKSHIRE COAST.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

As predicted in THE BIOSCOPE last week, the new Grand Picture House, Scarborough, had a most successful opening on Easter Saturday. Mr. H .A. Whittaker meant to have a cinema worthy of a beautiful South Foreshore, and he has secured one. Formerly a skating rink, the Grand has undergone such a remarkable transformation that the old building is practically unrecognisable. It is possibly the longest cinematograph theatre in the country, having a length of nearly 100 yards, but this is no indication of the "throw," as the picture are projected from behind the screen. Luxurious seating accommodation has been provided for as many as 2,000 people, and even the 2d. seats are plush tip-ups. There is also a magnificent lounge towards the front, fitted out with sumptuous Chesterfield settees, and the charge to this part is only 6d. An unusual feature, which permits of perfect hygiene is that the roof of the Grand, and one wall, which overlooks the shore, are practically composed of glass, and windows can be thrown open at any time to admit sun and air. Dimmed lights have been introduced along with the radiator system of heating. The walls are beautifully treated with gilt, white and colours, and with a nicely arranged stage and screen the Grand leaves little to be desired. On Good Friday the hall was open for inspection, and there was a large number of visitors. The manager of the Grand is Mr. G. Parnell, who previously had charge of the Olympia Picture Palace with conspicuous success. Without doubt he is providing excellent programmes for his patrons. The film secured for the opening day was "Antony and Cleopatra." This was a great success, and was followed by "Honesty" and "In Mid-Atlantic," both of which were exclusive to the Grand. Mr. Parnell is anxious to provide all that is best, and has secured the news films, which will be shown in each programme, and it will perhaps not be long before some of those local subjects are shown, which proved so popular at the manager's previous charge.

At the time of writing, "Paulettes Necklace" is the top-liner at the Picturedrome, Newborough, where Mr. Quinton Gibson is ever on the alert to provide his patrons with good fare. The programmes are always well varied at the "Pic," and the six other films in the list are "Where Ignorance is Bliss," "The Moulding," "Out and In," "Up the Angeomanally," "They Were on Their Honeymoon," and "Tenderfoot Sheriff."—Variety turns and pictures have been nicely intermixed at the Theatre Royal Cinema, St. Thomas Street, where Mr. Quinton Gibson sees that the subjects are all "up to the mark." The chief attraction this week is "A Reformed Outlaw," while humour is provided in "Unskilled Labour."—The Aquarium, the leading variety house in the town, had three or four good pictures in the programme on a recent visit I paid, and, undoubtedly, the item which caught on most of anything during the evening was the Keystone comedy, "Two Jolly Tars." Mr. Kitchingham caters well for the popular taste.

Mr. Catley did good business at the Palladium at Easter time with "A Cigarette Maker's Romance." This was followed in the latter part of the week by "In the Hands of London Crooks," which was a powerful attraction. The supporting pictures included "Sea Eternal," which is very appropriate seeing that the Palladium is so close to the brink of the North Sea that in rough weather the waves touch its walls. This week "The Woman Thou Gavest" did "star" duty, and "Count Zarka" figured on the same list.

—There is no mistaking where the Olympia is, on account of the powerful searchlight, which, from the roof of the picture palace, throws its rays all over the town. The Easter special was "The Lure of London," and this week crowds have been seeing "Should a Woman Tell?" and "East is East." Amongst the recent successes at Mr. Will Catlin's cinema have been "To Save the King," "The Scapegrace," "Orders Under Seal" and "In the Sultan's Power." The Pathé cartoons and news films are also proving a welcome feature. Under its new management, the Olympia has now been opened about a month, and its success is already established. —Just a word regarding the Picture House, where Mr. Cardwell has had a successful Easter, with such films as "Power of Conscience," "Who Will Marry Mary," "His Wife's Affinity," "The Black Thirteen," "Wrong Flat" and "Medal of Honour."

Bridlington has been full of visitors this Easter, and the picture palaces have again reaped a harvest. Mr. J. Austin has had two notable pictures at the Picture House, these being "Madame Satan" and "The Escape of Jim Dolan."—Mr. Palmer, of the Royal Victoria Rooms, and Mr. W. Freeman, of the Picturedrome, Quay Road, also had attractive fare.

The Hull and County Film Agency, referred to above, also give picture exhibitions in the Public Rooms, Hornsea, and the programmes are always up to a high standard.

The Electric Cinema, at the Chanticleer Hall, Withernsea, has been a success during the winter months, and now that the visitors are beginning to go to the town, Mr. Stratford is getting ready for a doubly successful season.

I hear rumours regarding the establishment of a picture palace at Hedon, but of this I hope to say more at a later date.

Round Manchester and Liverpool.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MANCHESTER.

Few districts are better catered for in the way of picture theatres than that of Rochdale Road, and as a consequence competition, in some portions of it, is rather keen. The exceptionally fine weather, combined with the rival attraction of a fair, known locally as "The Wakes," were factors to be dealt with at the Blackley end, and in these circumstances attendances were not at all bad. The huge Blackley Empire, under the management of Mr. L. Boardman, who is ably assisted by Mr. E. Boardman, found "Give Us this Day" a picture of exceptional merit.

Later in the week great business was done with "In the Hands of London Crooks." This week crowded houses are the rule to see "The House of Temperley," another item of the programme being "The Chinese Death Thorn." Among many good bookings for the future "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" will be one of the earliest shown.

Mr. T. Hewitt, managing director of the Princess Picture Theatre, Conran Street, keeps his house in the front rank of those in the district. He spoke very highly of "Caprice," which formed the chief item in the first part of last week's programme. In the latter part, "The Lost Heir" and "Slave of His Past" were two dramas to please, apart from the comics, of which Mr. Hewitt believes in securing the best to be obtained. This week "Orders Under Seal" is causing no regrets, either to himself or the large audiences filling the Princess.

Mr. Arthur Sereno is a popular personality who has done wonders with the Queen's Park Picturedrome, Rochdale Road. He possesses an artistic temperament, combined with a keen discrimination and a colossal memory. These are all useful gifts for those engaged in the cinema business. With regard to pictures he informed me that "By the Cross" proved very successful on Good Friday, and last week he was doing as well as expected with "Napoleon" and "Heir of the Lagardères." This week "Orders Under Seal is the "star" picture, whilst great things are confidently expected when "In the Hands of London Crooks" is shown. The music is ably rendered by Mr. Potter, and a word of praise is due to Mr. Norman Stancliffe, the operator, for the way in which the pictures are presented.

There has recently been a change in the management of the Royal Cinema, Rochdale Road, Mr. James Reay, late of the Roy Picturedrome, Ashton Old Road, now being in change. Old in experience, if not in years, Mr Percy has the good wishes of all who know him. As is usual in the case of one of Mr. Rhodes' houses, excellent business is being done, and the entertainment provided well suited the audience. Last week "Flames of Vengeance" went well; also "Trapped" and "Whimsical Threads of Destiny." One of the most satisfactory films shown recently was "Curse of Greed." This week the principal item on a good all-round programme is "Black Gang."

Mr. Montanini, at the Coliseum, reports having experienced a very busy and successful Easter. The entertainment provided was, as usual, full of variety and good pictures. The house is one of the few in the district providing a daily change—a novelty which appears to be appreciated. This week a few of the most important films being shown are "Treasures on Earth," "The Master Crook," "Thor," "Love or a Throne," and "The Water War."

Last week the Shaftesbury, Stockport Road, scored a success with "Golden Pathway" and "The Filly," whilst "Stolen Papers" and "Lure of Gold" are the chief attractions at the present time. Next week "Antique Brooch" is expected to fulfil anticipations. —The Alhambra, Rochdale Road, over the destinies of which Mr. Phil Herman presides, was running "The She Wolf" last week. Persons over sixty years of age are admitted free to matinées.

"Napoleon" was shown last week at the Globe, Thomas Street, Cheetham Hill, with an explanatory lecture delivered by Mr. Will Phillips. "The Wastrel," on Saturday, proved a strong attraction.

LIVERPOOL.

Mr. C. M. Riby, of the Wavertree Picturedrome, had a strenuous day on Bank Holiday, with two matinées and two evening performances, all of which were well attended. The building stands back from the main road, and on each side of the approach a well-kept flower garden is to be found. This, even at the present time of year, forms a bright illustration of how a man's hobby may be turned to advantage, but a little later, as a bower of roses, the Picturedrome garden will be one of the "sights" of the district. All know Mr. Riby, the man of many parts, vast experience and infinite resource. He was absolutely the first exhibitor of moving pictures in Liverpool, and has had a varied career as an actor, besides being for years one of Oswald Stoll's managers at the Cardiff Empire. At the Wavertree Picturedrome Mr. Riby gives an entertainment consisting of eight good pctures. Of these, last week, "Through Fire and Water" was the principal, and this week "Hard Cash" takes first place.

The Premier, Smithdown Road, manages to secure a good share of whatever business is going. Mr. Byland is wise in securing such an accomplished pianist, the pieces selected and the way in which they are rendered being a distinct feature of the entertainment. As for pictures, he is a past master in securing the right "stuff." A continuous performance is given, with matinées on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, the latter, according to usual custom, being devoted to the children. This week the principal pictures are "The Cameo Tragedy," "Auld Lang Syne," "Romance of Erin" and "Elise."

The Sefton Park Picturedrome is doing as well as any other house in the neighbourhood, but Mr. Harry Hunter is not one to shout about it. Like most practical and earnest men of business, he posssess a modest temperament that avoids publicity. Like both the gentlemen mentioned in the preceding paragraphs, he, too, has had a long and varied experience of the business, and keeps together the connection in the immediate neighbourhood. Last week "The Shattered Crown" and "Blind Fate" were the two stars in a good varied programme, whilst this week the chief attraction is "Daughter of the Hills."

The Grand Cinema, in Smithdown Road, experienced a record in the way of business on Easter Monday. Referring to past successes, Mr. Stewart, the manager, informed me that premier honours were still with "Sixty Years a Queen," after which second place was scored by "David Copperfield," whilst "Harper Mystery" also went very well. At the time of my visit, the Saturday matinée was in full swing, the children being highly entertained with "Broncho Billy's Xmas Dinner." Last week "The Fighters of the Plain" was the most important film shown. This week two pictures of which great things are expected, viz., "Old Curiosity Shop" and "The Wastrel," are on the bill.

The Palais de Luxe, Lime Street, had, last week, "The Albion Dance Film," a review of ancient and modern dances, exclusive to that theatre, supported by "Two Generations."

Quite a number of new picture theatres are projected or under way in Liverpool and district. The Majestic Picture House, just off London Road, is nearing completion, and looks like being a handsome addition to the list.

"THE BIOSCOPE" PARLIAMENT.

Readers are invited to express their Opinions upon any subject of General Interest.

Correspondence submitted for publication must be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith. Anonymous letters will be promptly consigned to the Waste Paper Basket. Publication of a letter must not be taken to imply that the views expressed are endorsed by the Editor.

BLACKPOOL AND DISTRICT CINEMATOGRAPH EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of THE BIOSCOPE.

SIR,—I notice in your report of the Executive Committee meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association on page 63 of your issue of April 2nd last, that reference is made to the Blackpool and District Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association as follows: "A letter was submitted from Mr. W. F. Jury in reference to a letter he had received from a gentleman purporting to be hon. secretary of the Blackpool and District Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association. The Secretary was instructed to reply that such an organisation was unknown to the Committee, and had no connection with the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, and that exhibitors would be duly notified."

It is a fact that the Blackpool and District Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association is unknown to the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association—as yet no overture has been made for affiliation—so far it is perfectly in order. We, however, strongly resent the caustic ending of the paragraph "that exhibitors would be duly notified." The meaning of this no doubt is that members of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association are to be informed that we are not connected with that body, but by not explicitly stating so, the phrase amounts to a "warning" to the Trade in general that we are something to be "guarded against."

I am directed by the members of the Blackpool Association, which comprises the theatres as named at the foot hereof, to solicit your aid by the medium of your journal to inform the Trade to be very cautious in any movements they may be tempted to make towards us without first ascertaining our status (and this can easily be done, as most of us are well known to the leading provincial renters), and to record our grateful appreciation of the advertisement unconsciously accorded us by the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, and finally to respectfully advocate to the latter-mentioned body that whenever they are dealing with a matter which they are cognisant will receive publicity to pay minute attention to the composition thereof.

It is hoped, Sir, that you will favour us by publishing this letter in your next issue, and I am to thank you in anticipation.—Yours, etc.,

For Blackpool and District Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, WILL SHAW,
Secretary.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" was responsible for crowded houses at the Thorpe End Picture House last week, and was received with great enthusiasm. Mr. Cox also showed much enterprise in booking the "Grand National." This week "Club of the Black Mask" and "The Chinese Death Thorn" are the features.—At the King's Picture House, "Amidst Raging Beasts" and "The Clue of the Broken Finger" were very popular.

NORTHERN NOTES.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

All the cinematograph theatres in Newcastle-on-Tyne were opened on Good Friady, and on that day, as well as throughout the Easter holidays, excellent business was done. Especially popular were the continuous performances, though the majority of the other halls ran special matinées, which, with the double evening performances, made their entertainments practically continuous. In arranging the programmes the holiday spirit was kept prominently in mind, and some first-class films were on view in different parts of the city.

Messrs. Baker Bros. had a phenomenal run at the Gaiety Theatre, Nelson Street, with "Give Us This Day." This was a sufficiently good booking to warrant its retention for the whole week, and it filled the house at each exhibition. "Harvest of Sin" was an admirable backing to the longer production, and prominent amongst the comedies was "Because of a Hat." There was a good variety turn in addition, and the news pictures.

The new orchestra at the Grainger Picture Theatre was a powerful holiday attraction, and the picture programme selected by Mr. Barry Rayne was full of interest. "The Lure of Gold" and "A Friend in Need" were a couple of the leading dramas for the first part of the week, and the comedies, always an important item in a continuous show, included "Snakeville's New Doctor" and "Mike Murphy's Dream of Love and Riches." "The Filly" was the speciality from Thursday onwards, with "The Engineer's Revenge," "Roaring Bill," and other films which were bound to please, and did please, to fill up the bill.

Further along Grainger Street, Mr. Crossley Taylor, at the Empire Cinema, drew enthusiastic audiences with "Captain Ellesmere, V.C.," and "Caprice," as exclusives, together with a capable selection of first releases. His idea of engaging a ladies' orchestra has proved a great success, and the musical programmes constitute one of the things that can be included amongst the best features at the New Empire Cinema.

"The Man from the West" was shown under the best of conditions at the Westgate Road Picture House, and when the programme was changed in the middle of the week, Mr. F. R. Hodges substituted as the top-liner, "The Bird of Prey." The Picture House is most conveniently situated for visitors to the city, and its comfortable seats were eagerly sought after. Another strong booking at the Westgate Road theatre was "Spartacus."

Patrons of "pictures" residing in the West-end of the city had a great treat at the Brighton, where Mr. J. Coverdale Bell put on as an exclusive, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." This film has created a great reputation for itself in the north, and shown, as it was, under the best of conditions at Brighton, it was the means of keeping the booking office fully employed whilst the theatre was open. Earlier in the week there had been another great show, which included both "The Witch of Salem" and "The Antique Brooch."

The Easter programme provided by Mr. W. M. Patterson at the Scala, Heaton, for his continuous evening performance, which, by the way, has turned out to be a most successful innovation, started with "Antony and Cleopatra." "A Hunger Strike" was screened with entire success in the second portion of the week.

Another first-class show to which the Heaton residents had recourse was that arranged by Mr. P. J. Lehmann, at the Heaton Electric. He had "The Ring and the Rajah" on first release, and this thrilling play was the subject of some tip-top Press notices, which gave it a good send-off. "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" was screened in the second programme, and there were a couple of variety turns to enhance the enjoyment provided by a good run of films.

In the same district, Mr. Edward Perman had as top-liners at the Minerva, "The Land of Dead Things" and "The Broken Melody"; at the Bamborough "The Wreck" found further acceptance; "Unto the Weak" was one of several star items shown at the Sun; Mr. G .T. Edminson made a big hit with "Orders Under Seal" at the Brinkburn; and Mr. George Bessford had, as usual, a most attractive show at the Picturedrome.

The Queen's Hall, Northumberland Street, continues to win favour, and visitors there have nothing but praise for the entertainment provided for their delectation by Mr. F. W. Wolters. The orchestra, too, is thought a lot of. "The Eleventh Commandment," "The Expert's Secret," "The Chinese Death Thorn" and "The Blinded Heart" were amongst the chief dramatic numbers, and there were a number of laughable comedies, with travel pictures and the "Pathé Gazette" in addition. "David Garrick" is the current speciality.

By the kind invitation of Mr. John H. Fenwick, manager of the Shipcote, Gateshead, a large number of the Boy Scouts in the district attended there to witness a run of pictures of peculiar interest to them. Amongst others was a film of the local Scouts' parade and "A Day at the Boy Scouts' Farm. "The Harper Mystery" was also on the screen. In the middle of the week, "Sixty Years a Queen" was shown to crowded houses, and it would appear that this film is going strong for creating a record in regard to the number of persons witnessing it. This week the "British Army" film is being screened, and arrangements have been made for the members of the 9th Battalion Durham Light Infantry (Territorials) to attend the hall.—At the Coatsworth Hall, Gateshead, Mr. Charles E. Linney had "Seven Months' Big Game Hunting."

Mr. Charles E. Linney had "Lure of London" and "The Return of Helen Redmond" as his star films at the Coatsworth, Gateshead, and the supporting films were as varied as they were formidable in number. Here, like most other theatres in the district, one or two good artistes providing interludes have a great attraction for the audiences.

COMPANY MEETING.

The Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited.

INCREASED PROFITS.

The Fourth Annual General Meeting of the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, was held yesterday at the Westminster Palace Hotel, Sir William Bass, Bart., in the Chair.

The Secretary (Mr. James H. Macaulay) having read the notice convening the meeting,

The Managing Director (Mr. R. T. Jupp) said:—

Ladies and Gentlemen, I have pleasure in submitting to you the Fourth Annual Report, covering the twelve months ending January 31st last. At our last General Meeting an issue of 200,000 £1 7½ per cent. "B" Preference Shares was authorised, and 180,000 of these were taken up during the year. The whole of the Debentures have now been redeemed at a cost of £55,000, and the fixed Mortgages upon the Glasgow and Nottingham premises have been reduced by a further sum of £4,500. The New Picture House at Edinburgh, which is situated opposite the Scott Monument in Princes Street, was opened in October last, and is considered one of the most beautiful in existence. The Portsmouth Theatre was opened in December. We have recently purchased the Freehold of the whole block of premises of which this Picture House at present forms about one-fourth. Our Glasgow Theatre was reopened just before the commencement of the financial year, but owing to the delay in obtaining delivery of marble required from abroad for the construction of the foyer, we were unable to complete the alterations until about the middle of the year. This Picture House, with its magnificent marble court and other attractions, has been visited by members of the trade from America and the Continent, and is generally considered to be the finest Cinematograph Theatre in the world. As stated in my last report, we obtained a long lease of premises adjoining our Picture House in Grafton Street, Dublin, for the purpose of increasing the size of that Theatre, which was closed early in June for the necessary alterations. Unfortunately, when the alterations were within three weeks of completion the Dublin strike broke out, and we were unable to complete it until the strike ended, which meant the Theatre being closed during the whole of the autumn and Christmas seasons. The Newcastle Picture House, which is one of the largest and best owned by the Company, is almost completed, and the date of opening has been arranged for May 6th. We have purchased the freehold of the site upon which the main part of this Theatre stands, together with two large shops fronting Pilgrim Street. Many minor improvements have been carried out to the Theatres and Cafés, and the whole of the Company's premises, plant, machinery, fixtures, and furniture have been maintained in a thorough state of repair and renewal.

The most important event of the year was the formation by our Company in January last of Associated Provincial Picture Houses, Limited.

In the opinion of the Directors, and I think of everyone who has studied the question, the most complete and lasting success in this ever-growing business is to be obtained by combining the management and control of a considerable number of good Theatres in different parts. In this way many advantages are obtained which cannot be secured in the case of individual theatres or small groups. Experts can be employed to control the different branches of the work in a proper and systematic manner; economy is secured by spreading the cost of management over a number of houses, and by increased buying facilities, whilst the Theatres are placed in a very strong position in respect to both the supply and cost of special and exclusive films, a matter the importance of which it is impossible to exaggerate. It was only after most careful and thorough investigating that we came to the conclusion that there was a distinct opening in many of the large Cities and Towns throughout the British Isles for high-class Theatres, approximating to our own particular type. We secured a number of sites, each situated in the most central position of its respective city or town, and, in view of this opening and the advantage to be obtained by the combination, the Directors decided to form the new Company.

As your Company is largely interested in the London Film Company, Limited, I must make a passing reference to it. The establishing of a film-producing business is one of the most difficult things possible, for, being a new enterprise, experienced experts are few and hard to find. I am, however, pleased to say that we are surmounting these difficulties, and the London Film Company is producing films which, for artistic merit and interest compare favourably with the productions of any other firm in the world. I am glad to state that an undoubted improvement has taken place during the year in the quality of the film supply. A large number of new manufacturing firms has arisen, both in this country and abroad, many of whom are producing excellent films, and as a result new ground is being opened up and a larger variety of subjects is becoming available, whilst the competition amongst manufacturers is effectually counteracting any tendency towards the raising of prices. The net profit from the Theatres amounted to £60,950, which with the profit derived from the promotion of The London Film Company, makes £65,050 net profit for the year, an increase of £4,206. The sum brought forward was £1,058, giving a total of £67,008 available, which has been apportioned as follows:—The interest upon Preference Shares, paid and accrued, amounts to £12,532, whilst £12,500 has already been paid in interim dividends upon Ordinary Shares. £5,000 has been allowed for depreciation of furniture and plant, and £5,000 for depreciation of properties. The whole of the cost of placing the "B" Preference Shares, amounting to £13,358, and the premium payable upon redemption of the Debentures—£5,000—have been written off. The bonus to Debenture Holders and the Trustees' fees amount to £886, and £5,000 has ben placed to general reserve, leaving a balance of £8,631, out of which it is proposed to pay a final dividend of 7 per cent. upon the Ordinary Shares, making a total of 20 per cent. for the year, and leaving a balance of £1,131 to be carried forward.

The total sums placed to general reserve and written off for depreciation of properties and effects now totals £50,000, whilst an amount of about £30,000 has been invested outside the Company, partly in Trustee securities and partly in associated undertakings.

I am glad to state that there is every indication that our next balance sheet will show a large increase in profits, and a still greater increase in the sum available for distribution or allocation to reserve. On the one hand we shall have an amount of £11,000 more available next year, owing to the fact that the charges in connection with Debentures and the Issue of "B" Preference Shares will not recur, and on the other hand we shall have the results of the new and enlarged theatres. Moreover, you will be pleased to learn that the business of the theatres during the curent year has been better than in any previous year, and that the weekly receipts from theatres and cafés have shown large and regular increases.

The report and accounts were then put to the meeting, and passed unanimously.

BREEZY BLACKPOOL.

(NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Blackpool, the "Brighton of the North," enjoyed a record Easter last week. Never in its history have so many people visited the town, and the picture houses were patronised in enormous numbers.

The management of the Imperial, in Warbreck Road, has recently changed hands, and the new manager, Mr. Arthur Sellars, comes direct from the Hightown Picture Pavilion, Manchester, with an excellent record in the cinema business. Mr. Sellars believes in pictorial advertisements to secure his patrons, and intends to cater with judicious taste for all who visit this charming and cosy theatre, and the screening of the best films is having the desired result, the star pictures last week being "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" and "Until the Sea." This week, and for the first time in Blackpool, the exclusive, "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," is being screened to packed houses. The Mayor and Mayoress of Blackpool have promised their patronage, and will attend one of the evening performances.

Mr. B. Blackburn, manager of the Princess Electric Theatre, on the North promenade, believes in revivals, and last week he again screened with great success, "Judith of Bethulia," this week's features being "The Wastrel" and "Yellow Jack," together with a good all-round programme.

As expected, the management of the Hippodrome did excellent business with the British Army film and there was a good representation of comedy pictures. This week "Down the Crater of Vesuvius" and "In the Grip of a Villain" is being projected. The Orpheus Comedy Trio supply the variety.

Mr. Beck scored a great success last week at the King Edward Central Drive, where "The Hour and the Man" was the chief attraction. The "Man from the West" was also much to the taste of the crowded houses. This week "The Terrible Alternative" is the star film and a future booking, "Dare-Devil Detective," should achieve good results. Mr. Beck is also manager of the Waterloo, in Waterloo Road, South Shore, where he caters for a select audience by always being to the fore with a good up-to-date programme. The screenings this week include "Good Little Devil," "Love's Sunset" and "How Flowers Awaken."

I was sorry to hear that Mr. W. F. Harper, manager of the Central Cinema on the Promenade, met with rather a nasty accident on his way to business one day last week, and which has since prevented him from attending to his duties. We all hope Mr. Harper may have a speedy recovery, and that we may shortly welcome him back. He can be proud of his staff who are working so loyally in his absence, and the performances are passing off without a single hitch or complaint. Few, if any, more attractive programmes have been submitted at this cosy theatre than that which I saw there this week. On the bill were "A Leap of Despair," "A Triumph of Strength," "Zigomar v. Nick Carter," "Black Sheep" and a good selection of comics, including "Love at Arms," "Count and Cowboy," etc. Next week, "Corsican Brothers," "Never Too Late to Mend" and "Ivanhoe" are the stars, and should draw good houses.

The Empire de Luxe, in St. George's Road, St. Anne's-on-Sea, managed by Mr. Frank Spring, is being well patronised. The films are excellent and well selected. Chief in last week's bill was "By His Father's Orders"—the feature this week being "Antony and Cleopatra." A full two and a half hour's programme is always provided here.—It would be superfluous to enlarge upon the merits of "Moths," which film Mr. Wilkinson had at the Public Hall, St. Anne's.

At the Hippodrome, Henry Street, Lytham, Mr. E. F. Glass, the manager, continues very busy, good houses always being found here. Recent films screened have been "The Dare-Devil Mountaineers," "The Golden Pathway" and "A Cigarette Maker's Romance." Last week "Martin Numa" was the special attraction in a really first-class programme.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

This Eastertide the cinema theatres have been in greater demand than ever, and this notwithstanding nne weather. Easter Monday in particular the greatest difficulty was experienced in finding accommodation for all who were eager to gain admission. Large queues were to be seen everywhere, and a good harvest was reaped at every "house." Special Easter attractions were arranged, and some delightful pictures were on exhibition.

At the Cinedrome, Ebrington Street, Plymouth, I was particularly struck with the programmes provided by Mr. W. Linsdell. "The Clue of the Wax Vesta" added to his reputation. "Love's Sunset" was another exceptionally interesting drama, and rivetted close attention. There were several other attractive subjects, and not the least entertaining part of the programme were the illustrated songs by Mr. Eric Dean.

Mr. Charley Rundle did extraordinarily fine business at the Theatre Elite, Plymouth, and his entertainment well deserved it. "Fateful Watermark" and "Through the Sluice Gates" greatly appealed, a strong and exciting story. On the comic side "The Awakening of Snakeville" was more than a bit above the ordinary run of films of the kind. In mid-week Mr. Rundle introduced a new programme, which included "Quo Vadis?"

"The Battle of Elderbush Gulch" received a fine reception at the Belgrave, Mutley. Plenty of sensation was aroused by the submitting of "A Frontier Soldier of Fortune," while among other films was one of the "Mary" series.

At the popular de Luxe, Mr. Knowles spared no expense to provide a programme worthy of his reputation, and the result was packed audiences. The pictures were notable for their consistentlv good qualities, and among them might be mentioned "The Dilemma," "The Squire's Mistake," and "The Girl at the Lunch Counter." For the last three days of the week, the above was substituted by an equally good programme, which included "A Night at the Inn," His Wedding Bell" and "Lieut. Pimple and the Stolen Submarine." Despite the big demand for admission on Easter Monday, Mr. Knowles displayed characteristic tact in ensuring the comfort of his audiences.

Mr. Frost, at the Tivoli, Devonport, presented a strong bill-of-fare, embodying drama and comedy of a well-chosen type. The business done fulfilled expectations, and among his more notable films were "The Ghost," and an enthralling Irish drama, "A Love of '64," and "The Sale of a Heart."

THE SOUTHAMPTON SHOWS.

Most of the local picture halls report a continuance of the good business done during the holidays. When I looked in at the Atherley Cinema during the week-end I found a packed house and quite a long queue of people waiting for admission, the attraction being "Sapho." On Monday Mr. W. Buck screened "King of the Air," and the third of the W. W. Jacob series, "The Third String," will be shown to-day (Thursday).

While chatting with Mr. Appley, manager of the Carlton, I discovered that he is a champion swimmer. He has twice swum from Southsea to Cowes and possesses two life-saving medals. Mr. Appley has also travelled in the Transvaal and in Australia, and did a little in the picture line at Sydney. During last week he had two fine films on the programme at the Carlton in "In Mid-Atlantic" and "Heroes of the Mine." On Monday "Satan" was screened, and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" starts to-day.

Few picture houses can boast of having two such accomplished musicians as Miss Gloria Lucette and Mr. Bernard Vincent, who delight the patrons of the Shirley Cinema with the best class of music. Their selections, moreover, are most appropriate to the films. Mr. Lewis has exclusives booked up to the end of June. "The Balkan Intrigue" and "In Peril of the Law" took remarkably well, and on Thursday "The Cry of the Blood" was screened. The principal item of Sunday's programme was "Jack, the Wolf." "The House of Temperley" commences to-day (Thursday), and among future bookings are "East Lynne" and "The Battle of Manila."

At the Shirley Electric Theatre Mr. Massey has been showing "The Cup Final Mystery" and "When the Light Went Out" this week. "A Woman of the People" follows. "Should a Woman Tell?" was transferred to the Scala on Monday, and proved an equal attraction to the people of Bitterne Park and St. Denys.

The Portswood Palladium is keeping up its name for good exclusives. Messrs. Bacon and Hood screened "The Old Seadog" last week, and on Sunday "Beauty Unadorned" was featured. "The Duke's Talisman" followed on Monday, and the second programme includes "The Secret of the Ring."

Some very fine effects are produced by Mr. Turner at the Standard Electric Theatre, East Street, and they tend to make the pictures remarkably realistic. "Perils of the Sea" was presented exceptionally well last week-end, and was backed up by "The Bugle Call" and other good films. The features of Monday's programme were "A Fight for a Million" and "The Broken Melody."

The programmes submitted by Mr. Percy Lambert continue to give the utmost satisfaction. For instance, "Beauty Unadorned," "Through the Sluice Gates," "The Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night" and "Until the Sea" were included in that presented during the week-end. On Sunday the special films were "Diamond Cut Diamond," "Her Wedding Dress," and "A Woman's Revenge." The Keystone comedies are very popular. "Cohen Saves the Flag" was shown on Monday, together with some good dramas in "The Cast of the Die," "The Sacrifice" and "Reinstated."

Great interest was aroused by the week-end special at the Kingsland, "Always Tell Your Wife," which features Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss in the leading rôles. Mr. J. Lang submitted a very laughable comedy on Sunday in "Teaching His Wife a Lesson." Another taking film was "A Question of Light." This week the features are "A Daughter of the East" and "The Witch of Salem."

PROJECTORS AND FIRE-PREVENTION.

The number of honours and laudatory expressions directed to the Ernemann Apparatus Company over their standard projector tend to make one think that a new pattern machine would but be superorogatory, yet they have just introduced a new model, which we had the pleasure of seeing in actual use at that favourite London resort, the West-end Cinema. Needless to add, a splendid picture was shown, but we were more than merely interested when we noticed its wonderful steadiness and definition.

The "Jubilee" model, so called in consequence of this being the jubilee year of the firm's existence, is, as will be seen from the illustration, of the totally enclosed pattern, yet it is the acme of accessibility and remarkably easy and silent in operation. It is, moreover, claimed that it is impossible to fire any portion of the film other than that in the gate aperture, and as we noted, there are no loose running portions, the whole film running through enclosed and dust-proof channels. Damage by careless operation would be, we should imagine, quite an impossibility with this model, and an important feature is that the machine cannot be started up until the door of the projector is closed. The mechanism can be seen running through a glazed aperture of ample size, and the film through gauze openings in the spool boxes. A new design and position of the shutter makes for increased economy of current consumption, while another feature is a "free wheel" device for the driving handle. The model is a splendid piece of mechanism, and well worth the inspection of all interested in the business, and the Ernemann Company should, by its introduction, greatly enhance their already excellent reputation.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

Return of Jack Bellew.

Mr. R. T. Thornby has written a powerful drama, which gives the opportunity for some fine acting, and introduces scenes on board ship and at sea which are exceedingly picturesque, and most striking in their photographic qualities. Two young sailors, Jack and Bill, in love with the same girl, sail away together on the same schooner. While engaged in trimming sail at the end of the bowsprit, Bill is overcome by a sudden temptation to rid himself of his rival. Jack disappears into the sea, and Bill raises no alarm until long after there is any possibility of rendering assistance. He returns to port and continues to press his suit with Alice, but he soon finds that his crime has been incurred in vain, for the girl refuses to listen to him. His life is rendered almost unbearable to him, for the figure of his former comrade is constantly appearing before him and filling him with unspeakable terror.

One day the schooner, encountering very severe weather, is driven far out of its course, and runs for shelter under the lee of a little-known and uninhabited island. On leaving the next morning, Bill, at the helm, is suddenly confronted with the pale and emaciated figure of his former mate. Imagining that he sees his ghost, Bill shrinks back in terror, and falls overboard.

The figure is that of Jack in the flesh, who, managing to cling to a mass of driftwood, has been living for some time on this desolate island, and has clambered on board the first vessel which has come within reach. He returns home in his old ship, and is received with joy by the girl who has cherished his memory and never despaired of seeing him again. It is a powerful little drama, and well played by Mr. Jack Mower and the author Mr. R. T. Thornby as Jack and Bill respectively. The scenes, which are chiefly taken on the schooner, are picturesque in the extreme, and the photography is perfect. (Vitagraph Company. Released May 18th. Length 1,000 ft.)

The House of Fear.

This is an Edgar Allan Poe-like romance of an imaginative and unusual nature. It represents an attempt—which is very largely successful—to realise or suggest numerous situations and ideas with which few film producers hitherto have tried to deal. To indicate the horror of unseen or half-seen things, when limited to dumb action as a means of expression, is a very difficult thing, and most of the pictures of this nature that we have had up to the present have been almost ludicrously ineffective. "The House of Fear," however, far from being ludicrous, is a singularly strong and convincing drama, which is notable for its fine acting and its brilliantly clever photographic effects. Ghosts on the film are apt, in ordinary cases, to be little more terrifying and nearly as substantial-looking as the disappointing spirits of the ordinary stage. But in "The House of Fear" we have real ghosts if the phrase be not paradoxical—creatures who swell out from the air and fade away again without any apparent trickery or deception, and whose appearance is both mystifying and impressive. Of course, we have all been taught to know "how it is done," but, apart from one's previous knowledge, there is certainly no evidence of mechanical illusion in the present film. As an example of extraordinarily finished and ingenious camera work we have seen few pictures to compare with it.

Remarkable as it is in this respect, however, the film is by no means merely a sort of "ghost show." Its story is novel, striking, and almost entirely probable (if one is willing to admit as probable the materialisation of spirits). It is, as we have said, admirably acted, and its staging is a characteristic example of the Lubin Company's best studio work. It should create no small impression upon the minds of all who see it. (Lubin film. Released May 18th. Length 2,053 ft.)

On Secret Service.

For the purposes of this excellent melodrama the Lubin Company, for whose enterprise no undertaking is to immense, appear to have "engaged" a large portion of the American Navy. By what argument or at what price they secured the use of these battleships, together with their guns, crews, and commanders, it is not for us to guess, but it is certain that the resulting spectacle, as recorded in the film, is as impressive as it is interesting and realistic. It is worthy of note, also, that the theme of the film, which deals with a war between Mexico and the United States, may, unfortunately, be regarded as prophetic, and this fact alone, lending the picture, as it does, considerable topical value, should greatly increase its attractiveness for the public. The story of love and political intrigue which is staged against the spectacular naval scenes, and which was doubtless introduced to lend the latter human interest, is neither more nor less improbable than most tales of the kind. It is, however, quite sufficiently strong and effective in itself, and it serves as a peg upon which to hang numerous episodes of the most sensational and impressive nature imaginable. Few better naval melodramas have been seen on the screen, and none in which the spectacular side was more fully and splendidly developed. "On Secret Service" should prove immensely popular wherever it is shown. (Lubin film. Released May 11th. Length 2,060 ft.)

Sammy is Too Cautious.

It is rarely enough nowadays that one sees a thoroughly first-rate comic film. The preparation of this kind of picture, once studied so assiduously by producers, seems lately to have been neglected completely, or else relegated to incompetent workmen, in spite of the fact that the public shows itself as ready as ever to take pleasure in such films. There are, however, exceptions to this melancholy and regrettable rule, one of these being an unusually excellent and original little picture by the Urban-Eclipse Company, entitled "Sammy is Too Cautious." The producer of Urban-Eclipse films is one of the few people who have not allowed their interest in lengthy "features" to divert the whole of their attention from the humbler, but quite as necessary and desirable, "comic." This firm, in consequence, may always be relied upon for a really good humorous film of the type so long identified with the cinematograph — and one could desire no better example of their work in this direction than the picture under notice.

"Sammy is Too Cautious" abounds with ingenious trickeries and novel pieces of fun. In form, it is a wild and wonderfully stage-managed "chase," introducing, incidentally, some striking Zoo pictures, including a close glimpse of a full-grown lion, and set, for the most part, amidst very beautiful natural scenery. The diversity and charm of its scenes, in fact, almost permit one to describe it as a "scenic comic." Of the skill of its leading performer, "Sammy," it is unnecessary to speak, since his genius for irresistible drollery has long been famous. (Urban Trading Company, Limited. Released June 1st. Length 345 ft.)

From the Beyond.

This very interesting and unusual film treats in an intelligent manner with the subject of scientific occultism, which is made to form the basis of a novel and effective drama. Dealing largely, as it does, with spirit photography and the materialisation of spirits, the story offers considerable opportunities for clever camera work, and these opportunities have been made the most of throughout. It is true that the plot verges upon the improbable in places, and it is not altogether certain that every one of the theories of which it gives ingenious ocular demonstrations would be accepted by Theosophists. But there is nothing wantonly absurd in even its strangest episodes, and even to the most confirmed sceptic the film offers food for serious thought. The American Standard Company have shown real originality and imagination more than once before, and the present production will add considerably to their reputation for clever and unusual work. Apart from its novelty, moreover, it is a thoroughly excellent story, admirably acted and carefully staged, which is well above the average as a drama pure and simple. "From the Beyond" is a film which certainly deserves to be seen, and with many audiences it is likely to create something of a sensation. It should be widely booked. (American Standard film. Eclair Company, Limited. Released May 28th. Length 2,187 ft.)

The Midnight Wedding.

No one knows better how to cater for the popular taste than Mr. Walter Howard, as is proved once more by the delighted audiences still flocking to his latest success, "The Rosary." It is, therefore, in the natural order of events that such widely popular works should be adapted to the screen, and the success of the film version of "The Midnight Wedding" justifies the expectation of further films from the same source.

Mr. Howard's plays contain all the elements which the public look for in drama. We follow with keen interest the doings of grand dukes, princes and princesses, whose exalted station does not render them immune from adventures which stir the pulse and quicken the blood, played amidst surroundings giving full scope for military display and courtly ceremonial.

This excellent romantic melodrama, which enjoyed a long run at the Lyceum Theatre, is too well-known to need any further description of its plot. The original story is closely followed, and full advantage has been taken of the possibilities of the camera to heighten considerably the picturesque details of scenery and accessories.

The acting is of the kind by which drama of this class is most effectively presented, and the action is carried through with exhilarating dash and vigour. Everybody works with heart and soul, and the result is a good, sound, healthy melodrama of the kind that will always be dear to the hearts of the public. (Moss Empires, Limited. Released May 11th. Length 3,400 ft.)

The Fatal Enchantress.

Powerful, gloomy, and in some respects almost terrible, this tragic drama of passion is far removed from the ordinary melodrama to which its title rather suggests that it is allied. Less a play, as regards conventional form, than a human document or a detailed study in abnormal psychology, it will inevitably appear to some people a somewhat unpleasant picture, but this fact will not abate from the strength of its appeal or lessen its attractiveness in the eyes of those who like to behold representations of life as it is. The film is an adaptation, or "visualisation," of a celebrated novel, "Le Glu," by M. Jean Richepin, of the Académie Francaise, and having been carried out with great skill by a French company, it is essentially French both in conception and in realisation. Roughly speaking, it deals with the history of a courtesan and the evolution of her character from the time when, as a young girl shut away with her parents in a quiet country village, she entices an old doctor into marrying her, regarding the alliance merely as a means of escape from her confined rustic existence. Vain, cruel, and passionate, she quickly shatters her husband's hopes of happiness, and having been turned away by him as an unfaithful wife, she finds her true metier in Paris, where she lives a fast life surrounded by lovers. Finally, whilst on a holiday in Brittany, where to satisfy a wanton caprice, she takes away a fisher lad from the peasant girl to whom he is engaged, she meets a dreadful fate at the hands of the Breton boy's mother, who, with the grim savagery typical of the people of this sombre and primitive district, murders her with a mallet.

It would be difficult to praise too highly the remarkable study of a bad woman's character given by Mdlle. Mistinguett in the title role. It is true that she has every opportunity to render this study as complete and graphic as possible, since the film includes scene after scene more or less irrelevant to the action of the piece, but introduced merely for the sake of character analysis. Her performance, nevertheless, is a very notable one, and if only for its sake, the picture would be worth seeing for those to whom vivid characterisation is of interest. Also in the cast is M. Henri Krauss, who has been responsible in the past for some of the most masterly performances ever seen on the screen, and who contributes in the present film a wonderfully finished and pathetic picture of the old doctor, whose belated venture into matrimony, after years of peaceful bachelorhood, terminates so disastrously. Another remarkable character sketch is given by M. Capellani as the fisher boy, whose passions, aroused by the sensual woman visitor to his quiet country home, flame with such mad and uncontrollable fierceness.

Altogether, although it is certainly not a film for babes and sucklings, nor even for every adult audience, "The Fatal Enchantress" must be considered a notable production, and one which in many respects is of high artistic value. Those for whom the gradual and detailed development of character has no attraction may find it rather long-drawn out in places, but on the other hand it contains many very beautiful glimpses of the wild and picturesque Brittany coast which will delight them. And as far as acting is concerned, it is some time since we have seen a finer picture. (Alerta Exclusive Film Company, Limited.)

Pimple's Potted Plays.

The inimitable and only Pimple shows no sign of losing any of his irresistible spontaneity and humour, in spite of the very strenuous life he leads, and his latest eccentricities are of the highest order of burlesque. Lieut. Pimple, R.N., entrusted with secret dispatches by the Lords of the Admiralty, displays an amount of energy and invention which should turn even the hero of a Drury Lane drama green with envy. Pimple believes in hiding precious documents in the receptacle which is least open to suspicion, and that which contains the sealed orders bears on its cork the red seal of a justly celebrated firm. He is thus able to carry his dispatches through the ranks of his enemies and bear them safely to their destination in Downing Street, a truly imposing edifice occupied by a very wonderful collection of Ministers. Pimple's surprises and disguises are admirably worked and full of real humour. The scene in which he is followed by foreign spies, who disappear mysteriously whenever he turns round, is in the true spirit of burlesque, and a perfect satire on many similar scenes of detective romance.

"The Battle of Gettysownbak" shows him as a wandering tramp, telling a stirring story in verse of the true "Dagonet" quality in return for copious tankards of ale. Pimple is seen as a callow youth enlisting in a Highland regiment, and the peculiar methods by which he rises to a commanding position in the army are amusing in the extreme.

For genuine fun the Pimple plays stand alone among English comic films, and seem to improve with every new subject. (Phœnix Film Agency. "Pimple's Sealed Orders," released May 25th. "The Battle of Gettysownbak," released May 18th. Length 820 ft.)

The Mystery of the Black Domino.

At the commencement of this film we are shown two men seated before a curious painting, which they are discussing. One of them commences to tell his friend the story of the picture, and as he does so, it is visualised before our eyes. The idea is not altogether a new one, but it is always an effective method of "framing" a film story, and it is quite successfully carried out in the present case.

The history of the picture as related in the film is both unusual and dramatic. It contains plenty of striking situations and allows full scope for the introduction of clever and striking photographic effects, for which this film is particularly notable. In certain respects, it is perhaps somewhat far-fetched, but not more so than the majority of films of this class. It would be improved by a little careful editing and by the addition of a few more sub-titles (attentions which will doubtless have been already bestowed upon it by the time this notice appears), but save for these points we can find nothing in the film which is not praiseworthy. The photography, as we have said, is both beautiful and skilful, and constitutes a significant demonstration of the value which may be added to almost any film by artistic and imaginative camera work. An interesting, and in some respects a novel, drama, "The Mystery of the Black Domino" is quite worth seeing. (James Starr Exclusive Film Company. Three reels.)

The Knave of Hearts Club.

The first-rate film, which we understand to be the first of a connected series, introduces us to a new character, of the robber-hero type who, if his subsequent exploits equal in excitement and powerful dramatic qualities his initial adventure as recorded in the present picture, is likely to become very rapidly one of the most popular figures yet introduced to us by the cinematograph. Rocambole, or "The Terror of Paris," the gentleman in question, is a youthful apache of the most desperate and daring nature imaginable. Frankly speaking, this first chapter in the history of his doings leaves one rather in doubt as to his creator's intention towards him. One cannot quite decide whether he is to be the villain of the piece or the desperado hero. The film is so perfectly presented, however, with so much realism of character-drawing and of incident, that it is possible Rocambole is to be, unlike the majority of such film figures, neither wholly good nor wholly bad, but just a vividly human creature whose prototype might quite easily exist in actual life.

It is the sympathy and the naturalness with which the various characters in this drama are drawn that give the latter one of its most attractive aspects. Hitherto it has usually seemed necessary to producers that "kings of crime" on the screen should be wholly impossible personages, without ordinary human traits to lend them credibility. But Rocambole, in spite of his depravity, his callousness, and his fertile genius for wrongdoing, is nevertheless a very real person, with a weaker, gentler side, in whom one can feel quite genuine interest, apart from his adventures.

To mention his adventures is to recall to one's mind all manner of thrilling deeds graphically depicted in the film. There is no need for us to retail the story of the latter, when there exists an admirably written synopsis giving the full history in detail, but it should be pointed out how greatly this particular story transcends in ingenuity, originality, and effectiveness the average tale of the kind.

The film is staged, both as regards interiors and exteriors, with the utmost care and appropriateness, and special attention has obviously been given to the selection of the cast, which is consistently excellent even as regards the smallest parts. We regret that we have not the names of the various artistes appearing in the picture, but it would be unfair to omit a word of praise for the exceedingly able performances given by the gentlemen who play respectively Rocambole; the counter-rogue, André de Kergaz; the dying uncle, Kermoronet, a brief, but brilliant study; and for the ladies who undertake the characters of the gentle Jeanne; the beautiful, unhappy Louise; and the villainous old wife of Nicola, the bargeman.

The film terminates in a manner sufficiently inconclusive to make one keenly eager for the next instalment, whilst being sufficiently complete in itself to form a satisfactory entertainment on its own account. As a study of criminal types, drawn from the scum of Paris, nothing finer could be desired, and as a melodrama full of exciting action it is equally successful. "Rocambole" is a picture which will appeal to the highest class of audience by its artistry, as fully as to the lowest class by its dramatic sensationalism. No better film of the kind has ever been produced. (Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited.)

Appearances are Often Delusive.

Here is a delightfully bright and novel little farce which is reminiscent in character of those vastly amusing sketches with which the late Mark Melford used to delight music-hall audiences, but which is entirely original as far as its plot is concerned. It is rare indeed to find a comic film which depends upon something more than a knockabout chase for its humour, and one is, therefore, all the more ready to welcome the present picture, which is full of ingenious situations, cleverly contrived and effectively worked out. It is admirably acted in a brisk and breezy fashion by a small but select company, which includes a particularly funny "eccentric comedian," and although it is essentially a farcical trifle, it is played for the most part in quite a "straight" manner. Immensely entertaining, with just a trace of what is known as "spiciness," it should make a popular item in almost any programme. (Universal Film Company, Limited. Eiko film. Released May 25th. Length 1,000 ft.)

The Master of the Mine.

This is a powerful and stirring drama of a type which is peculiarly characteristic of some of the Vitagraph Company's best work, and which is produced by no other firm with such regularity and uniform excellence. It is based on a theme which has been made use of by many dramatists, the scorn of an aristocratic bride for her husband of humbler birth, and the gradual awakening of respect and love, when the finer qualities of the man are gradually recognised. As in the case of "The Ironmaster," in which Mr. and Mrs. Kendal made so great a reputation, the girl marries for wealth, and the man with the hope that his own love may meet with its reward after marriage. But Philip Berkow's wife learns later on that her father has benefited by an unexpected legacy, and she is persuaded to suggest a separation from her husband, her father feeling, somewhat late after the event, that she has needlessly sacrificed her social prestige. The interview takes place at a time when Philip is engaged in an altercation with his miners, who make demands which he is disinclined to concede. He coldly agrees to his wife's proposition, but they are interrupted by the alarming news that three of the miners, making an attempt to destroy the shaft, have been trapped by a fall of earth, and are in peril of their lives. Philip himself descends to their rescue, and succeeds in sending them to the surface, but he is himself entrapped and overcome by exhaustion. Unable to induce anyone to descend to his rescue, the shaft being now in a highly dangerous condition, the girl starts down alone, and with almost superhuman exertions succeeds in bringing her husband up in the bucket only just before an explosion takes place.

The story has a grip, and is played with intensity and power, notably by Mr. William D. Taylor and Miss Bertie Pitcairn, in the parts of husband and wife; while every subsidiary part receives careful treatment from a very strong company.

The mounting is on a very elaborate scale, and the scene of the catastrophe, though of necessity artificial, showing as it does the section of the shaft and tunnel, is admirably arranged and engrossing in its interest. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released June 1. Length 1,918 ft.)

The Price of the Necklace.

Stories dealing with vast speculations on the Stock Exchange are popular with American authors, and in this film Mr. Bannister Merwin has succeeded in conveying an idea of the tense excitement caused by a stupendous deal, combined with very strong human interest. It shows how Mrs. Lyons, a leader of the smart set of New York, induces her husband, a great financier, to provide her with a necklace of pearls valued at about £15,000. He is anxious to curb her extravagance, and it is partly, perhaps, to teach her a lesson that he decides to do as she suggests and operate the market that her whim may be gratified.

The chief scenes of the film are those showing how Lyons buys up the stock of a certain railway, having private information that at a certain date the news would leak out that it would not pay its dividend.

These scenes are exceedingly well arranged and played with a feverish excitement which is irresistibly communicated to the spectator. Lyons makes his profit and presents his wife with the necklace, but on the very evening that she wears it for the first time she is made to realise how much suffering and distress its acquirement has entailed on other people.

It is a powerful play, and conveys a useful lesson which would be more direct in its appeal if we were shown that Mrs. Lyons took some steps to alleviate the sufferings caused by her caprice.

The story affords considerable scope for the actors engaged; and Miss Miriam Nesbitt, who looks delightful in some exceedingly smart gowns, plays with great charm and distinction. Mr. Charles Ogle succeeds admirably in suggesting the iron inflexibility and cool level-headedness of the great financier, while the tensity of the play is greatly increased by the agents and clerks who are engaged in carrying out the schemes of the millionaire.

It is richly mounted, and the photography is excellent, the combined result being a film which is of strong interest and something out of the ordinary run. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released June 1st. Length 2,040 ft.)

CAUTION.

TO THE TRADE.

GENTLEMEN,

¶ You will receive in the Mails, from time to time, circular material on SAMSON and RICHELIEU. SAMSON, starring J. Warren Kerrigan, is one of the most pretentious productions made in Universal City or exploited by the Trans-Atlantic. The critics in America were unanimous in the opinion that it was a "screen document" or a visualised history and authentic as the Bible. "All the settings, the cast, and general staging are superlatively wonderful."

It is no small wonder to us, therefore, that others have attempted to make Capital out of our efforts. We wish to caution the legitimate showmen against these imitations. Before hiring either of the subjects we would suggest that you give them both your personal review. We are satisfied that comparison will not result to our disadvantage.

Beware also of RICHELIEU imitations. See both before booking.

Yours faithfully,

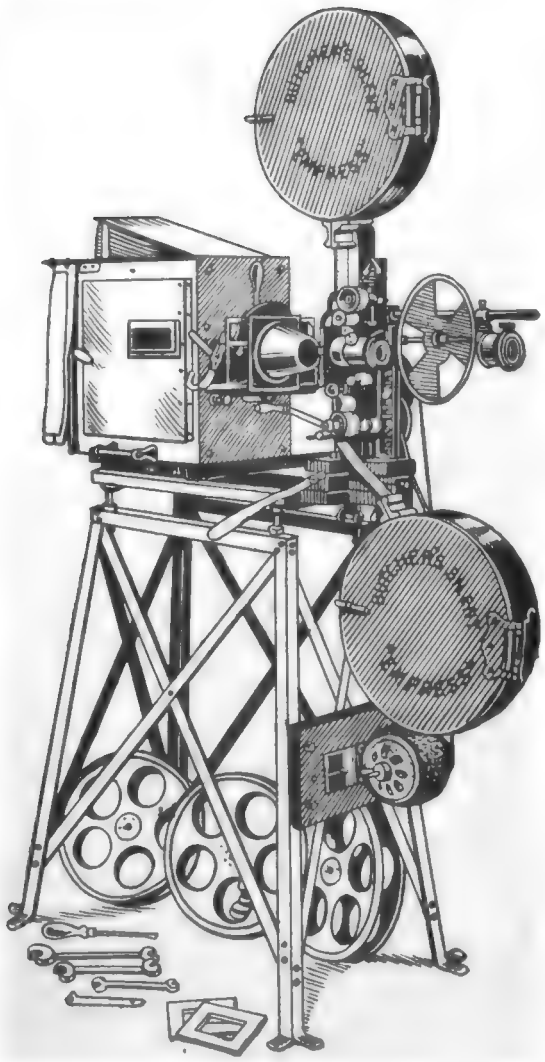
AMENDING THE CINEMATOGRAPH ACT.



The General Council of the Exhibitors' Association passed at its meeting on Tuesday last a resolution to promote an amendment of the Cinematograph Act, substituting registration for licensing and embodying all necessary and desirable conditions for safe-guarding the public and securing uniformity of regulations throughout the kingdom. We trust this important proposal will be made the foremost point in an active campaign, and welcome the appointment of a sub-committee to decide on the course of action to be adopted. Some time ago we urged in these columns that the only conclusive settlement of the position created by the unlimited discretionary powers of the licensing authorities was by means of an amendment of the Act, certain sections of which are very widely interpreted—not to the advantage of the Trade or the public. Legal decisions have up to the present merely strengthened the hands of those whose whim it is to harass the exhibitor with restrictions and regulations, and it is indeed high time we concentrated our energies on amending the Cinematograph Act, or at least those of its clauses which press so hardly on exhibitors. The Association is assured of the support, not only of its own members, but of the Trade in its bold attempt to obtain from Parliament that measure of justice which is denied it by the licensing authorities.

Quite apart from the foregoing resolution, but in its way equally interesting, is the refusal of the Executive Committee to countenance rate-aided competition in the cinema industry. To our mind this unusual form of municipal trading is strongly to be deprecated. Exhibitors have to face severe competition, which is only legitimate if confined to the ranks of the industry; and surely a cinema supported by the rates hardly enters the category of legitimate rivalry. It may be argued that the municipal picture theatre would be utilised for educational demonstrations, and in this way would not enter into competition with the privately owned cinema. But this plausible argument hardly meets the case. We do not want municipal enterprise to enter into active competition with a business contributing so largely to the relief of the rates, even under the guise of education.

By their strong decisive action in these two cases alone the Exhibitors' Association thoroughly deserves its reputation of being an organisation of exhibitors, working for the benefit of exhibitors in particular and the industry in general.

TRADE TOPICS.

Some interesting observations were made by Mr. W. J. Waugh, K.C., at the Bradford Quarter Sessions on Monday, in regard to the influence of picture houses and other amusement places upon licensed premises and the consumption of alcoholic liquors. Mr. Waugh was appearing for a publican who was appealing against the assessment of his premises by the Assessment Committee of the Bradford Board of Guardians. In opening the case, counsel stated that the competition of amusements as against mere drinking was very keen, because the public had only a certain amount of money to spend. Formerly it used to spend a large amount of it in drink, now it spent a larger amount of it in amusement and less in drink, and the result was that the public-houses were not doing the trade that they formerly did. Of course, they all knew the result of that—the prices of brewery shares were now, and for some considerable time had been, depreciating. Undoubtedly a change had come over the habits of the people of this country—a change, no doubt some people would say, for the better—but that was not a time when the assessment of public house property ought to be increased.

If one may be permitted to particularise, it appears to us that London will soon have to look to her laurels in the architecture of the picture house, especially if many more be constructed upon the lines of the Glasgow Scala and the theatre of the same name opening to-day (Thursday) at Aberdeen. The latter is a truly magnificent building, quite worthy of the Granite City, of large capacity and decorated in an unique manner. The lighting is upon very novel lines, while there are no less than four "tea terraces" from which a view of the screen is obtainable, with an elevator working between. The new Scala is quite "the last word" in luxury, and orchestral music is to be a prominent feature. We regret that we have not space for a more extended reference, but meanwhile tender our best wishes to Aberdeen's latest.

We congratulate Mr. H. Taylor, of Messrs. Barnes and Taylor, proprietors of the Royal Electric Theatre and the Palace, Stanningley, near Leeds, on his election as a district councillor for the neighbouring town of Farsley.

A very strong fight is being waged in the States at present upon the question of censorship, which bids fair to be carried to an inordinate length if allowed full play, and we note that the Mutual Film Company are taking a very prominent part in the fray. The struggle of the "Mutual" against the Ohio State Board of Censors is now a matter of history, and is by no means done with, notwithstanding protracted litigation. We wish the "Mutual" every success in the fight, and know that they will have the sympathy of all in their appeal for justice.

Mr. George Ade, one of the most popular of American humourists, who has entered into an agreement with the Essanay Company, whereby he will supply one comedy feature a week for twelve months. Mr. Ade is an exceptionally facile writer, and his first comedy, "Napoleon and the Bumps," is said to be something quite out of the ordinary.

We are asked to mention that the correct release date of Mr. Will Day's latest educational film, "The Common House Fly," advertised in our last issue on page 428, is May 21st and not the 1st, as stated. Mr. Day is already receiving many inquiries for this notable release, which is being placed upon the open market.

We are informed that a test case of importance to exhibitors with regard to the question of Sunday opening is to take place in the near future, the Middlesex County Council having decided to prosecute one of the many proprietors within its area who have continued to open, notwithstanding the terms imposed at the licensing sessions. The decision will, no doubt, be awaited with keen interest.

Thanhouser Films, Limited, are giving a Trade show of their latest production, "Robin Hood and Maid Marion," at Pyke's Theatre, Charing Cross Road, W.C., to-morrow (Friday), at 11 a.m.

The Magnet "outing" on Saturday gives every promise of being a highly successful function, tickets being in brisk demand. As mentioned in our last issue, a special launch will leave Westminster Pier at 1.30 p.m., and sports of all kinds are being arranged at Rosherville Gardens, Gravesend, while the famous "shrimp tea" will be served to all. A few tickets are still available, price 2s. 6d., and early application is essential.

The exhibitors of Dublin and district will, we are sure, miss the personality of Mr. R. Wyndham, who has been transferred from the Gaumont Company's branch in that city to Birmingham. He has had a lengthy experience of the business and is quite as much at home with the camera as with other apparatus in the Trade. He it was who was selected to go to South Africa in order to give special displays aboard the flagship for the men of the Fleet and received high praise for his exhibitions. Mr. Wyndham has achieved a big name for "topicals" in Ireland.

Messrs. Beck and Windibank, Limited, the well-known theatre furnishers, of Clement Street, Birmingham, are carrying out a number of important contracts at the present time, including that of the entire furnishing (carpets, draperies, etc.), of the New Grand Picture House, Southampton. Messrs. Beck and Windibank were also responsible for the furnishing of the Elysium, Swansea, one of the most up-to-date halls in the country.

A Trade exhibition which aroused more than an ordinary amount of interest was seen in yesterday's (Wednesday's) show of the Trans-Atlantic feature "Absinthe," in which Miss Leah Baird and Mr. Baggott play the leading parts. An interesting feature in connection with this strong drama is that Mr. Baggott spent some weeks in Montmartre and the underworld of the French capital in order to obtain the correct local colour. A numerous company assembled in the beautiful private theatre of the Trans-Atlantic Company, and were unsparing in their praise of the film.

A note from Belgium informs us that a movement is on foot, at the instance of the Central Belgium Society of Agriculture, to inaugurate a scheme for cinema instruction in agriculture. A number of special films are being prepared dealing with the proper use of agricultural machinery, the destruction of insect pests, forestry and other subjects. As we have repeatedly pointed out, there is hardly any reasonable limit to the utility of motion pictures for educational purposes, and here we have but one more proof of a recognition of the fact.

The Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited, inform us that they have in active preparation a series of films dealing with the inventions of Sir Hiram Maxim, who will himself appear in the pictures.

Repeating his Coliseum experiment of presenting plays by instalments, Mr. Oswald Stoll, by arrangement with Mr. J. D. Walker, of the World's Film Company, screened "A Lady of Quality" in serial form at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday evening. The film features Miss Cecilia Loftus in the character of Corinda, adapted from the drama by Mrs. Frances Hodges Burnett. The first act only is shown each evening, and the remaining three acts will follow on weekly. The experiment of showing this film in serial form is to be extended to other theatres under Mr. Stoll's control.

We note in the recent annual report of the Chief Constable of Leeds a very apt reference to the methods and comments of certain journals in the kingdom over the matter of juvenile crime. After mentioning the alleged connection between the picture house and juvenile depravity, the Chief Constable stated that his impression was: "In a large measure the parents of the children concerned cannot be held entirely free from blame, because there has undoubtedly been a lack of parental control." It is refreshing to come across at least one official who looks facts in the face and we recommend the remarks of this gentleman to the still surviving few who seem at a loss for "scare headlines," and whose undesirable attention the unoffending cinema can well do without.

We are pleased to hear that Senor Jose Sola Guardiola, director of our Spanish contemporary El Mundo Cinematografico, has been highly complimented upon the manner in which he represented the business houses of his country at the recent Parisian banquet of the French Chambre Syndicale de la Cinematographie. Senor Guardiola has received a large number of letters of felicitation and thanks which speak volumes for his popularity in Trade circles.

There is no more skilful publicity manager in the Trade than Mr. F. H. Waters, who has so long and so successfully kept the name of Hepworth prominently before the public through the medium of the Press, and no company of film players is more repeatedly paragraphed and pictured in the daily and weekly newspapers. A recent example of Mr. Waters' energy and cleverness in interesting the Press in the doings of the famous firm he represents is to be found in the publicity accorded to Messrs. Hepworth's engagement of an aged farm labourer to play in a story which they wrote specially for him. No less than seven picture papers devoted considerable space to portraits of the rustic actor, and the only three illustrated dailies all reproduced large photographs.

The London Film Company, Limited, have been busily engaged this week on a production of "Trilby," with Sir Herbert Tree as "Svengali."

Film Libraries, Limited, have removed their offices from 89, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., to 5, Denmark Street, Charing Cross Road, W.C.. The telegraphic address is now "Gerkineco, Westcent, London," and the telephone number Regent 1065.

That excellent Warwick film of the voyage of the King and Queen from Dover to Calais is being retained on the bill of the London Coliseum for an additional week.

Will exhibitors who are showing "A Vanishing Cracksman," the first of the Edison "Cleek" series, kindly note that they can have a fine double-crown poster of Benjamin F. Wilson (alias Cleek), free of cost to themselves by sending a post-card to 25, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.

Following "The White Man" and "Brewster's Millions," the third release of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will be "The Master Mind," in which Edmund Breese, the well-known actor, will play the leading part. All three films have been prepared with a view to being specially featured on the British market.

Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, have been showing six complete programmes of a purely educational nature during the last six weeks in many of their principal theatres. The programmes were all supplied by Messrs. Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[Will correspondents please note that stamps must be enclosed if replies are wanted by post.]

H.A.Y. (Wimbledon).—We reviewed the film in our issue of March 19th last. No, it is not the only pictorial version of the story, but it is one of the best to appear hitherto.

L. & Co. (Bombay).—We regret that we have been unable to trace the film. Your information concerning it is very indefinite, and if you could give us further details, we should be more likely to be able to help you. It is quite possible that it was issued in England under another title.

M.C. (Newcastle).—On the whole, yes. But it is impossible to reply adequately in a few words. If you want fuller information you must enclose a stamp for a reply by post.

MUSICIAN (Leeds).—The prospects for picture pianists are increasingly good, although the remuneration offered in most cases is still small. No special qualifications are necessary except a mastery of the instrument and an ability to interpret a picture with intelligence.

CONFIDENTIAL (London, S.E.)—(1) If you care to call upon us we shall be pleased to give you any advice we can, but your best course would be to consult a reliable agent. (2) We make no charge for answering inquiries.

E.T.L. (Cardiff).—We regret that we cannot tell you when the film will be shown in your city. Consult the manager of a local picture theatre.

ROY (London, N.)—(1) From your description your play sounds suitable for an Italian rather than an American film. (2) Scenarios should always be submitted in typewriting.

A CAMERA ARTIST.

Alfonso Freuguelli, son of Commandatore Cavaliere Freuguelli, was born in Rome, and from a child has been interested in photography. He commenced taking moving pictures at the early age of fourteen, and gained his early experience with the Latimer Film Company, after which he entered the Cines studios at Rome. He came to London early last year, and joined the London Film Company, participating in such productions as "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Third String," "Lawyer Quince," "The Black Spot," and "Called Back."

We hear that Signor Freuguelli has signed a lengthy contract with the Neptune Film Company, Limited, and starts "picture-making" with them as soon as their studios at Elstee are completed.

"HONI SOIT . . ."

In our last week's issue we published an advertisement introducing a phrase, or more particularly a word, whose use upon the stage of a famous theatre by a well-known actress in the play of a celebrated author is just at present being made the subject of considerable criticism. Our advertiser doubtless selected this phrase for incorporation in his advertisement solely by reason of its topical interest, just as other advertisers in the past have availed themselves of the temporary notoriety attaching to other words or phrases, such as "Marconis," "Pheasants and Mangel-Wurzels," "Wait and See," etc., etc. It is a form of advertising which is often resorted to, and which has usually proved effective.

It would be quite out of place, not to say somewhat impertinent, for the editor of a newspaper to criticise in his columns an advertisement which he had already accepted for publication in this journal, nor would it seem necessary that he should offer any explanation of his reason in doing so. At the same time, although we do not feel called upon to justify ourselves in any way for having printed what seemed, and seems, to us a perfectly legitimate advertisement, we should like to make clear our position in the matter to those of our readers who may have found grounds for disapproval in the announcement in question. We have much pleasure in printing elsewhere in this issue of our paper a very fair and well-reasoned letter on this subject, which embodies as ably as possible such reasons as might be adduced for condemning our action.

It seems scarcely necessary to point out the intrinsic harmlessness of this much-debated word, which, when used as an expletive, is entirely meaningless, and which, not really being a swear word, has only fallen into desuetude in polite conversation on account of its popularity among the lower classes, whose speech makes up in vehemence what it lacks in subtlety. Famous authors have employed it freely, from Shakespeare downwards, and it is quite commonly used by the best modern prose writers and dramatists, including Rudyard Kipling, Olive Schreiner, John Masefield, the late J. M. Synge, John Galsworthy, and Eden Philpotts, who recently contributed a very charming little story to the English Review, in which the innocent use of the word by two small children formed the principal incident. Mr. Shaw was certainly not the first playwright to introduce the word, nor Mrs. Campbell the first actress to speak it, upon the modern stage, and the commotion that its use in "Pygmalion" has aroused is simply a tribute to the author's well-known facility for advertising himself, and not to his originality or his daring. It will be seen, therefore, that the justification of precedent can easily be established. The word has never had a naughty significance, and in refusing to boycott it any longer society is simply demolishing another of those artificial conventions of which the present vital and democratic age is showing itself more and more intolerant.

With reference to our correspondent's remarks as to the possible effect of this word upon a chance reader on finding it used in an advertisement in a trade journal, we can only say that we should indeed be sorry to do harm in the remotest way to the great industry which we have the honour to represent, and that if there had seemed to us the least chance of such a contingency arising in connection with the criticised announcement, we should certainly have brought to bear upon it the censorship which we have never hesitated to exercise in the past in maintaining the propriety of our columns. But, in the present instance, we could see no reason to make any excision or alteration. The word is a perfectly harmless one, and its only striking feature is the comparative infrequency until recently of its appearance in print. The substitution of dots or dashes for its six letters—a practice which, we observe, is being favoured in the title of a new music-hall revue—deceives nobody, and merely serves to draw increased attention upon the word and to impute to it a wickedness it does not possess. While appreciating our correspondent's kind remarks as to the wide interest shown for our journal by the general public, moreover, we would point out that THE BIOSCOPE is designed to be strictly a Trade paper, and that, however, much we may be gratified by the approval of outside readers, we make no attempt to cater for them.

A film is to be taken of the commercial and industrial motor parade to be held on Whit-Monday under the auspices of the Commercial Motor Users' Association, and will be shown at the entertainment to be given in the evening at the Victoria Palace Theatre of Varieties. Over 1,500 drivers and their friends will there be entertained. As usual, the parade is under the patronage of the King.

ONE OF MANY SIMILAR TESTIMONIALS TO ESSANAY'S NEW SNAKEVILLE COMEDIES:

"The Essanay Company's famous comedies strike a note of humour which is as unique as it is delightful. Just as one talks of Shavian wit, Rabelaisian fun, or Gilbertian satire, so one must speak of the merriment of Snakeville. It is quite distinct from all other kinds of comedy: it has real individuality, and it must, therefore, be placed in a class by itself."—The Bioscope, April 16th.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

The Henny Porten films which have been shown during the past few weeks at the Willesden Green Electric Palace have taken very well with the patrons of this house. In conversation with a representative of THE BIOSCOPE, Mr. F. W. Denver, the manager, attributed the popularity of these films largely to the surpassing abilities of the actress herself. The series concludes this week, and may be regarded as having been very successful.

At the Rutland Park Cinema, Willesden Green, last week the principal item was "The House of Temperley." The work of redecorating the house is now in progress, and will shortly be completed. Pictures of the visit of the King and Queen to Paris were also included in last week's programme. Indeed, the prompt provision of films of interesting events of to-day appears to be a point upon which the management prides itself.

The Queen's Park Hall, Harrow Road, provides for its patrons on the "two shows a night" principle. There are also children's matinées on Saturday, the pictorial fare being rendered additionally attractive by the singing of a choir. The principal films screened last week were "Her Father's Story" and "The Filly." The proprietors are the Raymond Animated Picture Company.

The Prince of Wales Picture Playhouse, Harrow Road, one of the best-known houses in Paddington, has been going strong with "Antony and Cleopatra." A film has also been shown of a locally interesting football match between the teams representing two divisions of the Metropolitan Police.

The programme submitted during last week at the People's Picture Parlour, Harrow Road, included "The War Correspondent" and "Father's Choice," also one of the popular Keystone comedies.

"Old St. Paul's" provided an attraction of strong historic and sensational interest at the Grove Palace, Westbourne Grove, last week.

"The Master Criminal" was the chief item in the programme at the King's Picture Palace (Barrister Road), Kensal Rise, last week. Vivaphone singing pictures have also been shown. For this week "Sixty Years a Queen" was engaged.—The principal attraction last week at the Kensal Rise Picture Palace (Chamberlayne Road) was a film descriptive of the well-known romance, "The Colleen Bawn."

The Majestic, High Street, Clapham, has been delayed in opening for a month beyond the date originally intended. The ceremony has now been fixed for a day about three weeks hence. Internally the building will be found to bear out the claim which the proprietors have made, that it is the most palatial picture house in South London, as well as being the largest. Rapid progress is being made in the erection of the Stockwell Palladium, at the corner of Stockwell and Clapham Roads. It will be a commodious building, and will cater for a large unoccupied area, in which the spade work has been done by a most modest little establishment, which occupies the site of a shop. Apparently, these pioneer theatres do not suffer by the rise of a specially erected structure, as witness the case of one established in a railway arch at Herne Hill, within a stone's throw of the new Cinema Grand.

Tooting people and those who come from Mitcham and South Streatham for their amusements are delighted with the fine house and the first-class fare that Mr. R. Pearse has provided in the Pavilion, Mitcham Road, Tooting. The house was duly inaugurated with a private entertainment last Thursday afternoon, when 500 guests were welcomed by Councillor Mellhuish, who has seen forty years' service on the Wandsworth local authority. The councillor complimented Mr. Pearse upon the enterprise he had shown in providing so beautiful a place of entertainment, for which there was plenty of room in Tooting. Speaking amid applause, he wished Mr. Pearse the success he deserved.

The patronage bestowed on the Tooting Pavilion has been very satisfactory. At night time the exterior is relieved from any risk of garishness of illumination by the use of mercury vapour lamps for the upper portion of the façade. For the excellent effect of the internal decorations praise is due to Mr. P. J. Adams, who designed and carried out the decorative scheme. An original feature is to be seen in the introduction of the crests of the colleges of Oxford on the wall panels.

As usual with events of exceptional interest, the Cup Match played at the Crystal Palace on Saturday last was shown in the evening at the Central Picture Palace, Upper Tooting, of which Mr. Herbert Sydney is the new manager. The film was screened at 11.15 p.m., an intimation that it was on the way being received just before the screening of the final item of the programme. Mr. Sidney, who was formerly manager of the Grand Theatre, Fulham, took up his new duties a month ago.

Enterprise continues to animate the Streatham picture palaces. The first half of this week at Streatham Hill, Golden Domes saw two such attractions as "The Golden Beetle" and "The Daughter of the Hills." Next Monday an exclusive will be Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss E. Terriss in the comedy, "Always Tell Your Wife." The Elysée Orchestra is specially engaged. Up till now Mr. R. Chambers, the manager, has every reason to be satisfied with the result of the Sunday evening opening.

The British Army film proved a strong item at the Crystal Palace Theatre last week.—Two exclusives, "The Harper Mystery" and "In the Grip of a Villain" are shown this week at the Brixton Palladium," while at the Pavilion there is equally good fare with "The Port of Doom," and Miss Cecilia Loftus in "A Lady of Quality."

That old-established house, the Canterbury Theatre of Varieties, Westminster Bridge Road, is acquiring a reputation as the "Cinema Wonderland of London." First-run pictures are given from 6 p.m., with full orchestral and stage effects, while the traditions of the house are also upheld by the appearance of first-class variety artistes. Mr. H. T. Brickwell, the managing director, takes a personal interest in the Canterbury, which is well served by Mr. P. Nero as acting manager.

At the Central Hall Palace, Stamford Hill, N.E., Mr. Eric Williams, with his recitation films, was the principal attraction last week. He presented "Hubert and Arthur" (Shakespeare) and "The Surgeon's Child" (Weatherley) to large and appreciative audiences.

Mr. Courtney Crocker provides a very excellent entertainment at the Electric Coliseum, Stoke Newington. For the latter part of the week he announces the important booking of "I Shall Avenge," in addition to the star picture, "A Romance of Brittany."

Every week there is at least one exclusive picture at the Alexandra Theatre. Mr. Williams, the manager, is screening for this week "A Lady of Quality." This hall is owned by Moss' Empires, Limited, and is capable of seating 3,000 persons. The prices of admission are 3d., 6d., and 0d.

Miss Florence Johnson reports excellent business at the Clapton Cinematograph Theatre. Excellent crowds attend this handsome hall each night. "The Golden Heart" and "A Game of Cards" were in the programme last week, and were well received This week "Berthold Schwartz and the Gunpowder" is delighting the audience.

The Amherst Hall, managed by Mr. Fredk. W. Purcell is a popular resort of Stoke Newington folk, and seating accommodation is frequently at a premium. This week "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," is being shown in conjunction with a full comedy and dramatic programme. The prices of admission are 3d., 6d. and 1s. The Sunday shows in aid of the London Medical Charities Fund are well patronised.

Mr. Gilbert, manager of the Empress Electric, Mare Street, is doing excellent business with "A Lady of Quality" and "Detective Finn."

Mr. Goodwin, manager of the Rink Cinema, Clapton, is screening "A Romance of Brittany."

FOR THE MAILING LIST.

Mr. D. G. Peterson, chairman of the board of directors, Star Picture House, Gravelly Hill, will be pleased to be put upon the mailing list of all firms interested, and particularly regarding notifications of Birmingham trade shows. Address, Peterson's Motor Clothing Emporium, Suffolk Street, Birmingham.—Mr. B. C. Gibbs, who is managing the Enterprise Cinema Supplies Company, desires that his name should be placed anew upon Trade lists and future communications addressed (as mentioned) to the Cromwell Buildings, Blackfriars Street, Manchester.—Mr. H. B. Lenton, well-known in connection with Messrs. Shanly's Theatres, is now managing the Electric Theatre, Cheriton, near Folkestone.

PIMPLE, POTENTATE.

No stirring modern event would be complete without the valiant hero, and we note with satisfaction that our busy friend, "Lieut. Pimple," has taken a hand in Mexican affairs. Whether or no he was a candidate for the Presidency, the wireless operator did not mention, but some very exciting adventures will shortly be seen when the film, "Lieut. Pimple Goes to Mexico" is on view at his headquarters.

PORTSMOUTH PARS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Portsmouth already possessses some twenty-six picture houses, and it is proposed to erect another on a site at North End, one of the populous and still-growing suburbs.

The Picture House in Commercial Road, one of the best in the town, records good business week by week. The management secured "The Third String" (W. W. Jacobs series) for the first part of this week, and during the second part, "In the Dredger's Claw" and "Bunny's Mistake" promised to greatly delight the patrons.

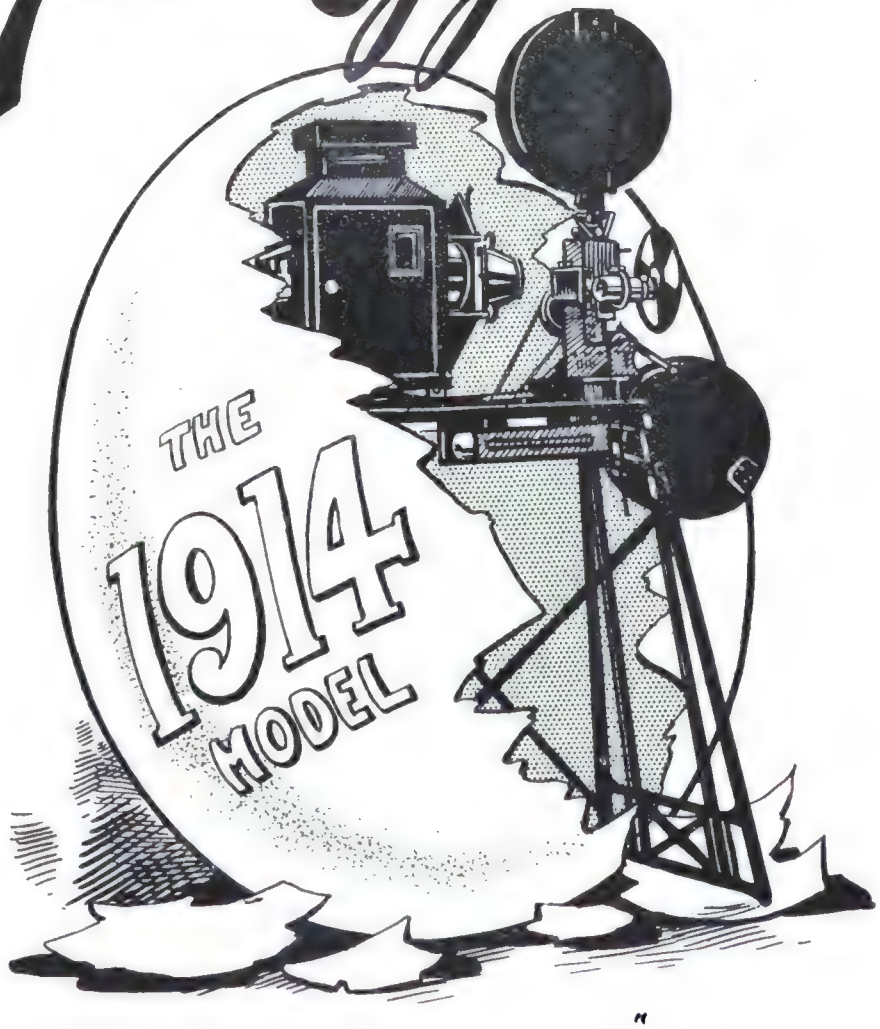
The Apollo in Albert Road, which frequently, like its vaudeville neighbours (The King's), gets crowded out, made a big hit with "A Message from Mars" last week. The principal attraction until Thursday of this week was the three-act drama, "The Dead Secret." "In the Shadow of the Throne" was the chief of other interesting subjects this week end.

The Victoria Hall, Commercial Road, the oldest picture house in the town, and undoubtedly the largest, never fails to draw big houses, be the weather wet or fine. Romance was a prominent vein in the early part of the present week, "Bess," the detective's daughter "heading the list." "In Mid-Atlantic" was the outstanding feature of other admirable productions later in the week.

The management of the North End Cinerama presented Alfred West's "Our Navy" (Part I.), "The Curse of Greed" and "A Royal Romance," with a fine selection of comedies on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, whilst the subsequent programme contained "Our Navy," Part II., "The Girl and the Tiger," and other good dramas and comedies.

Mr. C. Hatfield's Southsea Electric Theatre in Fawcett Road, invariably does good business. It had the exclusive rights of "The Vicar's Daughter," also a powerful drama "In the Days of '49." Exclusives are also shown this week-end in Western dramas, "Light and Shadow in Old Kentucky" and "The Restless Dredger."

The Shaftesbury Hall, Kingston Road, which, like the Victoria, belongs to Messrs. Andrews', is another popular house. "The Tiger Countess" and "The Expert's Secret" formed the main attractions in the first and second portions of this week respectively.



Mr. C. Bamber is well satisfied with the support that comes to his comfortable picture house at Eastney. Star pictures this week were "The Great Circus Fire" and "Hands that Condemn," the former teeming with exciting situations. A feature at this hall is the singing of Mr. R. B. Levey, a capable baritone.

The Fratton Bridge Electric Theatre topped Monday's bill with "Convict No. 113," followed by "Our Children." On Thursday, "Heartsease" was the powerful attraction. This house has the sole right of showing Alfred West's "Life in the British Army."

The Globe, in Fratton Road, showed "Daniel," "Officer Flynn" and "Simple Simon's Escape." On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, whilst the films that pleased the audiences most this week-end were "The Diver," "Broncho Billy's First Arrest" and "A Healthy Neighbourhood."

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

The programmes at the various picture palaces are still being kept quite up-to-date, and whilst, generally speaking, excellent variety is maintained, I notice there are more cinemas than ever running release programmes and "exclusives." The Strand and the Tower, both in the course of erection, are now almost finished, and both possess novel features which will make interesting reading later on. Other schemes mentioned in these notes from time to time are beginning to materialise, and there are at least four sets of plans in the Guildhall at the present time. In all probability there will be several more openings for the coming winter.

Not many weeks ago, THE BIOSCOPE intimated the likelihood of another picture palace for Beverley Road, and matters have now progressed so far that building operations will be commenced in a very short time, with the hope of effecting an autumn opening. The new cinema will be at the corner of Brunswick Avenue, and will thus be between the Coliseum and the Strand, the latter of which will be opened in the next few weeks. The promotors are the National Electric Theatres, Limited, who already own one cinema in Hull, the Theatre de Luxe, on the Anlaby Road. From what I hear an effort is to be made to make the latest cinema equal to anything of its kind in the country. The plans have already been before the Works Committee of the Corporation, and approved. It certainly looks as though this district were going to be as freely endowed with cinemas as the Anlaby Road, for the site for the proposed Central is not far away. If business proves as good as at the Anlaby Road houses, however, there will be no cause for complaint.

There were great rejoicings in Hull last week when the Hull Football team returned from Halifax with the much-coveted Northern Union Cup. Naturally enough, the cinema had to play its part for those who were not able to go and see the great final, and the splendid picture of the game which was shown by Mr. R. S. Comber, at the Theatre de Luxe, aroused a great deal of interest, and was witnessed by hundreds of football enthusiasts throughout the week. "Orders Under Seal" was on the screen when I paid a recent visit to the de Luxe, and this week "The Boer War" has been a big attraction.

Mr. William Swan showed a good picture of the Northern Union Final filmed by himself, and though there were some good pictures in last week's programme, this item was scarcely rivalled. "Those Who Live in Glass Houses," shown exclusively by the Circus, was a recent success. "The God of Gionzali," "Officer John Donovan," and "What Happened to John," have all scored well this week. Mr. Swan favours the "Warwick Chronicle," and his patrons now look forward to it, and enjoy it every week. By the way, there is shortly to be a sporting event at the Circus. Mr. Swan is himself a "sport," and he is going to sacrifice a night of pictures to a night with the gloves. It will be "the real thing," he tells me, and the principal event will be a contest between Gus Platt, of Sheffield, and Percy Wilson, of Hull.

Apropos of the Cup Final, it is interesting to note the novel action of the Hessle Road Picture Palace. Mr. Nicholson, the manager, invited the Hull team to visit the Picture Palace, to take the Cup with them, and to witness the three-reel dramatic film, "In Mid-Atlantic." The players willingly responded, and the West Hull Prize Silver Band was specially engaged for the occasion. Extraordinary scenes were witnessed outside the Palace. Hessle Road was thronged with people, and extra police were on duty to deal with the traffic. There were scenes of great enthusiasm and deafening cheers as the team were accompanied by Mr. Nicholson into the picture palace. Inside, the Cup was placed in a prominent position. Before leaving, the team expressed their great appreciation to the manager for his kindness.

I notice Mr. Charles Mackay, of the East Hull Picturedrome has again reverted to the continuous system. The Picturedrome seems to be still having its fair share of patronage in the Holderness Road district. The "top-liners" this week have been "The God of Girzah" and "Officer John Donovan."

Mr. A. Maynard Owst, of the Metro Pictures, Assembly Rooms, is now running a full three hours' programme, commencing at 7 o'clock each evening. That the pictures are good in quality as well as quantity will be seen from the fact that this week the programme has included "Love is Blind," "The Gunmaker of Moscow," "Love at 64," "The Mysterious Way," "Through the Sleuce Gates," as well as a pleasing variety of comedy subjects.

At the Prince's Hall, Mr. Tom Bogue invariably has something good. For the first three days of this week business has been brisk with the fine animal picture "Seven Months' Big Game Hunting." Mr. Bogue continues to show all that is latest in the cinema world, and there is no falling off.

There was a large and appreciative audience in the Gaiety, Market Place, on Saturday night when I called, the attraction being "A Cruel Jest." Mr. G. F. Picton Thomas has secured what should be a sure winner for this week. "The Great Dock Catastrophe" is singularly appropriate for a cinema such as the Gaiety, in the centre of the Old Town, and entirely surrounded by docks.

There was an interesting event at the Picture Playhouse, Porter Street, last week when a presentation was made to Mr. Ketteman, the late manager, on the occasion of his leaving for London. The gifts were a silver clock and ink stand, entirely subscribed for by the staff, and handed to the recipient by one of their number, who spoke of the excellent managerial qualities of Mr. Ketteman. In response, Mr. Ketteman paid a warm compliment to the staff. Mr. J. Raymond, who was previously in charge of another of Messrs. Ruffells' cinemas in the London district, has now been installed as manager. He is no stranger to Hull, having been previously connected with the music-halls, during which time he paid several visits to the Third Port. It is interesting to note that he appeared at the old Alhambra, now the Picture Playhouse (rebuilt), of which he is now manager.

Morgana Films, Art Edition,
21, Corso Vittorio Emanuele,
Rome,

April 14th, 1914.

To the Editor of the BIOSCOPE,

Dear Sir,

Cav. Uff. Giovanni Grasso, the celebrated actor who is now preparing for us a series of art films, asks me to make public the following declaration :—

"I have heard that a film agency in Rome are "about to release a number of films in which appears "as an actor a certain Mr. Giovanni Grasso. I wish it "to be known that it is purely a question of a homonym, "that I am in no way connected with these productions "and that the only films in which I am appearing are "those which the Morgana Film Co., are now "preparing.

"Thanking you for the publicity you will kindly "give to this letter,

"I beg to remain,

"Yours faithfully,

"[Signed] GIOVANNI GRASSO."

We might add on our behalf that this homonym is a young actor and a relative of the celebrated tragedian who when having taken part in one of the competing Sicilian Companies was always billed as GIOVANNINO GRASSO-FLORIO in order to differentiate him from the famous "Giovanni Grasso."

Should this young actor really choose to change now his name, and should he be introduced to the public and to the cinema trade by the name of Giovanni Grasso, we shall immediately begin an action to stop the unfair system of competition.

Yours faithfully,

GLASGOW NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

"The coolest hall in Europe." Such was the notice which greeted the patrons of a popular Glasgow hall last week, and as at the time we were enjoying a foretaste of summer, with the thermometer registering somewhere in the seventies, the appearance of such a notice was opportune. The "heat wave" affected several halls somewhat adversely, but as the Northern managers are up to date, having their halls comfortably warmed in winter, and electric fans working overtime in summer, the attendance should not be much affected by the bogey of stuffiness. Indeed, on my visits—and during the week I have been in most of the halls—I have not noticed much difference on what has ruled all the season, and can safely once more report business as continuing to be remarkably good.

The Picture House, Sauchiehall Street, featured "The Third String" (W. W. Jacobs series). Needless to say, the screening of this subject has proved a rare attraction. "Branscombe's Pal" and "A Bad Game" were also included.

At the Salon, the chief item of an exceptionally good selection was "King Charles," while comedy was well represented. The "Message of the Sundial," "A Romance of Old Brittany," and "The Invisible Hand" were strong dramas at La Scala. Here comedy was ably represented in "The Adventures of a Mighty Monarch" and "When the Ink Ran Out." The Daeblitz La Scala orchestra had a special musical programme, which was greatly appreciated.

At Cinema House, where alterations are now completed, a fine summer programme was screened. Comedy in plenty and drama just sufficed. "A Bad Game" and "Polidor and the See-Saw" were among the former. "Love, or a Throne" was the right drama, while topicals from the "Pathé Gazette," and an Italian scenic filled in the remainder of the programme.

The large audiences which assemble nightly at Hengler's prove that Mr. Milne is putting on "the goods." "Jack, the Wolf," had a big reception, while among the comedies "Because of a Hat" proved a winner.—As previously noted, the Empress Picture Play House is drawing crowds, and this week Mr. Godwin's stars have been "Treasures on Earth" and the "King of Seven Dials." That old favourite, "The Winking Parson," was a comic which pleased immensely, and the "New Camera Man" made a good second.

The Scottish Electric Picture Palace, at St. George's Cross, this week made a big hit, and packed the house with "Alexia's Strategy," while "The Problem Love Solved" and "One Round O'Brien Comes Back," were also screened. "The Magistrate's Conscience" and "Why Girls Leave Home" figured in the second half of the week's programme, and drew excellent business. Mr. Twaddle always has a good programme, while Mr. Martin Marks sees to it that the musical selections are appropriately rendered.

The habitues of the Scenic Picture House, Paisley Road, are just now being treated to a well selected list of exclusives. "Black Thirteen" and "A Fight for a Fortune" were screened last week, and an equally enticing couple of top-liners are on the cards for next. The Scenic is in the right spot, and Mr. McAra is supplying the programmes wanted.

Alterations are in progress at Green's Picturedrome, Summerton Road, but the performances are not being interfered with. The hall has now been completed, lined with brick, plastered and tiled, and new heating arranged and installed. When completed it will be second to none, and will be one of the best equipped theatres in the city. Strenuous work by Mr. Thompson, and hearty co-operation from the staff have enabled the task to be carried through without loss of a single show. On my visit the programme included "The Foreman's Treachery," "The Lure of Gold," "The Gem of India," and "The Mexican Rebellion," a selection which did not fail to attract attention.

The Govan Cinema Picture House (Mr. Milnes) continues to draw crowded houses, the programme including "Thor, Lord of the Jungles," and "The Story of David Greig." The programme for the week contains twenty items, among which are nine dramas and seven comedies, the remainder being topical and interest.

At Mr. Hamilton's halls throughout the city this week the programmes are up to the usual standard, each being changed three times weekly. Among the subjects are "Beauty Unadorned," "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night," "Amidst Raging Beasts," "Saved by His Victim," and "The Awakening of Snakeville." Mr. Hamilton makes a strong point of the musical accompaniment in all his theatres. The latest acquisition, The Queen's, in Watson Street, is doing excellent business since Mr. Hamilton took it over.

Since the advent of Mr. Thomas Butt to the management of the De Luxe, Sauchiehall Street, the tide of affairs at this house has taken a decided turn for the better. The audiences are increasing week by week, and the programmes are attracting the class of patron desired by every manager who runs his establishment on high-class lines. Mr. Butt's selection for this week includes: "In the Shadow of the Throne," "The Moth," "The Trail of the Lost Chord," "The Message of the Sundial," and a good sprinkling of interest and comedy. On Thursday evening the Pictures of the King and Queen in Paris, taken on Wednesday afternoon, were shown, and were accorded quite an ovation.

On Monday evening the Princess Theatre, Glasgow, opened for a season of pictures and vaudeville, under the direction of Mr. John Cummings. The top-liner for the first week's programme was "The Master Criminal," and crowded houses were the result.

Messrs. Smith and Welsh, at the Parade Cinema, were showing three "stars" last week, and did excellent business. "Count Zarka," "The Winner" and "The Moonshiner's Last Stand," were the trio which attracted, and as these were backed up by plenty of [illegible] had a fine treat.

Digitized by Google Original from NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

"The Strength of Men" and "The Black Thirteen" were shown at the Bijou, Cowcaddens, the little house with the big reputation, and seats were at a premium.

Mr. Tronson, at the Star, Maryhill, keeps up his excellent reputation for showing specially good pictures, and last week's attractions were no exception, "The Red Spiders" and "Count Zarka" doing all that was required of them.

The erection of Mr. A. E. Pickard's new hall, in Seamore Street, is now being pushed on with all speed, and already the building is taking shape, and shows the outlines of what should prove a commodious hall. The beams (massive steel girders) for the large balcony are now in position, and the building will be ready for occupation early in the autumn.

The Lorne Cinema, to be situated in Cornwall Street, Ibrox, is to be the latest addition to the South Side halls. The site is a good one, and as several of those on the directorate are prominent members of the popular Rangers F.C., they will ensure a large following.

The new hall being erected in Springburn to take the place of the Electric Theatre there, is nearing completion, and Mr. Stewart will soon be getting ready for the opening ceremony. He has laid the foundation of a good business in the loco. centre, and his new habitation will be a handsome addition to the halls of the city.

If it's Green's, it's good," is a popular phrase of this pushing firm, and as they make a habit of showing "first run" films every week at their Whitevale Picturedrome, it is safe to say that the programmes are always good. Last week "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," was a great magnet, and "Give Us This Day" proved equally attractive.

At Scott's Shettleston Palaceum, where the resident manager is Mr. R. Simpson, one always expects something good in the way of pictures, and one is never disappointed. "The White Vacquero" and "The Hermit" were fine attractions last week, and the report was "business as usual—good." On Saturday, Mr. Scott had the crowd attending his Saturday matinée, filmed by Messrs. Gaumont, and the resulting picture will be shown on Saturday next, when the rush to "see themselves as ithers see them" will no doubt be ample compensation for Mr. Scott's enterprise.

At Mr. Scott's Gollowgate house, "The Mexican Rebellion" and "The Lost Treasure" both first-run subjects, were shown last week to large crowds. Mr. Daily is the manager at this house, and always has a hearty welcome for all.

Of Mr. Pickard's enterprises, there is no more popular hall than the Townhead Casino, and this popularity has been achieved by submitting only good pictures and varieties. Last week the feature was "The Pit and the Pendulum," and the well-known subject was accorded crowded houses.

A comedy which was extremely popular in the city last week was "Some Nerve," and nowhere was it seen to better advantage than at the Charing Cross Electric. On the drama side of the progamme "His Excellency" was a good second.

St. Enoch's Picture House (Mr. Hardwicke) has, during last week, been the home of crowded audiences. "Our Navy" was the picture which was drawing all Glasgow, and Mr. Hardwicke must have been gratified at the reception accorded his efforts. This week the stars were "Cross versus Crescent" and "The Antique Brooch," a pair which alone should bring out the "house-full" boards.

Glasgow South-Side residents have an excellent picture home in the B.B. Cinerama, and here, week by week, are presented to them all that is best in the world of cinematography. During the first half of last week, "A Message from Mars" occupied the premier position in the programme, and for the second portion the place of honour was given to "The Story of David Greig."

TRADE NOTES.

With so many picture houses in Scotland, the Glasgow Trade houses have a good field to work on, and the Scottish exhibitors evidently find it convenient to obtain their suplies in the second city.

One of the busiest houses is that of Messrs. Gaumonts, which is a rendezvous for the travellers of many of the principal London houses, as well as the Glasgow headquarters of the firm's own productions. Trade shows are held every day, while topical work is a feature of the branch.

On Tuesday last a goodly number of exhibitors attended Messrs. Pathé's private projection theatre to witness shows of "The Knave of Hearts Club," the first of the Rocambole series. "A Footballer's Honour" was also screened. Mr. Jowett informs me that the Pathé exclusives were greatly in demand, and the number of bookings are constantly increasing. Several of the latest exclusives will shortly be seen in more than one Sauchiehall Street house, and at the principal theatres in the provinces. The Trade in machines and accessories also keeps up well.

A visit to the Ideal Film Renting Company found Mrs. Jacks in the midst of the mid-week bustle. Exclusives handled here are in good demand, and bookings very gratifying. The firm's feature list is a most extensive one, and contains all the best on the market.

"The Fatal Wedding" and "Class-mates" were shown by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, at the Picture House, Glasgow, on Thursday last.

Messrs. Hibberts' exclusives are proving profitable investments for Scottish exhibitors, and Mr. Page is having quite an encouraging time. "The Worker," "Lieut. Rose and Sealed Orders," "Give Us this Day," etc., are all doing well, and giving great satisfaction wherever shown.

Messrs. Green's headquarters at Gallowgate on a Monday or Thursday are worth visiting, for then one can see what efforts are made to ensure prompt dispatch of films. The exclusives handled by Messrs. Green's are out all the time, and quick returns and prompt dispatches alone enable the firm to cope with all the orders.

PNEUMATIC AIR PURIFIER.

The most powerful of pneumatic disinfectant spray machines, the "Silver King," is now on view at Mr. Will Day's Lisle Street premises and presents several novel features. In the first case, despite its large air reservoir, the machine weighs only a few pounds and when not in use is held by a clip in the lobby or other convenient spot. With the one charge of compressed air, so beautifully is the spray constructed, it will be found possible for the attendant to walk over every portion of the largest theatre and distribute a finely divided purifying essence sans moisture and without that irritating "chuff chuff," so distracting to an audience. The machine is the acme of convenience and its moderate price, consistent with first-class finish, renders it an adjunct well worthy the exhibitors' inspection.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A FLOURISHING HALL.

The Cinema, East Dulwich, which was mentioned some time ago as a "recent opening" is, we are pleased to hear, meeting with a full share of appreciation. Mr. J. L. De la Cour, the proprietor, is putting on just the right thing in programmes and his handsome house is attracting a steady and increasing clientèle.

"X.L." ON THE MOVE.

We hear that the X.L. Film Company have appointed the South Wales Exclusive and Feature Agency, of Cardiff, their agents for that district. Their film, of which the X.L. Company hold the British rights, "Trapped in the Mine," promises to be a big success, and is now on view at the Dean Street showrooms.

ALLEGED THEFT.

On Monday, at West Ham Police Court, Robert Alexander Emerson, of 2, Warwick Road, Forest Gate, and Henry Harding, of 45, Kitchener Road, Forest Gate, cinematograph operators, were charged with stealing and receiving twelve pieces of cinematograph film from the Queen's Cinema, Romford Road, Forest Gate, the property of the Globe Film Company, Limited, of Shaftesbury Avenue, W. Formal evidence of arrest was given and the accused were remanded, bail being allowed.

SHOWING WITH SUCCESS.

There are, each season, certain films which are outstanding in their success, and "In the Hands of the London Crooks" is fully deserving of being placed in that category. The City Exclusive Company informs us that the feature is going especially well in the provinces, this week's bookings including leading theatres in Newcastle-on-Tyne and six other district towns, Birmingham and several district shows, Leeds, Bradford and vicinities, also at Aberdeen, Whitehaven, Castleford, Westminster—an excellent list of between twenty and thirty houses being included.

NEWARK JOTTINGS.

Mr. F. A. Wheeler has been appointed manager of the new Kinema, and is now running this luxurious house with much success. Large audiences witnessed the "British Army" film last week, when special music was discoursed by the band of the Sherwood Foresters. On Thursday, Earl Manvers and the officers of the 8th Battalion, after dinner at the Town Hall, visited the Kinema, also members of the St. John's Ambulance and Red Cross Societies. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday this week Mr. Wheeler did big business with "The Three Musketeers," when it was found necessary to depart from the usual continual performance. The excellent orchestra is much appreciated here.—Mr. H. Boardman continues to provide excellent fare at the Corn Exchange, and is well supported. "Fighters of the Plains," "The Gunmaker of Moscow," and "The Invisible Government" are recent stars, and on Sunday "Love is Blind" greatly pleased a good house.—At the Picturedrome, Mr. J. Hough featured "The Wreck" last week, and has every reason to be satisfied with the result.

A PETERBOROUGH PAR.

A noticeable feature at the Broadway Kinema last week was the phenomenal success of "Give Us This Day——."

MANAGERIAL CHANGE.

Mr. H. B. Lenton, who has been connected with Messrs. Shanly for the past six years, and has successfully managed many of their halls, has left Ramsgate to undertake the management of the Electric Theatre, Cheriton, near Folkestone. With his wide experience in the business, a good and prosperous season should be forthcoming under his regime.

ECLAIR ENTERPRISE.

Once more we are enabled to congratulate Mr. Ratisbonne upon a dainty souvenir in the synopsis issued for "Protea II." The book has an elegant bright blue cover with a fine portrait of Mlle. Josette Andriot, the charming and versatile actress who plays the title role. In addition, several very striking scenes in the play are included, the whole making a charming synopsis.

SEEN IN THE SUBURBS.

Some very amusing episodes were witnessed recently in certain of the London suburbs when the comic film, "Buying a Horse," was produced. The "animal," a spotted quadruped, was the famous pantomimic equine of the Brothers Shanks (as recently seen at the Marlborough Theatre), and the horseman Mr. Freddy Rigby. Mr. Nat Lewis was the speculator, and a very exciting time was seen for all concerned amidst the traffic. Messrs. Lucrative Films are handling this amusing comedy, which is about 600 ft. in length, and will be issued on the exclusive plan. Offers for overseas' rights are invited for the release.

DOINGS AT DERBY.

The "British Army" film is this week's great attraction in Derby, and for the first part of this fine production the Alexandra Electric has presented a martial appearance. The bands of the Derbyshire Imperial Yeomanry and the Fifth Battalion Sherwood Foresters (Notts and Derby Regiment) provided appropriate music, and the Normanton Road house has received large and influential patronage.—Under Mr. J. H. Pearman's able supervision, the Cosy Picture House is one of the most popular in the town. Last week-end "In Satan's Toils" was a big draw. "The Vulture of Gold" was the top liner the first three days of this week, backed up by "The Stolen Casket" and the "Cup Final." "The Road to Ruin" has been secured for the Cosy.—"The Cast of the Die" and "In the Grip of a Villain" are Mr. J. M. Allen's latest successes at the Normanton Palace. "The Lure of Gold" and "The Ring and the Rajah" appear during the week-end. Mr. Syke's orchestra is most deservedly popular.—At the Babington Lane Picture House, "Daughter of the Hills" and "In Old Brittany" were amongst the most interesting items on a strong programme. "The Great Leap" was Monday's star film. "Treasures on Earth" will doubtless fill the commodious house during the week-end.—"Orders Under Seal" has been secured this week by the management of the Spot Cinema.

PICTORIAL PERSHORE.

During the past week Mr. Spiers, of the Electric Theatre, has been trying the "nameless film" attraction. The event has, as the Yankees put it, aroused "some" interest. The latter portion of the week's programme included, as the special number, "Victory or Death."

WORCESTER MEMS.

Mr. Milton, of the Arcade Cinema, Worcester, with his up-to-date programme, will take a lot of beating by many houses of larger proportions. During the past week he has been showing that powerful film, "Give Us This Day——."—At the Empire some really good houses have been seen.

PROTEA REAPPEARS.

We are pleased to be able to announce, as will be seen from our advertisement columns, that the release date of "Protea II." has been fixed for Monday, June 16th. Mr. Ratisbonne informs us that many inquiries have been made for this film. We may add that, notwithstanding the length of the film being over 4,000 ft., it is being issued on the open market.

AN "EXCLUSIVE" EVENT.

The amount of excellent information regarding the particularly strong list of exclusives controlled by the Kinematograph Trading Company, and contained in their latest booklet, should cause a big demand for the issue. There is something for all tastes and a perusal of the list issued by the firm will reveal some of the most potent pictorial attractions of the day. The book is worth sending for and well worth perusal.

THE ARMY FILM AT DEWSBURY.

Mr. H. H. Greenwood, manager of the Dewsbury Picture House, featured the British Army Film in splendid style. The film was shown in the two halves of the week, and the exhibition was under the patronage of officers of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry. On the Monday and Thursday evenings the troops paraded the town, headed by the battalion band, and marched to the Picture House, where the regimental band played selections during the screening of the film.

FUTURE "WARNER" FEATURES.

Two very sensational features are to be placed upon the open market durng the month of June by Messrs. Warner's Features, London. The first, entitled the "Lure of New York," is a two-part drama depicting the snares and pitfalls of Broadway in a startling manner; while the second, also in two parts, is "The Midnight Strike," a vividly powerful industrial drama. The release dates are June 4th and 18th respectively, and the releases form part of the "fortnightly feature" policy of this progressive company.

ASHFORD AMUSEMENTS.

Much credit is due to the enterprise of Mr. Edmund J. Taylor for the splendid way in which "Parsifal" was presented at the Royal Cinema. This excellent production was much appreciated by large and enthusiastic audiences, and the special music played by an augmented orchestra added considerably to the effect. Madame Amy Atkins was responsible for the solos, and at the concluding performance was presented by the management with a beautiful basket of carnations as a token of thanks.—"Humanity" held the audience spell-bound at the Palace, Tufton Street. "The Fight for the Great Black Diamond" was also much appreciated. "The Octoroon" is the feature for the early part of this week.

SEEN AT ST. HELENS.

Two splendid films, "The Parasite" and "The Worker," went exceedingly well with the many patrons of Griffin's Electric. Asta Nielsen in "Up to Her Tricks" is screened this week, and is a favourite with local patrons. Amongst some very attractive films shown at the Oxford last week was "The Filly." Another strong feature was "The Dilemma," which proved quite the attraction that Mr. Helsby Wright expected.—The Parrvillion is now under the management of Mr. Teale.

TALBOT'S STAFF'S TRIBUTE.

The staff of the Talbot Theatre, Richmond-on-Thames, met recently at the Castle Hotel in order to celebrate the third anniversary of the theatre. They were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Smither, the former presiding over a goodly gathering. A little surprise was given the genial proprietor in the presentation, from the staff, of a very handsome silver salver subscribed for as a token of esteem. After Mr. Smithers had acknowledged the gift the usual toasts were honoured and an enjoyable programme of songs and music followed. Among the artistes were Signor Basano's Orchestra, Mr. H. Burgiss-Brown (the manager), Sig. Basano, also the Misses Smither and members of the theatre staff. An excellent seven-course dinner was served by mine host of "Ye Olde Castle."

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

Good business is being done all round in Cambridge, despite the fact of keen competition. At the Playhouse a very interesting programme is provided. For Monday, "Beauty Unadorned" headed the bill. Other interesting pictures include "The Claim Jumper," "Withering Roses," and "Love's Sunset." A special programme of music is rendered by the orchestra under the direction of Mr. Max Bennett. —At the Gaiety last week an exceedingly fine set was screened, the best including "The Younger Generation," "The Detective's Stratagem," "The Railroad Inspector's Peril."—The two star films at the Empire this week are "The Fatal Invention" for Monday and "The Clown's Daughter" for the later part of the week.—There is always a good programme at the "Electric," and last week the films were all above the average. "The Triumph of Innocence," "Love's Sacrifice" and "The Broken Idyll" were but a few of the titles.

BITS FROM BRISTOL.

After the rush at Easter the tendency is now more towards the normal, but managers still report good business. At the recently opened Globe business has been exceptionally brisk, and under the able management of Mr. W. Johns (for some years with Messrs. Pringle) the hall should continue to do well. —At Mr. Horace Livermore's Palace dramatic pictures appears to find favour and "A Romance of Brittany" and "The Hand that Rocks the Cradle" were heartily appreciated.—At the Zetland Road Picture House, Mr. F. Sumpter featured "Justice," and packed houses were the result.—Mr. Harris, at the Triangle, endeavours to give his patrons nothing but the best and this hall is becoming very popular.—At Knowle, Mr. Webster recently featured "The Old Curiosity Shop" and also projected on the screen pictures of members of the Bristol Dickens' Society in various Dickensian characters.—A visit to the Coliseum is always enjoyable, the films, orchestra and seating being excellent. Mr. Simmons' numerous friends are looking forward to the coming return visit of Mr. Tom Powers.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

Films of the usual standard of excellence were shown at the Hippodrome, Middlesbrough, last week, the best drama being "Treasures on Earth."—The premier attraction at the Grand Electric was "Heartsease." "A Message from Across the Sea" strongly appealed to those who "go down to the sea in ships." "The Three Musketeers" provided the management of the Empire, Stockton, with huge audiences, the whole of the evening being devoted to the famous novel. A feature of the entertainment was the programme of the orchestra, which had been excellently arranged under the supervision of Lieut. G. B. Robinson. "The Old Curiosity Shop" provided a splendid topic for the Globe, which is now one of the most cosy halls in the district.—The management of the Empire, South Bank, featured "Through the Clouds."—"The Lady of Monsoreau" was, by the way, specially featured at the Theatre Royal, Stockton.—"Love, the Victor" was a powerful attraction at the Court Kinema and Arcade Cinema, Darlington, last week. During the latter half of the week, "The Powder Flask of Death" was a brilliant star.—The principal item at the Empire Picture Playhouse was "The Firefly," whilst "The Smuggler's Child" and "Fellow Voyagers" were also included. On Thursday "The Leading Lady" was the chief film, while "The Girl Spy" and "A Lesson in Jealousy" were also exhibited with success.

ON THE SOUTH-EAST COAST.

Many good things are provided at Folkestone, and business continues first-class. The Central made a big hit with the comedy, "Always Tell Your wife."—Mr. Andrews is providing excellent programmes at the Electric. "Thor, Lord of the Jungle" and "The Harvest of Sin" attracted large audiences.—Mr. Robert Forsyth is showing up-to-date subjects at the Hippodrome to full houses.—The chief attraction at Deal has undoubtedly been "A Message from Mars" at the Queen's Hall, and Mr. A. Sykes had great difficulty in finding accommodation for the large numbers. Amongst other features screened, "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" was decidedly popular.—The most popular items at the Theatre Royal are "Lieut. Rose and Stolen Bullion," "Pride of Battery B" and "On the Broad Starway."—Mr. Geo. Claringbold had "The King Can Do No Wrong" and "The Master Crook" as star films at the Empire, Sandwich, these being well received by good houses.—The brilliant weather has in no way detracted from business at Ramsgate. Mr. Bert Parker had some capital programmes at the Queen's. "Lieut. Rose and Sealed Orders" and "Feodora" were responsible for capacity business.—"The Stolen Papers" was the means of securing excellent houses at the King's. "Withering Roses" met with marked appreciation, and "Beauty Unadorned" was the cause of much merriment."—"In the Days of the Guillotine" and "Trail of the Lost Chord" were the items of interest at Shanly's.—Gratifying business is experienced at the Cinema, Broadstairs. "What the Gods Decree," "Between Man and Beast" and "The Trap" were the top liners.—Margate has many visitors and in spite of other attractions business is good.. Mr. C. W. Stanley featured "Between Man and Beast" and "The Harper Mystery" at the Parade Cinema.—Approval was expressed at the good things secured by Mr. C. W. Ellis at the Clifton Cinema. Amongst the chief favourites were "The Stolen Inheritance" and "The Prairie Trail."—The Council has approved of the plans of a cinema to be erected in the High Street.—At the Lounge, Cliftonville, "The Solitary Fort," "Fighters of the Plains," and "The Diver" drew a full share of patronage.

VIEWED IN VIENNA.

Endeavours are being made here, writes a correspondent, to lessen the number of street accidents by portraying in moving pictures the dangers of carelessness in crossing the streets.—A well-known American impresario in Mr. Marcus Lowe from New York, is in this city on the look-out for theatrical novelties.—The Eclair Company's "Children of Captain Grant" (Jules Verne) is top of the bill at the Graben Kino.—"The Golden Beetle" (Cines production) is featured at the Opera Kino, while Miss Henny Porten continues to draw the crowd at the Elite Theatre.

EVENTS AT EALING.

The introduction of first-class concert turns at the Hippodrome has met with immediate success. Last week Mr. Raymond Elliss was heard to great advantage, and his efforts were well received by huge audiences. The services of Miss May Hanbury have been secured for this week. The programmes last week included "The Master Criminal," "Peace and War in Mexico," and "The Expert's Secret." "The Lure of London" met with a great success last week at the Theatre de Luxe. The management has a good series of coming exclusives in store. "The Bridge of Death" and "The Streets of New York" top the bill this week.—At the neighbouring hall, the Kinema, the programmes were up to their usual high standard. "The Lure of Gold" and "In the Firelight" were featured last week, "The Veteran," "Branscombe's Pal" and "The Third String" being the "pick" of this week's programmes.—"The Old Curiosity Shop" was an excellent draw at the Walpole last week. "Orders Under Seal" is being shown during the whole of this week.—Since Mr. Caperoe Thurston took over the management of the Hanwell Grand this theatre has become very popular, the seating capacity often being taxed to its utmost. The programmes submitted are always of a high standard.

MOVEMENTS AT MORECAMBE.

The Morecambe Tradesmen's Association has passed the following resolution:—"That this Association publicly record its dissatisfaction with regard to the action of the County Bench in refusing cinema licences for Good Friday at Morecambe, and protests, believing that such action has proved detrimental to the town's interest as a holiday resort." This and a movement for a combine of local entertainment proprietors for mutual defence, plus a storm of indignation is the result of the arbitrary decision of the magistrates at Lancaster. The advent of Easter put new life into Morecambe's amusement side, and the revival has not yet died down. At the Alhambra the new management are putting on the best of fare and maintaining the long standing reputation of the theatre. "The Lady in Black" was one of the choicest of subjects, whilst "A Court Intrigue in the Reign of Henry VIII." proved equally popular.—At the Winter Gardens, Mr. A. H. Read screened "In the Wilds of Africa" and "The Virgin of Babylon" to bumper houses. The augmented orchestra, under Mr. T. W. Thurban, is also a great attraction.—At the West End Pier, of which Mr. E. G. Bradshaw is the secretary, the pictures of chief interest were "In Mid-Atlantic" and "The Iron Man."—Mr. J. Howson featured "The Gem of India" and "The Tragedy of the Cameos" at the White Hall, and secured big audiences. Mr. Howson will reopen at Whitsun for the summer.—Mr. R. H. V. Addenbrooke is booking some "big things" from the trade centres for production at the Tower.

NORTHERN NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Hodges, the manager of the Picture House, Westgate Road, Newcastle-on-Tyne, deviated from his usual custom, last week, of showing two distinct programmes, and maintained throughout the week as a special attraction "Spartacus." The picture had a remarkable reception and its retention for the week was fully justified by the large number of people who went to see it.

In connection with the exhibition of the British Army film at the Shipcote Hall, Gateshead, a special military night was held. This performance was under the patronage of the Mayor of Gateshead, and it was attended by the 9th Battalion of the Durham Light Infantry, under the command of Colonel F. R. Simpson, who was accompanied by his staff of officers. The battalion band was responsible for the musical programme. The unique entertainment attracted a great amount of attention in the borough, and the house was crowded in all parts. For the purposes of this film the services of the full Highland pipe band of the Newcastle and Gateshead Veterans' Association were engaged throughout the week. The film was shown in two parts, "How the Army is Made" being screened on the first three evenings, followed by "The Army Under War Conditions."

Wherever shown in the North, "Sixty Years a Queen" has met with a record reception. Mr. I. Collins had it at the Globe Electric Theatre, Gosforth, and accompanying the picture was music arranged for the occasion and admirably performed by the Globe orchestra.—"Sixty Years a Queen" is this week being shown at the Queen's Hall, Northumberland Street, Newcastle, where it is paying a welcome return visit. Mr. Wolters, the manager of this popular place of entertainment, was amongst the first to book this great historical production when it was first put upon the market, and in bringing it again he is meeting the wishes of a large number of his patrons who desired to see it again.

"The Cup Final Mystery" was a film of peculiar interest at a time when football enthusiasts were speculating as to the destination of the cup for another year, and Mr. George Black showed commendable enterprise in booking it for the Grand Theatre, a district where football has become a passion, as, indeed, it has almost everywhere in the north. It made a strong appeal to the sporting community, and was not less interesting to those who probably would not go to see a football match played. It was backed by a strong variety and picture programme, and it and the other items were responsible for filling the theatre at every performance.

The revival of the Vitagraph Company's success of a few years ago, "Convict 70," was an interesting feature in the programme provided at the Crown, Scotswood Road, Elswick, by Mr. George V. Wybrow. It was booked by him at the express wish of a large number of his regular patrons, and was shown for three nights to crowded audiences. Mr. Wybrow has already commenced making arrangements for the annual summr outing for the children in the district who patronise the Crown Theatre.

In a recent flying visit to South Shields I found the exhibitors there showing some very enticing fare. Mr. Arthur J. Hutchinson had "The Pendulum of Fate" at the top of the Chichester bill; "The Harper Mystery" was at the King's; at the Grand Electric was "The Witch of Salem"; there was "The Vampire" being shown by Mr. E. Hatfield at the Picture House; and the Kino had "Thirty Years of a Gambler's Life." These, of course, are only the films to which more than ordinary prominence was given by the exhibitors, but to name them is sufficient to indicate the wide choice of entertainment provided for the residents of the seaside borough.—"Blind Fate" and "The Curse of Greed" were both at the Empire, Whitley Bay, and at the same place Mr. Will Lincoln had "Antony and Cleopatra."

EXETER AND DISTRICT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

During the past week the Empire, Exeter which has been screening the British Army film, has presented the appearance of a recruiting station. Stalwart recruiting sergeants have been on duty outside, while placards announcing the advantages of the British Army have been exhibited along the façade. Mr. Robert R. Butler must have spent a busy week, for crowds have been attracted to the performance, among them being a large number of regulars and Territorials in the full dress of their various units. Many distinguished officers have patronised the Empire during the week. One morning a special performance was held for the benefit of the officers and men of the Devon (Depot) Regiment, and the Royal Field Artillery. Headed by the band of the Devonshire Regiment they made a brave show marching to and from the performance. I have come in contact during the past week with a large number of officers and men of the various units, and one and all have spoken in enthusiastic terms of the film. There is no doubt that the visit of the British Army film has stimulated recruiting in both the Regular and "Terriers" locally. In addiion to this "star turn" the other pictures at the Empire have been quite up to the average, including "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders," and a number of excellent comedy and scenic films. This week "The Missing Man" will be one of the chief features in an all star programme.

The Palladium, Exeter, too, presented a military appearance last week, many Regulars and Territorials being among the large audiences who witnessed the film, "Life in the British Army." Everyone who saw it was delighted with the films, and Mr. Adderley was heartily congratulated. This week the "Three Musketeers "will be the star films, while in the immediate future "Hamlet" will be screened.

Encouraged by their success recently, the managements of the City Palace and the Theatre Royal are combining this week for another grand "film week" at the Theatre Royal. The picture programme includes Sir Charles Wyndham in "David Garrick," "The Red Duke" and the "Battle of Manilla."

The City Palace, Exeter, has attracted large audiences during the past week, the films including "Love's Sunset," "The Death Trap," "The Life Saver" and "The Stolen Papers." For the present week, a good programme has been arranged, including Asta Nielsen in "Up to Her Tricks," "The Friend in Blue," "The Broken Idyll" and "The Experts Secret."

Through the kindness of Mr. Hedington, the local units of Territorials visited the Public Hall, Exmouth, last week to see the Army film, which was being shown there.

Two Fine Vitagraph Films.

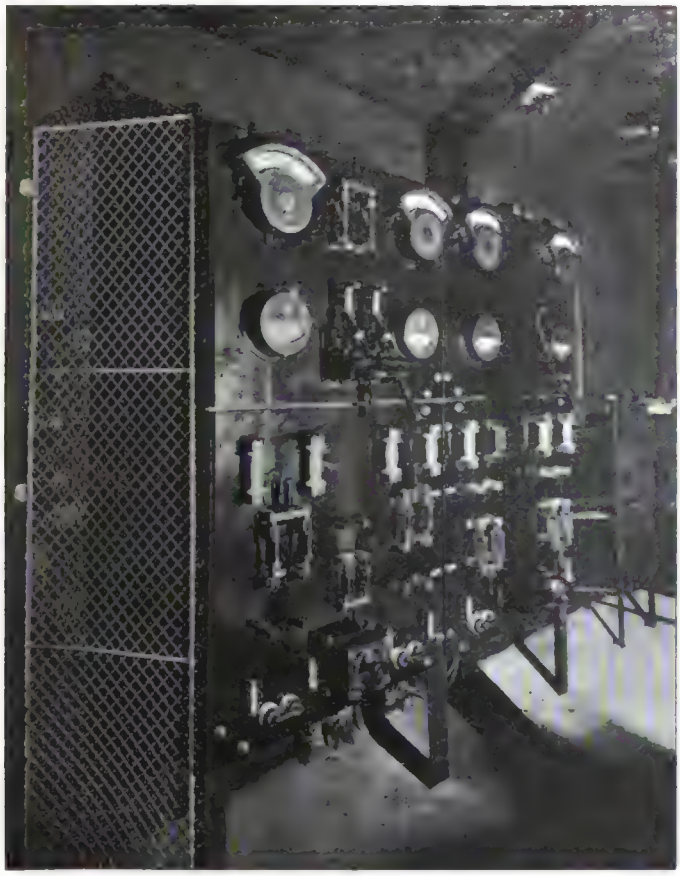
In a wonderfully varied programme at the Vitagraph Company's showrooms this week a couple of two-reel feature films seem to call for special mention as being particularly fine examples of the work of a studio which, commencing with a high standard, has always shown a steady and consistent improvement. These two works, a drama and a comedy, are most effectively contrasted, each showing great ingenuity in story, the perfection of acting, and a photographic quality which could not be excelled. "Iron and Steel" is a drama of commerce, and shows how a hard and unscrupulous manufacturer, using every means to forward his own fortunes, brings suffering and misery to those who serve as his tools, and who imperils even the happiness of his own daughter in his blind determination to out-distance his commercial rivals.

Carl Heiner, a workman in Ludwig Kronitz's factory, has invented a machine gun, and, unable to acquire it at his own price, Kronitz employs Gustav Bopps to steal the plans from Heiner. This brings about a quarrel between the two workmen, and as a result Heiner is charged with assault and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, during which his invalid wife dies. In a state of utter distraction he meets with John Smardon, a steel manufacturer, who is in love with the daughter of Kronitz. Smardon interests himself in Heiner's invention, and they manage to secure the patent rights before Kronitz has had time to prepare his models from the stolen plans. With the assistance of Bopps, the plot which Kronitz has arranged is revealed, and he is relieved to find that he is able to square the matter by his consent to his daughter's marriage with Smardon.

The action of the play gives occasion for the introduction of some very strong dramatic scenes, which are admirably played, particularly by Mr. James Morrison and Mr. Gladden James, who both contribute very effective studies of character. Mr. Maurice Costello in a part which does not make any great demands on his powers, renders it interesting by his personality, and a strong performance is given by Mr. Anders Randolf as Ludwig Kronitz.

"Back to Broadway" is a very delightful and typically American farcical comedy, and is lifted into a position of unusual importance by the very polished acting of the two leading figures.

Cash, a young railroad millionaire, decides to take a holiday on his yacht, and being a young man of unusual eccentricity and originality decides to do so without supplying the Press with any details. It is, of course, unnecessary to say that the American reporter does hear about it, and Cash's absence is taken advantage of by his enemies to convene a meeting to elect some other chairman in his place. He receives news of this by wireless, and packing a few necessaries in a handbag, he starts back to New York in order to attend the meeting and confound the politics of his rivals. He leaves his handbag near the railway bookstall, and having left the yacht in the middle of a game of poker, he finds himself without a cent in his pocket, and with no means of persuading the American official mind of his identity and importance. Stranded in a remote town, he meets a very delightful manicurist of his acquaintance, who has recently left New York, where she has carried on her business, to join a theatrical touring company, and now finds herself stranded like Cash, and with no means of getting back to Broadway. But Bessie is more accustomed to straits of this kind than the guileless millionaire, and how she succeeds in saving the situation and getting Cash home in time to overthrow his rivals' plans makes one of the most delightful comedies that we have witnessed for some time. It is very American, and full of the slang of Broadway, but the slang is so descriptive that it needs no interpretation, and adds immensely to the quaintness of the situations.



Miss Anita Stewart as the charming and resourceful manicurist has a part which fits her like a glove, and must greatly add to the reputation which she has already earned for herself, and Mr. E. K. Lincoln, who seems almost to specialise in impulsive and generous young millionaires, gives a finely finished performance. A troupe of stranded actors add some picturesque comedy, and the company is augmented by imposing crowds of millionaire yachtsmen and railway officials, and other impediments to the road back to Broadway. (Vitagraph Company. "Iron and Steel," released June 8th; length 1,954 ft.; "Back to Broadway," released June 11th; length 1,993 ft.)

CHANNEL ISLAND CINEMAS.

Mr. J. Nisbet, jun., of the Rectory Hall, has taken another film of especial local interest in the annual fooball final between Jersey and Guernsey, which has since been shown at the Rectory Hall. The features at this theatre have been "The Pendulum of Fate," "A Throne or a Wife" and "Big Jim of the Sierras."—The star film at the People's Palace was "Through Many Trials," whilst the "Pathé Gazette" gave the latest events in tabloid form.—At West's Picture House, Jersey, "Tracked Across the Atlantic," "The Salon Tapestries" and "A Ride for a Bride" proved very attractive.

SPECIAL FROM SOUTHPORT.

OPERATING SWITCHBOARD, PALLADIUM, SOUTHPORT.

As illustrative of recent developments in the equipment of the up-to-date operating room, we are enabled herewith to give a brief description of a very handsome switchboard recently installed in the luxurious Palladium, Lord Street, Southport.

In the construction of this notable example, some rather unusual problems had to be faced, and to overcome these difficulties the insulation received very special attention and the board was built upon massive angle iron and of selected slate 2in. in thickness, the whole being placed a considerable distance from the wall. The size of the panels complete is 7 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft. in depth, and the bus bars are of very massive construction.

Into this installation, there entered the question of supplying two Kinemacolor machines and two others for ordinary monochrome projection from two generators, one of 150 amps. and the other of 100 amps. capacity. When it is realised that, by means of an ingenious arrangement of the bus bars and switch gear, either pair of machines or one of each can be "struck up" and worked off either of the boards, while provision has been made for a slide lantern, and, if necessary, a "spot" lime from the room overhead (these of course with their respective resistances), the work will be seen to reflect every credit upon its designer. The voltmeters, seen at the top of each board, are of the illuminated dial type, while each of the ammeters is calibrated to 200 amps.

Between the latter, on each panel, will be noted a magnetic blow-out switch of "G.E.C." pattern, these "set" to trip at a danger limit below that of the enclosed fuses (seen immediately below). Change-over switches for the various circuits, of massive construction, and regulators for projector motors, with switchgear and lantern change-over on each board, complete a very fine piece of engineering work.

The board was designed and executed by Mr. Will Day, of "Kinutilities," 19, Lisle Street, W.C., and erected under his personal supervision at the handsome Southport Theatre, and is undoubtedly one of the largest and best of its kind in the kingdom.

HISTORIC HASTINGS.

At the Royal Cinema de Luxe (formerly the Hippodrome), Mr. Wright did excellent business, this mainly being due to the introduction of the Clarendon "speaking pictures," "Dagobert, the Jester," and "Coming Home," the stories being told with fine dramatic power by Mr. Victor M. Lewisohn (formerly of Sir Herbert Tree's Company). At the last performance on Saturday, he literally "brought down the house," and by special request of the manager gave, as an encore, "I am an Actor." This fine theatre, which seats 2,500, was patronised by many prominent visitors during the week.—A long programme of varied pictures is presented at the Kinema Palace, St. Leonard's. Mr. Geo. W. Redman is comfortably settled here as manager, and conducts affairs admirably. "Joan of Arc" was shown with great sucsess during last week. The Royal visit to Paris was seen in a series of well photographed pictures. The Polegate Steeplechases, which took place on Wednesday, were included on the Thursday, another evidence of managerial smartness. This week "A Terrible Night at Sea" heads an excellent three hours' programme.—The management of the Ore Cinema, Hastings, have had a beautifully toned organ installed, which greatly adds to the enjoyment of the programme. The principal films screened on the Monday were "The Children of Destiny" and "The Trap."—The extraordinary length and quality of the programmes at the Public Hall, Hastings, attract large numbers of visitors both afternoons and evenings. "The Seneschal's Diamond" is the top-liner. There is an excellent innovation at this hall. After each item in the programme the time it takes to show is inscribed, and this gives visitors the opportunity to judge at what time they can leave. An attraction which should prove very popular has been obtained for April 30th in "The Old Curiosity Shop."

Round the Birmingham District.

The New Street Picture House topped the bill last week with the first of the W. W. Jacobs series, "The Third String." The usual educational matinée is increasing in popularity, and a very interesting series was exhibited to patrons last week, including "Hatching by Incubator," which proved a most interesting film. The Oak Room and the Wedgewood cafés are, as ever, favourite resorts, and a very fair sprinkling of Trade members is generally on evidence towards the afternoon tea hour.

Mr. Bradbury, at the Masonic Hall, screened a strong programme last week, in which "A Daughter of the Hills" was prominent as the star picture. A good selection of drama and comedy films completed a most interesting programme.

Mr. Grahamme Cutts, of the Scala Theatre, Smallbrook Street, spared no pains in booming the exhibition of "Orders Under Seal" at his theatre last week. The exterior of the hall was gaily decorated with flags and festoons, which were eminently attractive, the business resulting from this exhibition proved very satisfactory.—A little further out of town, Mr. Parry, of the Moseley Road Picture House, was discovered showing a well selected programme to good business. Mr. Parry is starring the "Love or a Throne" this week.

Calling in to see Mr. Harris, of the Imperial Picture Palace, Moseley Road, I found business very satisfactory, and "In Peril of the Law" was an attractive top-liner. "Little Ned" and "Tiny Tim, the Peacemaker," together with good variety of comic and interest, completed the programme.

Mr. Nelson, of the Sparkhill Pictre Palace, reports that business is proceeding satisfactorily. Last week "Old St. Paul's" was the star picture, and good business was achieved with this film. Mr. Nelson's bill for this week is a remarkably strong one, and it is a wise move on his part to feature an Asta Nielsen film, "The Woman of the People," remembering of old his patrons' partiality for this famous artiste.

The Springfield Picture Playhouse opened on Saturday, under the managament of Mr. Dewey. Two Kalee projectors have been installed, and the opening programme, including "What the Gods Decree" and "A Modern Girl," is being supplied by Mr. Sheridan, of the International Film Company, here.

Mr. Edmunds, of the New Palace Theatre, Summer Hill, provided a strong and interesting programme for his patrons last week. In addition to some very good vaudeville turns, a strong selection of films was exhibited.—The management of the Balsall Heath Picture House made a hit last week when exhibiting "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," and business is reported to have been very good.—The Bristol Street Picture House screened "From Out the Flood," "The Heart of a Heathen" and "Amidst the Jungle" to good houses, and the humorous and interest side of the programme was well catered for.

The management of the Elite Theatre, Bordesley Green, prepared a specially strong programme for its patrons last week, when the "Gunmaker of Moscow" proved a popular "star."—The Edison Kinetophone was a great attraction at the Green Lane Picture House, under the management of Mr. Purnell. "The Temptation of Faust" and the "Ohio Minstrels" were popular items. In addition to these features, "The Hundred Days" film was exhibited.—Mr. Anthony, of the Newtown Palace, screened "The Road to Ruin" to very interested audiences last week, together with "Amid Kentucky Hills."

Mr. Samuelson, of the Royal Film Agency, reports excellent business with his attractive line of exclusives, among which are "The Bible," "The Open Road," "Turned Adrift," and last, but not least, "Sixty Years a Queen," for which all dates are booked until May. Mr. Samuelson, as I have already stated, will be showing his stuff regularly at his new show-room at the premises recently vacated by Messrs. Brockliss, in Corporation Street, on Tuesdays, when he will be pleased to see all customers. Glancing through the April purchases of the Royal Film Agency, I find that some very excellent features are included. Two copies of "Love's Sunset," "The Lure of Gold," "The Slave of his Past," and "The Golden Beetle," are prominent features, and a very wide selection of shorter drama, comedy and comic films has been purchased.

TRADE NOTES.

Mr. Bryant has left Messrs. Cross's, Limited, and the branch is now under new control. Business here, I understand, is very good, and the "Romance of the Cave Dwellers" has been achieving very satisfactory bookings in the district. Messrs. Cross are also handling copies of the well-known Hepworth pictures, "Justice," "The Old Curiosity Shop," and "The Heart of Midlothian."

On Wednesday last several interesting Trade shows took place here. In the morning the Alerta Film Company gave an exhibition of "The Fatal Enchantress" at the Scala Theatre, when a good reception was accorded to the film.—Mr. Heath, in charge of the film hire department at the House of Walturdaw, was showing "The Red Club" and "Hearts Adrift" during the morning, and tells me that these two films are realising good business.—Mr. Mitchell, of the Ideal Film Company, screened "The Jew" before a goodly gathering of his customers in his private show room, Station Street.—The International Film Company, Limited, gave a Trade show on the same day of "The Murdock Murder Trial."

With regard to the Star Picture House—which had such a successful opening on April 5th—owing to pressure on space, I have not yet been able to review this, but hope to do so at a future date. Suffice it to say that Mr. E. R. Yeulett, the manager, is realising good business, and as last week's programme was exceptionally strong, including "Fall of the Third Empire" and "At the Hour of Dawn."

Cinematograph Exhibitor's Association.

Minutes of General Council Meeting.

A meeting of the General Council was held at Broadmead House, Panton Street, Haymarket, S.W., on Tuesday, April 21st, when amongst those present were Dr. W. Fowler Pettie (in the chair), Messrs. A. Clozenberg (Middlesex District branch), Arthur J. Gale, Horace Livermore (Bristol and West of England), James Welsh (Glasgow and West of Scotland), E. M. Barker, Bertram C. Grant (representing R. C. Buchanan, Edinburgh and East of Scotland), J. Harrison (Manchester), M. J. McVittie (Northern Central), E. W. Pashley Peall, F. W. Ogden Smith, etc.

The Council considered the following resolution passed by the Executive Committee:—

> "That this Executive Committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland strongly recommends the General Council to promote a new Bill for the cinematograph trade embodying all necessary and desirable conditions for safe-guarding the public and securing uniformity of administration throughout the kingdom."

It was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Dr. W. Fowler Pettie, seconded by Mr. Horace Livermore:—

> "That this General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland resolves to promote an amendment of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, substituting registration for licensing, and embodying all necessary and desirable conditions for safeguarding the public and securing uniformity of regulations throughout the kingdom."

A special sub-committee, consisting of Dr. W. Fowler Pettie and Messrs. M. J. McVittie and J. Harrison, was appointed to make arrangements for implementing the resolution.

It having been agreed by the Executive Committee to supply the certificate of the Board of Film Censors to members free of charge, it was resolved by the Council to give its full support to the terms and conditions upon which the certificate is issued.

Further action with respect to the Liverpool case was resolved upon unanimously.

Minutes of Executive Committee Meeting.

The Executive Committee of the Association met at Broadmead House, Panton Street, Haymarket, S.W., on Wednesday, April 22nd, when there was a large attendance.

The minutes of the previous meeting (April 8th) having been read and confirmed, and after the consideration of informal business, a discussion took place with reference to the contract which the Association has with the Société des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique, and, further, with reference to the Performing Rights' Society. Adjourned for solicitor's opinion.

It was resolved, on the motion of Mr. E. M. Barker, seconded by Mr. J. Harrison, that the District Branches be asked to report to the Secretary all complaints arising in connection with local authorities and others, particularly with reference to carrying out regulations.

A letter having been read from a manufacturing firm which had been sent to a town clerk suggesting to the local authorities the desirability of utilising the town hall for cinema purposes, it was pointed out that this action was a direct encouragement to municipal bodies to enter into competition with exhibitors. It was considered in the highest degree unfair to stimulate rate-aided competition, and the Secretary was instructed to direct the attention of the firm in question to the resolution passed on March 18, 1914, in which the Executive Committee declared against municipal trading of this kind.

Attention having been called to the proposal to hold another Cinematograph Exhibition in London, the Secretary was instructed to inform the Manufacturers' and Renters' Associations and the promoters that the Committee was opposed to the policy of holding such exhibitions, considering that they tended to stimulate further competition, and had had a prejudicial effect upon the business of exhibitors.

A contest in connection with an evening paper having been brought before the meeting, it was resolved, on a majority, that this was a matter which only concerned exhibitors individually, and that, as it was not in the collective interests of the members to further the scheme, the support of the Association be withheld.

A large number of members were enrolled.

COMEDIES

In the Manchester District.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

The Deansgate Picture House prospers under the management of Mr. Beecher, and few seats are to be found vacant at any time. A carefully selected programme to suit the particular audience frequenting this house is an essential that is studied to good purpose, whilst the charming tearoom and balcony on the first floor are winning their way to public favour. In the "Current Events" last week a fresh series daily was given of incidents connected with the King and Queen's visit to Paris, one of the principal films in addition being "The Invisible Hand." "Spartacus," shown recently, proved very successful. This week chief interest centres in "Officer John Donovan," although "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake" makes a good second. Mr. C. Arthur Pearson's appeal for Braille books for the blind was very considerately thrown on the screen among the announcements.

After an absence of several weeks in the Midlands, Mr. E. J. Kenney is back again at the Bijou, Erskine Street, Stretford Road, where business is as prosperous as ever. This is the leading hall in Manchester for exclusives, and has put on some really splendid programmes of late. Remarking that the pictures seemed exceptionally clear, I discovered the reason to be the combined effects of the Mirroroide screen and a new Gaumont machine, for both of which Mr. Kenney had only the highest praise. The more important pictures shown last week were "In Mid Atlantic" and "One Hundred Days in Napoleon's Campaign." A film which is being looked forward to with more than usual interest will be shown on April 30th for three days. This is "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," which has been booked exclusive to this district. Some of the most successful pictures shown recently at the Bijou were "The Wastrel," "In the Hands of London Crooks," "Give Us This Day——," "Chelsea 7750," and "Love's Sunset."

Like the majority of other picture houses, the New Globe, Cornbrook Street, Brooks's Bar, shared in the rush of business Easter week, and found the premises for the time being only too small to accommodate all who wished to see the capital entertainment provided. Messrs. Bliss and Morris have an exceptionally fine Brinsmead grand at this hall, and the music provided is of first-class quality. Last week "The Story of David Greig" and "The Shadow of Guilt" were the chief items of a programme comprising a variety of pictures to suit all tastes. This week "The Golden Beetle" and "Diamonds of the Duchess" are likely to appeal most to the audience. Mr. Thomas Robinson, the acting manager, is one who looks well after the comfort and convenience of his patrons.

The orchestra, consisting of a piano, violin, and 'cello, was giving some excellent music to a large audience when I called at the Imperial, Chorlton Road, last week. At this house the music is always a feature, but what is of even more importance, the quality of the pictures is equally as good. During the first portion of the week, after "Tales of Hoffman" as the overture, the most important of the seven pictures which followed were "Trapped" and "The Filly." In the latter part "Mystery of St. Martin's Bridge" and "Withering Roses" were the best. This week an exclusive which is bound to create uncommon interest is "Primitive Man," whilst to follow later on there are two worth mentioning — Sherlock Holmes in "Stolen Papers" and "Two Tramp Dentists." "Orders Under Seal" is announced for May 4th.

Mr. J. C. Patterson, manager of the Salford Cinema, reports a magnificent attendance during Easter, and could have filled the place several times over through the holidays. One of the improvements recently made is an orchestra of three performers—piano, violin, and 'cello—and another to be undertaken shortly is the erection of a verandah outside in order to shelter the queues during inclement weather. Very good houses were experienced last week, when "The Black Nissen" and "Her Father's Story" were shown. This week the programme includes "The Great Turf Sensation" and "Terrible Night at Sea." Among the several good things to be shown shortly is "Moths." Of recent pictures, "The Lure of London" was one of the most prominent successes.

After the rush of Easter, business was a little quieter during the past week at both the Oxford Picture House and that in Market Street—that is to say, there was a better chance of finding a seat. The former had "His Fireman's Conscience" and "Hilarities" as the two leading pictures of a programme full of interest and variety, and Market Street found "The Third String" (by W. W. Jacobs) fulfil their expectations.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAID:

N. Y. HERALD.

"Brewster's Millions" has many thrills. It is the briskest kind of diversion with plenty of thrills and a superabundance of humour.

THE BILLBOARD.

Splendid—Technically as perfect as one might hope to see. Shows expert direction which is not seen in average production.

N. Y. REVIEW.

"Brewster's Millions" contains some magnificent scenes, and is acted by a most capable cast. It is perfect in technique, detail and photography. It abounds in delightful situations.

THE N. Y. GLOBE.

If you are downhearted, see "Brewster's Millions." I laughed yesterday at "Brewster's Millions," and when an editor laughs there's something doing.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD.

"Brewster's Millions" bears a resemblance to the greatest comedy of adventure ever devised by the brain of man in extravagance of motive, in the lack of self-consciousness—in its humour—and the mingled shrewdness and credulity of characterization. A running fire of humour, an amusing plot—plenty of adventure, admirable characterization and charm of treatment, "Brewster's Millions" is a successful comedy.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Brewster's Millions" the first in the field—The Lasky Company has set the pace which all their competitors must follow. It will be hard to lose money with "Brewster's Millions," as it is for Brewster to lose his million. Every audience that witnesses it will feel rich in enjoyment. "Brewster's Millions" stands as a model to producers of comedies. Not often has so gifted a comedian as Abeles appeared on the screen

N. Y. MIRROR.

"Brewster's Millions" is distinguished from the conventional screen drama by the absence of lapses into stage business. Most of the settings are unlike what one has seen before in pictures.

"CABIRIA."

In the company of a score or so other pressmen, we sat one afternoon last week in the Tyler Film Company's showroom to see for the first time the Itala Company's stupendous production, "Cabiria," the historical drama, written by Gabriele d'Annunzio, the famous Italian poet, which is to be presented to the public with an elaborate and ambitious musical accompaniment. The performance lasted three full hours, yet there was not one of us sitting in the spellbound silence of the crowded room who could have left before the end was reached, or, indeed, who did not feel sorry when that end had come. For "Cabiria" is verily a triumph of triumphs. Nothing like it has ever yet been seen, or even attempted. Colossal, gorgeous, prodigiously wonderful, it must be said to stand alone where film spectacles are concerned.

Apart from its own intrinsic excellence, moreover, the complete production of "Cabiria," as it will be seen, and heard, in the theatres, with its special musical setting, will be of unique interest. We have often suggested in these columns that if composer and film producer were to collaborate intelligently a new and very wonderful form of art might result, transcending even the greatest works of the ordinary operatic stage. Hitherto the producer has always made his films quite independently of the composer who afterwards interprets them, according to his own ideas, in music; but in the case of "Cabiria," we understand, the creators of both the visual and the musical sides have consulted together. "Cabiria," therefore, should be unlike anything that has been known before on the operatic stage, the concert hall, or the cinematograph theatre; it is a Pictorial Music Drama, a Visualised Tone Poem, a Film Opera. In view of the importance which the musical side will play in the whole entertainment, it is rather unfortunate, perhaps, that, not having heard the music, we should be compelled to review the spectacular portion of the production only in the present notice. On the other hand, it is quite certain that merely as a cinematograph picture this wonderful film surpasses everything hitherto seen—if it is possible to make any comparisons in connection with so unprecedented a work, which, strictly speaking, it is not.

Before attempting to give an appreciation of this production, it may be not altogether out of place to mention that its cost has been estimated at nearly £50,000, and that a year is said to have been occupied in its manufacture. Price is seldom a safe index to value in art, but in the present case one can only say that these details of expenditure seem moderate in relation to the result which, from an artistic point of view, must be regarded as priceless. All the "supers" used in the play, we are informed, were subjected to physical training for three months to fit them for their parts, whilst the huge negro, who was selected to play Maciste on account of his huge stature and enormous strength, was originally a porter. The actor playing Archimedes is nearly seventy years of age. He was engaged six months before he was required in order that his hair and beard might be trained and wigs thus be dispensed with—a point which typifies the complete realism and truthfulness so remarkable throughout the film. The musical setting for the picture has been composed by Signor Manlio Mazza, whilst for the scene in which a sacrifice is offered to Baal Moloch, the Fire God, a special "Fire Symphony" has been composed by Signor Ildebrando da Parma. When the work in its complete form is submitted to the public, the musical part of the performance, we are told, will be rendered by an orchestra of eighty and a choir of fifty.

In preparing his scenario (which is the first he has written specially for the cinematograph, although he has previously sanctioned adaptations from some of his literary works), Signor d'Annunzio has woven the dramatic story of Cabiria, a Sicilian maiden, and Fulvio Axilla, her Roman champion and subsequent lover, into an elaborate and ornate historical background, which embraces some of the principal events of the second Punic War, including Hannibal's passage of the Alps, the burning of the Roman fleet at Syracuse by means of Archimedes' sun machine, the burning of the Numidian and Carthaginian armies' camps by Scipio, the fall of Cirta (the modern Constantine), the tragic suicide of Sophonisba, the Carthaginian Cleopatra, and the defeat of Hannibal at Zama. Few historical periods are so full of varied and complex incident as the seventeen years of the second Punic War between Rome and Carthage. A pictorial reconstruction of all its many events in logical sequence would occupy even more than the 12,000 ft. of film allotted to "Cabiria," and it is not, therefore, to be wondered at that the latter does not pretend to offer a detailed record of this great epoch. At the same time, many of its episodes are depicted with such vividness and magnificence (often tending to preponderate unduly the simple and comparatively unimportant story of Cabiria) that one feels the interest of the film for the average spectator would be largely increased by the addition of further explanatory sub-titles, or, better still, by the issue in connection with the film of a small leaflet giving a brief resume of the chief events of the period in question. It is not everyone who retains a clear remembrance of the complex happenings of the Second Punic War, and the present subtitles of the film, although charming, distinguished, and entirely worthy of their subject in their poetical phraseology, will not always be very simple to digest for those who are not already fully conversant with the political situations to which they allude.

It is not, however, as a story, nor as an historical record, that "Cabiria" is likely primarily to impress those who see it, attractive and notable as it is in both these respects. Before everything else, it is a marvellous spectacular production, so beautiful, so magnificent, and so utterly unlike any other work yet seen, that, even were it entirely lacking in dramatic appeal, it would still be one of the greatest pictures ever set upon the screen. Its spectacular splendour is not merely the result of lavish outlay upon scene building, costumes, and travel from place to place to secure suitable natural backgrounds, though in none of these respects has expense nor trouble been spared. In addition to the perfection obtainable by pains and money, we have the most extraordinary skill in reproduction, which has made possible all sorts of wonderful effects quite beyond the scope of the ordinary stage manager, and which certainly marks the very highest point yet reached in technique by the cinematograph photographer. To describe these effects in detail, or to speculate as to how they are accomplished, would take a great deal more space than we have at our disposal. We must reluctantly leave our readers to take our word for it that nothing like several of these effects has even been achieved before, even speaking purely from a photographic point of view—and we feel confident that they will agree with us when they see the film for themselves.

Having said that limitations of space, not to mention those of language, debar us from entering upon a full description of the film's many wonders, we will not attempt to retail even the story of "Cabiria." But here are brief impressions of just a few episodes, selected as they occur to us from the mass of consistently notable material the picture contains:—An eruption of Etna during the night. Bubbling from the jagged crater comes a fiery torrent of molten lava, leaping like a fountain of flame against the black sky, and then falling in blazing rivers down the gnarled sides of the mountain until it scorches the faces of the terrified crowds which are seen flying for safety along its base.—The exterior of the Temple of Moloch, a vast structure whose entrance takes the form of a gaping mouth rimmed with sharp teeth. The worshippers pass in, demonstrating by their proportionate insignificance the great size of the building.—The interior of the Temple. At first dense blackness. Then a hundred spots of flame glow out from the obscurity, at first faintly, but gradually growing in intensity until the whole place is lit by these tongues of fire, which reveal a lofty temple thronged with people, who prostrate themselves before a mighty image of Moloch. The stomach of the god falls open, showing a blazing chasm into which an officiating priest casts naked children as an offering to the deity. (Historians tell us, by the way, that the children were placed in the god's brazen arms and allowed to roll thence into the flames. But this is a very small point.)—Among the snowy peaks of the Alps. Hannibal passes with his army.—The Lybian desert. An undulating waste of blown sand. Suddenly flames glow along the horizon. It is the reflection of a great conflagration, as the result of which 40,000 soldiers perished, either by fire or by the swords of Rome.

We have, unfortunately, left ourselves all too little room in which to praise the masterly acting of the film. Seldom has one seen so large a company of artistes, all of whom were so excellent in their respective parts. The savage warriors of ancient Rome and Carthage, their princely generals, their beautiful, passionate women—all are realised before us with that wonderful, vital, spontaneous art for which Italian players are famous. It is, perhaps, undesirable to particularise when each individual performer should be mentioned if it were possible, but it is difficult to refrain from making some note of the magnificent performance given by the actress who plays Sophonisba, the tragic Carthaginian maiden whose wedding gift from her husband was a cup of poison.

Lastly, let us record an earnest hope that the somewhat unwieldy proportions of this marvellous picture will not prevent it from being seen throughout the length and breadth of the country. There is no film in existence more certain to give sheer delight to all who witness it, nor any more sure to promote the dignity and honour of the cinematograph as a great art. "Cabiria" is the final answer to the picture theatre's critics!

THE BRIGHTON HALLS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Since my last batch of notes appeared in THE BIOSCOPE, there has been an important managerial change at Brighton. Mr. Cecil Frere, who formerly controlled the Academy Picture Palace, West Street, now directs the fortunes of the Grand Concert Hall in the same thoroughfare—a vast building with seating accommodation for close upon 2,000 people. The appointment is a very popular one for Mr. Frere is a local man, whose sterling personal qualities have won him hosts of friends. Some capital programmes have been provided at the Concert Hall lately. Last week "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" was a big draw and this week's attractions include "The Battle of Gettysburg," "The Forgotten Melody" and "The Port of Doom." Under the new management the reputation for good music which this popular hall has always enjoyed, is being fully maintained, the selections of Mr. Slatter's orchestra, Signor Bioletti's violin solos, and the military band nights on Wednesday being much enjoyed.

Another of the maanagerial changes that have been rather frequent of late in Brighton has ocurred at the Court Theatre, of which Mr. W. J. Grimes is lessee. This handsome building is now controlled by Mr. N. J. Coverdale, formerly of the Grand Concert Hall, where enterprise is resulting in some first-rate films being exhibited. "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" was one of the most popular recently shown. Music-hall competitions have been a great feature of the arrangements at the Court. One of these, open to both professionals and amateurs, was held last week and crowded houses were the rule.

The builders having at last completed their operations at the Palladium, the building with its balconies and symbolical figure, cupolas and the canopy projecting over the pavement, adds greatly to the attractiveness of the western section of the front. There is a handsome marble flight of steps leading to the long vestibule, and I notice that posters have been banished, the announcements of the entertainment to be found within being confined to plainly printed bills in handsome brass frames. Mr. Crown is fortunate in having a great range of wall space at either side of the building for the display of the pictorial posters advertising his films without using the front of the theatre for this purpose, and it seems to me that the latter gains much in dignity of appearance in consequence. "Richard Wagner" was much enjoyed by Palladium patrons last week. The orchestra was augmented in order that the musical accompaniments might be given with full effect.

I mentioned the other week that the Corporation had reduced the charges for electricity supplied to the local cinemas to 3d. per unit. From a chat I had the other day with Mr. Herbert Gardner, manager of the Imperial, St. James's Street, I gather that feeling was very keen on this subject among those who control the various picture theatres. Naturally, they failed to see the justice of paying 4d. per unit when power was being supplied to other consumers at 1d. per unit, or a fraction over, and they were quite prepared, had the Town Council remained obdurate, with a scheme under which each theatre would generate its own electricity, by means of gas engines supplied through the Brighton Gas Company.

Some fixtures of rather novel character have been arranged in connection with the Select Palace Cinema, North Street. A local lodge of Druids is holding a combined night of music and pictures next Friday, a feature of the programme being a film entitled "The Progress of Druidism." On the 15th, the Brighton and County Harriers, an important Athletic Club, are holding a gala night, which promises to be a big success, when a combined musical and pictorial programme will be staged.

The Academy Picture Palace, West Street, so ably managed by Mr. H. B. Parkinson scored heavily last week with "The Old Curiosity Shop."

It cannot be said that cinema proprietors in this district are behind hand when the cause of charity is in question. Last week Mr. A. C. Tulk kindly lent the Bijou Theatre, Shoreham, for a concert in aid of the widows and children of the men who lost their lives in the wreck of the ss. Miown, off the neighbouring town of Southwick recently. The excellent programme included several films specially selected by Mr. Tulk, and the financial result was very satisfactory.

AN ATRACTIVE AD.

An artistic booklet has just been issued by the Gaumont Film Hire Service which is certainly a good piece of advertising and, in a golden cover, directs attention to a brief statement of facts concerning the enormous extent of the firm's connection. Just a few candid phrases and a neatly worded little poem are the contents.

A CINES PROGRAMME.

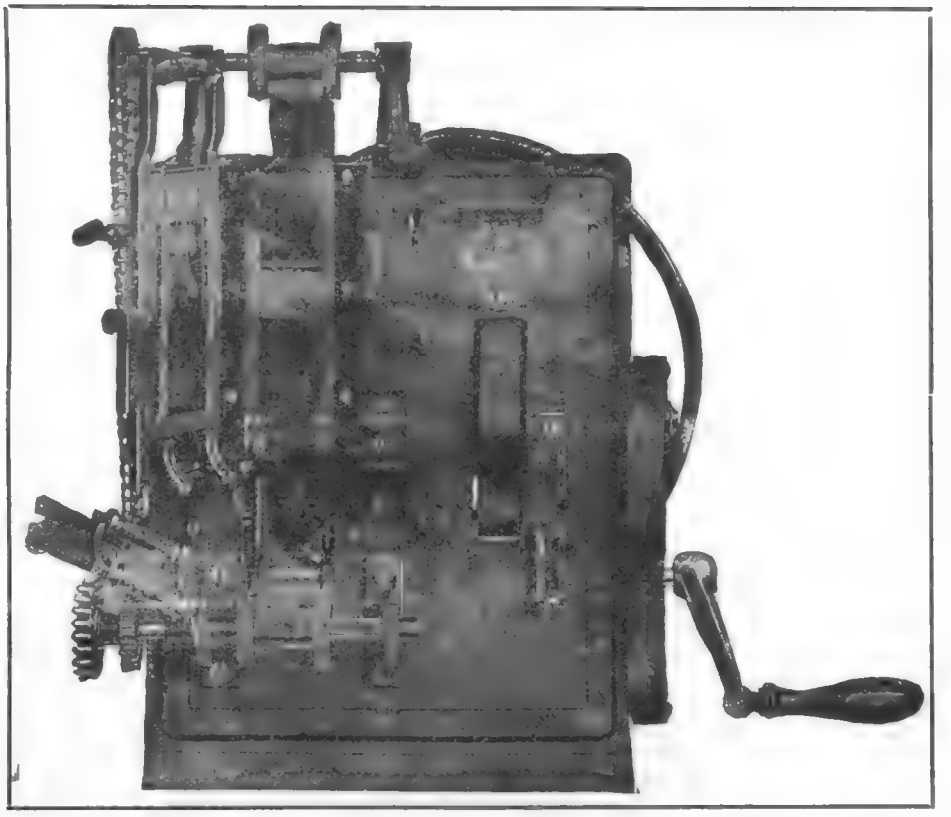
One of the most delightful programmes to be seen during a visit round the showrooms is invariably that shown weekly in the Cines Company's very tasteful premises, for the visitor is always rewarded by a short list of films of moderate length, excellent variety, and always on a very high level of artistic and technical merit. The last week's selection includes a strong and intensely interesting drama, splendidly mounted and acted; a charming little study of child life; a beautifully coloured scenic subject; an amusing comedy; and a laughable farce; certainly a wide range of subjects, and each showing the same careful attention to the details of production and the qualities of the photography. Moreover, the acting of this company is always of a very high average, and in the strongest drama or the most trivial farce never falls below the level.

In "The Gambler," a two-reel film of special importance, the chief part is that of a wealthy banker, who, goaded beyond endurance by his only son's reckless habit of gambling, cuts him adrift with a generous supply of money, and decides to have no further intercourse with him. He meets a charming young widow, who, he believes, may be induced to console him eventually for the loss of his son, but he finds later that the girl and boy have met and fallen in love with each other, and by a stupendous self-sacrifice he forfeits his own happiness for that of his son and the woman he loves. The part affords a chance for strong emotional acting, and the result is a performance of great dignity, charm, and pathos. The play is luxuriously mounted, and the banker's early love scenes are used for the introduction of many views of Rome of exceptional historic interest, and quite remarkable as examples of the perfection of camera work.

SCENE FROM THE GAMBLERS.

"Cinessino's Grandpa's Pipe" is a pretty and somewhat pathetic little study of the close affection existing between a little boy and his old grandfather, who is treated somewhat harshly by his thoughtless and unsympathetic daughter-in-law. The little boy's attempts to provide the old man with the small comforts he is deprived of give rise to many pretty scenes, and ultimately have the effect of softening the woman's heart and rendering her more amenable in the future. The scenes, round and about a humble cottage in the country, are picturesque, and little Cinessino, a child of about six years, is evidently as talented as he is beautiful. It is only a short film, but is one which is certain to be popular wherever it is shown.

"Lea as Cook" shows how three wretched, helpless bachelors, endeavouring in vain to order their own domestic affairs with something like peace and comfort, acquire the services of Lea as cook and housekeeper, with the result that order is produced out of chaos, and their hitherto comfortless meals are made dainty and attractive. Unfortunately, Lea is also dainty and attractive, and the three friends are turned into deadly rivals. One is rendered happy by her favour, though it is not obvious wherein his special attractions lay, and before starting on her honeymoon Lea herself writes out an advertisement for a cook. The remaining pair are left with a cook who provides them with every material comfort and no possible inducement to vie with each other for other than gastronomic favours. A merry farce, played in the right spirit of burlesque.



Some beautiful views are shown of "Recco and Comggli," in the Italian Riviera. These are exquisitely coloured, and include some magnificent studies of a rocky coast washed by the sea. The pictures of the breaking waves receive great additional beauty from the very effective arrangement of light and shade, and make this a scenic subject of unusual interest.

EVENTS AT EVESHAM.

The management at the Grand Cinema spare no effort to keep up a high standard. "Back to Life" was a film which attracted special attention. Another very fine film was "Midst Raging Beasts." For the early portion of this week "Sapho" was presented.

LINES FROM LEEDS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Coulthard, of the Greta Film Service, Barnsley, has found Leeds to be a desirable centre for his Trade views and again requisitioned the Theatre de Luxe recently for showing "The Red Club," one of the very exciting type of pictures. Messrs. Pathé Frères gave a Trade screening of "The Curse of War" at the Savoy, and now that the taste of West Riding people in aviatics has been whetted by several visits of famous flying men to the district, a picture dealing as does this film, with war in the air and rich in all the thrills involved in such a subject, is certain to be a big "draw."—The Wray Film Agency, Limited, utilised the cosy Theatre de Luxe for the Trade exhibition of their two new exclusives, "The Lady of Monsoreau" and the "Albion Dance" film, the Yorkshire rights of both of which have been secured by Wrays, from the Albion Exclusives, Limited.—I hear rumours of a prospect of a new film-producing enterprise in Leeds, which will, I understand, be established in conjunction with the Wray Film Agency.—Messrs. Chadwick and Watson, the well-known picture theatre architects, of Leeds, inform me that the Londesborough Theatre, Scarborough, which is undergoing very extensive reconstruction, will be reopened in June. Messrs. Chadwick and Watson have received instructions from the New Century Pictures to prepare plans for reconstructions of parts of St. George's Hall, Bradford, and the company's theatre at Barnsley.—The New Century Films, Limited, are handling the Yorkshire rights of "A Lady of Quality," produced by the Famous Players Company. The New Century also hold rights for Yorkshire and the Midlands for "Dr. Satan," which is expected to be realised about Whitsuntide.—The British Isles Exclusives are featuring "Dante's Inferno," in which they are doing well throughout the country.—In Yorkshire and Lancashire, Messrs. Kohn and Whitelock are successfully running "The Great Railway Smash."—The Ideal are running "Joan of Arc," and one of their new exclusives is "The Jew," which is "taking" exceedingly well in the big Jewish quarter of Leeds. The Ideal have recently made big strides in this district and are opening out widely in Yorkshire. A branch in Sheffield is under contemplation, whilst Derby and Leicester, I am told, will probably also be tackled in the near future.

The character of the fare provided by the Leeds showmen is not being allowed to deteriorate at all with the coming of the summer, and what is, to some extent, looked upon as the quiet season for the picture theatres. At the Grand Assembly Rooms, Mr. Harry Hogton, with his usual lively appreciation of an opportunity, seized upon the recent spell of hot, sunny days to display prominently on his front doorstep a notice, "It's much cooler inside." Mr. Hogton drew big audiences to see "Thor, Lord of the Jungle." He is still running the Kinetophone with marked success.—At the Picture House in Briggate, Mr. S. Firth, the Provincial Cinematograph Theatre Company's travelling manager, who is still in charge here, screened the film version of "The Third String" (W. W. Jacobs), and is to show the whole series in turn. —"The Master Crook Outwitted by a Child" was a leading feature of Mr. H. Broughton at the Coliseum, and "The Golden Beetle" was very well received.—At the Savoy Mr. J. Rogerson screened "In the Coils of the Python" and "Amidst Raging Beasts" as leading lines in big programmes.—At the Theatre de Luxe, Mr. "Teddie" Davies featured a travel picture, "A Trip Through India," whilst "A Romance of Old Brittany" was an uncommon subject which was greatly appreciated. Mr. Davies will shortly be making a speciality of a series of the pictures featuring George Mozart, the well-known music-hall artiste.—At the Harehills Picture House, Mr. H. J. Dacre boomed "The King Can Do No Wrong" and "Withering Roses," whilst "Tess" and "In the Hands of London Crooks" were secured to follow.—Messrs. Brooks and Smith top-lined "The Diver," whilst two further dramas of value were "The Stolen Plans" and "Jim Dolan's Escape."—At the cosy Haddon Hall, at Burley Hill, Mr. Greucock secured "After Many Years" and "A Romance of Old Brittany."—For the people of the Beeston Hill district, "The Diamonds of the Duchess" and "The Hermit" were to be seen at the Malvern.—At the King's, Holbeck, "Was She Justified?" is a new feature to Leeds, which was well worth while.—Messrs. Barnes and Taylor, of the Royal at Stanningley, are making very great enlargements and alterations.—The Clarendon "speaking pictures" have been secured for the Golden Cross Picturedrome.

Mr. C. P. Metcalfe is maintaining his run of big subjects at the Armley, and had record business with "The Golden Beetle," whilst the star attraction of the succeeding programme was "Eileen of Erin," an Irish drama of great appeal. At the Picturedrome, Wortley Road, Mr. G. Mann screened "A Victim of the Mormons" and secured a valuable exclusive in "Madam Satan." At the Crown, Mr. Moorhouse's popular hall in New Wortley, "In the Hands of London Crooks" has been heavily featured, and "Thieves and the Cross" was shown to big houses.—In Upper Wortley, at the Silver Royd, "The Tie of Blood" was a successful top-liner, and "Nick Winter and the Lost Prince" was also much applauded.

SOUTHAMPTON MEMS.

There is a strong dramatic interest in "His Hour of Triumph," which thoroughly gripped the audience at the Alexandra, above Bar. There were two dramas, three comics, and two travel films in each of the programmes presented by Mr. Percy Miller last week. On Monday "The Gunmaker of Moscow" and "Northern Hearts" were the principal items. "War on Cattle Range" had a fine reception on Thursday.—"The Wastrel," a fine 5,000 ft. coloured drama, in five parts, was shown twice a night to full houses by Mr. H. Bromley at the Empire Theatre, French Street. "Joan of Arc," another capital film of equal length was screened last week to delighted audiences.—Mr. W. Saunders, chief operator at the new Winchester Picture House—which by the way is doing remarkably well—is well-known in the local halls, having worked at the Alexandra, Woolston Picture Palace, and the Southampton Picture Palace, before proceeding to the Brockley Cinema, whence he was transferred to Winchester. All these halls are run by the same company.

PARISIAN NOTES.

By JOHN CHER.

The camera-men had a busy time last week recording the visit of our King and Queen, and some smart work was accomplished. On Tuesday there was a rush to get the negatives of the arrival of King George and Queen Mary off in time for the American mail. The Hearst-Selig animated journal had four operators stationed at different parts of the route, and although the film did not get to the dark-rooms till after half past 6, the developed negative was packed up at 7.30. Amongst the many firms who took pictures of their Majesties, mention should be made of Messrs. Rapid Film, who, in supplying a well-known London company, showed themselves to be a most up-to-date and resourceful house.

The "Visit of the King and Queen to Paris" is the film of the week, and Parisians are flocking to the cinemas to once again give vent to their warm feelings concerning the Entente Cordiale. It is no exaggeration to say that the cinematograph, by constantly depicting events in England, has helped to stimulate the French people's appreciation of the English, and cement the amicable relations between the two countries.

It is fitting that following the visit of the King and Queen, an all-British film should, for the first time, occupy premier place at the greatest picture theatre in the French capital—the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome. The production is the London Film Company's "House of Temperley," which has been rented to Messrs. Gaumont by the Eclair Company. "The House of Temperley" is one of the biggest successes ever shown here. Not for a long time shall I forget the reception this stirring British picture received on its initial exhibition at the Gaumont Palace.

Further proof that Germany is forging ahead in the film world was given to me the other night at the Passy Cinema, where Sagt and Union pictures were distinctly palatable to the spectators' tastes. At the same house I saw "Maud's Glove," featuring the English actress, Miss Compton.

The Colisée, where, by-the-bye, Rainey's hunt pictures were again screened some time ago, seems to have successfully rounded the corner, and is now well on the road to fame. The delightful picture theatre in the Champs Elysees boasts of a very fashionable clientèle, and every night a continuous stream of automobiles flows to its doors.

Herr Messter, director of the great firm which bears his name, was in Paris recently. He spent the major portion of his brief stay with Mr. Paul Ladewig, the well-known agent for Messter and other films.

Monsieur Dureau, editor of the Cine Journal, has received an interesting letter from Herr Alexander Ortony, director of the Wiener Film Zentrale, Vienna, concerning the censorship of films. There being a most severe censorship in the Austrian capital, Herr Sartony naturally writes with considerable feeling. He exhorts the French Trade to take immediate steps to fight the evil which threatens to throw the industry into disorder. "The best proof," he says, "of the incompetency of censors is that a film which has been banned in Vienna is tolerated at Prague or Trieste. But that is not all, there are five censors in Vienna, and while one will sanction a film another will "blue pencil" it without reserve. Thus, at the present time there is no law, and it is obvious that the censorship cannot be a purely abitrary affair."

Although Parisians were slow to realise the value of "Life Targets," now that the apparatus has been launched here, its success is already patent. Following a demonstration before the military authorities, a moving picture rifle range is now being used by the army at Vincennes.

In compliance with instructions from Louis Aubert, the police seized last week a copy of "Quo Vadis?" which was being shown at Paris picture theatre.

Mr. Prieur, who has offices at 3, rue Rossini, is booming the Blaché feature "The Star of India."

The first film destined to instruct young police constables was taken in the streets of Paris last week, under the direction of Monsieur Peyrot de Gachons, who is in charge of the Police School. A dozen or so automobiles and vehicles were requisitioned to represent a scene of congested traffic. An Actor playing the part of a careless pedestrian while reading a paper stepped in front of a motor, and was knocked to the ground. So realistic was the incident that for a moment M. Joltrain, the traffic inspector, thought that a real accident had occurred. The crowd swarmed round the motor whilst an agent lifted up the "wounded" man. Then another member of the force went through the usual formalities. All the time the cameras registered the proceedings, and by the time this is in print a score of men in blue will have had their first lesson on the A.B.C. of street accidents.

The Francia Company has secured the services of Monsieur Pougoud of the Chatelet Theatre. He will act in series of broad film farces under the name of Pass Partout.

The Photodrama Company has just received four big films, which have been specially made by the Ambrosio Company. These are "Othello," "Madame Du Barry," "The Lion of Venice" and "The Destruction of Carthage."

Charles Mary has secured the rights of Ambrosia's "Saturnin Farandoul."

R. Palisetty, of the Filma Company, has secured a new child actress known as "Ginette."

It is, of course, the Theatre Odeon that is without a manager, and not the Theatre Antoine, as stated in these notes last week.

The Société Internationale de Films et Cinemas Magic, has been formed in Constantinople, with a capital of 250,000 frs. (£ 9,000).

Max Linder will open early in the autumn a magnificent picture theatre on the site of the Pathé Journal Cinema. The new hall will have 10,000 seats. Cinematograph sketches by the celebrated comedian will be presented on the stage.

Mr. Paul Ladewig left last Saturday night on a flying trip to Barcelona.

The Cines series of moving pictures of Rome are quite the finest examples of cinematography it has been my pleasure to see. What a capital lecture could be given on the great city of Rome in conjunction with this superb film.

Moving pictures are now being utilised at Val de Groie—the military school of surgery and medicine. No less than twenty films have been taken, including those of amputations of arms, elbows, legs, and various operations, including one for appendicitis. This remarkable collection of pictures is being constantly added to. The films are taken by Messrs. Gaumont's special operators, working under the direction of Professors Simonin and Reverchon.

PHRASES OF THE MOMENT.

To the Editor of THE BIOSCOPE.

SIR,—THE BIOSCOPE has been such a good friend to showmen generally, and to Croydon showmen in particular just recently, that I am sure you will pardon a grumble from one of them. I refer to a certain advertisement in this week's issue. Your paper is very widely read by the general public—I am frequently requested to show certain films reviewed by you—and one cannot help but think that some of the hard things said of the business as a whole will be justified to a father of a family when he sees such announcements in a trade journal. Of course, it will be argued that it is all right for Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Shaw, but I am sure that the public now attending His Majesty's Theatre are going because they have heard it is a little outrageous, and they want to see and hear it. There are, however, thousands who think quite differently, and would neither go themselves nor allow their children to go. With your paper, however, it is different. I know a great many people in my audience who read it and take it home for their children to read, and I think you must agree that it is hardly the sort of thing one parades before young people, who form a great portion of our audience.

Personally, I am trying to convince the local licensing authorities that our's is a decent and elevating business, but I shall have a great difficulty in explaining away such lurid headlines when this is held up against me at the next meeting, as it undoubtedly will be, as the members of the Council are taking your journal weekly.

As regards any firm who has to use such sort of advertisements to dispose of their goods, one can only take it that their ideas on films must be reflected in their publicity, and consequently to be left alone by all showmen who have the real interest of the business at heart.

I am sure you will find a great number of showmen will agree with my remarks if you publish this letter, which I trust in fairness you will.—Yours, etc.

LINES FROM LEICESTER.

At the Floral Hall, Mr. Trueman Towers succeeds Mr. G. F. Reynolds in the management, which embraces also—as in Mr. Reynolds' case—the management of the Palace Theatre of Varieties adjoining. At the former house, where business continues entirely satisfactory, Mr. E. W. S. Pearse is the energetic assistant manager. "Baby's Joy Ride" has been a conspicuously successful feature in the week just concluded. For the current week, "The Lady of Monsereau" and "Some Nerve" figure prominently.—At the Silver Street Electric the aspect of affairs is pretty accurately reflected in Mr. Horace Springett's managerial smile. The Clarendon speaking pictures make their advent this week, other principal attractions being "Lost Treasures" and "Officer John Donovan." Here, too, the excellent orchestral renderings under Mr. Cyril Godwin's supervision are becoming increasingly popular.—The W. W. Jacob series, commencing this week at the Picture House, is assured of a hearty welcome, including as it does such favourites as "Beauty and the Barge," etc., all to be specially featured.—Completing the list of Leicester's "continuous" houses is the Electric in High Street, where "David Copperfield" is the star for this week.—At the De Montfort Hall, Mr. Herbert G. Ponting's lecture and film, "With Captain Scott in the Antarctic," were accorded a great reception, the attendance on both nights being most gratifying. Mr. C. H. Meares, a member of the expedition, was the lecturer.

THE PROJECTOR AND THE FILM.

SOME POINTS IN PROJECTOR CONSTRUCTION AND MANIPULATION AFFECTING THE LIFE OF THE FILM.

By JAMES W. BARBER, A.M.I.E.E.

The life of the cinematograph film should be the concern of everyone engaged in the business.

It is an unfortunate fact that, whereas considerable advance has been made during recent years in the photographic and artistic qualities of the finished film, little improvement has been made in regard to those details of projector construction that make for long life and minimum wear and tear of the film. In point of fact, it must be admitted that in spite of all the advances made, the life of the modern film is shorter than that of the film in use six or eight years ago.

Probably the introduction of film hiring has had most to do with the rapid destruction of films, although the era of continuous performances, in which in many cases the object of the management is to rush the films through at all possible speed to make room for a waiting public has had no small bearing on the wear of the film.

In days gone by, when a man purchased a film for his own use he took great care in its handling; he selected a projector whose function was limited to that of projecting, and not of film mangling. He chose his operator not on a basis of "in how many seconds can you thread up and what length of film can you put through per hour?" No! the proprietor of that day chose both his mechanical plant and operating staff with a view, in addition to projection, to minimising the wear of his film.

To-day it is an unfortunate fact that the average user sees no further than three days ahead. Provided a fair show be given during the three days the film is being shown at his theatre, the condition when it leaves is of little, if of any, concern to him. An operator, when he is engaged, is never questioned as to his capabilities in the care and hadling of the film, but only on his what one might call screen handling powers. A projector, when it is purchased, is not chosen from the point of view of life of film, but only that of steady and flickerless projection.

Not that flickerless and steady projection need not go hand-in-hand with minimum wear and tear of film. On the contrary, it should be the case that the manufacturer who has considered all the little details in projector construction that make for minimum wear and tear, and therefor long life of film, has long ago mastered the more elementary and direct selling points of steady and pleasing projection.

What are the principal factors that make for longevity of film? The factors can be placed broadly under the headings of (1) the projector element and (2) the human element.

Dealing with the projector element first, those factors that make for scratches on the emulsion and celluloid surfaces of the film are patent to all, as are likewise their results on projection, "rain" being an abomination with which everyone is acquainted. Another factor, however, more subtle in its causes, but very apparent in its results, are those conditions that make for weakness at the sides of the picture, and which weakening the edges of the sprocket holes and the sides of the film, soon cause permanently unsteady projection and ultimate tearing of the sprocket holes.

"Rain" on the surface of a film, regrettable enough though its presence be, can to a great extent be removed by a process of cleaning, but wear at the sides of the film is practically irremediable.

Undoubtedly the chief factor causing damage to the sides of the film is due to mal-design or mal-adjustment of the bearing roller or rollers of the sprockets. What is the function of the bearing roller? To prevent the film leaving the teeth of a sprocket. Now, the actual depth of tooth is considerably greater than the thickness of the film, and no good purpose can be served by pressing the film unduly on the drum of the sprocket wheel, when all required is that the film should be held so that the teeth engage in the sprocket holes. Yet what do we find? Some machines are so constructed that the only stop governing the distance of the bearing roller from the sprocket drum is the film itself, and the film has to stand all the squeezing and grinding strain of a powerful spring.

Fig. 1 illustrates the position the bearing roller should occupy in a machine designed with the object of minimising both film and mechanism wear.

Fig. 2 illustrates diagrammatically the type of roller mechanism sometimes employed, in which the full pressure of a powerful spring is acting on the surface of the film. If pressure be required on the film, why are sprockets employed? We might as well return to one of the early experimental machines, in which the film was fed through by pressure rollers alone.

The action of the bearing roller when pressing hard on the surface of the film as shown in Fig. 2 is analogous to that of the steam roller, and, indeed, incredible enough though it seems, the pressure in many cases in relation to the area of contact and softness of emulsion is more damaging to the film than is the steam roller to the road surface.

Why, then, employ such a barbarous method of engaging the film with the sprocket pins when actually no pressure whatever is required? The bearing roller has no need to press on the surface of the film, and its action should be just that of a guide, which to reduce friction is permitted to revolve. Fig. 3 illustrates this in section.

Machines in which bearing rollers press on the film without any means of adjustment should either be avoided, or the manufacturers instructed to provide some means to give the necessary clearance between the roller and sprocket.

Some projectors are constructed with rollers fitted so that they come to rest always at some predetermined distance from the sprockets, a simple method that has very much in its favour.

Many projectors are fitted with an adjustment to regulate the distance between the roller and the sprocket drum. Frequently, however, this adjustment is altogether ignored. It is certain that a machine supplied with adjustable rollers should be used in conjunction with an operator well versed in the raison d'etre of the fitment, and the damage likely to occur if the correct adjustment be disregarded.

Fig. 4 illustrates a sprocket with a bearing roller fitted with an adjustment incorrectly set, whilst Fig. 5 shows the same fitting, but with the adjusting screw set so that the roller allows ample room for the passage of the film. In connection with this, the adjusting screw should always be fitted with a lock-nut as illustrated, or there is danger of the screw working loose, so allowing the roller to press on the film.

INCORRECT SETTING OF BEARING ROLLER ON SPROCKET WHEEL.

It is in connection with the adjustment that the human element plays an important part, and frequently operators totally disregard its importance.

"Take care of the adjustment of the rollers, and the film will take care of itself," is a fair truism, inasmuch as wear and consequent damage to the sides of the film is concerned.

Another and important point regarding the life of the film is in connection with the size of loop used. Many operators employ an unnecessarily large one, the consequent flapping doing much to damage the surface of the film. A small loop just sufficient to allow of the free action of the intermittent mechanism is all that is needed.

On the subject of joins in the film a word should be said. Too great care cannot be taken in making the connection, and it is advisable to scrape down the edges of the ends of the film so as to cause as little obstruction as possible to its passage through the gate.

In connection with joins, it should be emphasised that the film must always be cut so that one pair of perforations overlap. It can readily be understood that with the film joined in this way there is less risk of the join parting, as, when passing over a sprocket, one pin is always in engagement with the two joined pieces, so preventing any strain to the join.

In conclusion, it must be said that, to ensure long life of film and steadiness of projection, in addition to the above points referred to, the correct adjustment of the gate springs should be seen to. With a Maltese Cross machine no heavy pressure is required, the movement of the film being controlled by the Maltese Cross, which starts, moves, and brings to rest the film. The pressure required, therefore, is only that necessary to hold the film squarely in the gate, very limited pressure, indeed, being needed. Operators who have been used to the dog type of machine do not always appreciate the lightness of gate pressure necessary, as in the dog projector the gate has to exert such pressure that the film is actually brought to rest by its action, a totally different thing to the conditions present in the Maltese Cross machine.

Again, the question of the take-up mechanism has an important bearing on film damage. The strength of the take-up should be such that whilst no too great strain is thrown on the film at the beginning, the full spool should be comfortably carried without hesitation. If the take-up be too fierce, not only will dirt be scratched into the surface of the film by the rubbing together of the convolutions of the film, but the strain imposed on the film in its passage over the bottom sprocket will most certainly tear or irretrievably damage the film perforations where they engage with the sprocket pins.

CORRECT SETTING.

PROSECUTIONS AT OLDHAM.

On Wednesday last the Empire Theatres, Limited, were charged, at the instance of the Chief Constable, with having failed to keep certain passages in the Empire Theatre, Oldham, leading to the exits, clear of obstruction. It appeared that the police paid a visit to the Empire on Easter Monday and alleged that the passages in the pit were crowded with people, so that they could not get to the exits. Other parts were in order.

Mr. W. Lees said the last thing the owners would wish to do would be in imperil the safety of their patrons. The theatre had more exits than any other hall in England, and he invited the Bench to visit the theatre, to which the Magistrates' Clerk replied "They could not see the theatre as it was on Easter Monday."

Mr. Lees went on to argue that the word "obstructions in the" section of the Act under which the prosecution was taken referred to such things as chairs, etc. It did not refer to people standing in passages. On Easter Monday, 1913, there were 130 more persons in the pit.

Joseph Platt, the licensee, said that from the pit there were eight exits. He understood they were allowed to fill up the gangways on the side and not in the centre. People in the passages would not increase the danger if there was a panic. On Easter Monday, 1913, there were 1,177 persons in the pit; this year the number was 1,032. On the ground floor of the theatre there were 1,700 people, and they had seen 2,300 in that part. The theatre might hold 4,000 people on such an occasion as when Mr. Asquith came.

Dr. Yates, chairman of the Bench, said that in the interests of the public a case of this kind was very properly brought before the magistrates. They were clearly of opinion that a case had been made out. The regulation of the Secretary of State under the Cinematograph Act stated that gangways, staircases and passages must, during the presence of the public, be kept clear of obstructions. Nothing could be clearer. The defendant would be fined 20s., and costs.

Mr. Wm. Dobie, licensee of the Collosseum, was similarly summoned and fined the same amount.

The Chief Constable said that other places of amusement were visited on the same night, and all, with the exceptions now brought forward, were found to be in order.

PRINCESS INCOGNITO.

Miss Muriel Ostriche of "Princess" films, who claims to be the youngest leading lady in moving pictures, has just celebrated her eighteenth birthday. At the date she was at Stamford, Connecticut, taking part in a picture dressed as a poor man's daughter, and decided to go home attired exactly as in the picture. At the ticket office, the man behind the glass was all sympathy when she meekly asked the fare to New York and even suggested that if she sat low in her seat she would get through for half fare. Miss Ostriche thanked the man, and laughingly explained the situation. Arriving home she was the recipient of many beautiful presents, and in addition won a handsome silver loving cup in a dancing contest at the Cafe Boulevard, N.Y.

THE THEATRE AND THE CINEMA.

MDME. SARAH BERNHARDT'S VIEWS.

Madame Sarah Bernhardt has been telling a Press representative her views on the cinematograph and how she acts before the cameras. The celebrated actress is of the opinion that picture theatres and theatres are not opposed to one another. "For example," she said, "I remember when I was touring in America with the 'Lady of the Camelias' our company was followed by a picture show. Everywhere I stopped, and often in the hall adjoining the one in which I played, the cinema also presented the 'Lady of the Camelias.' It even occured that the posters were displayed side by side. In spite of that, the two buildings were packed, but in one people paid fifteen or twenty sous whilst in the other they paid fifteen or twenty francs."

While Madame Bernhardt praises the cinema for giving the public instructive pictures of hictorical events, strange countries and wild animals etc., she does not approve of theatrical pieces on the screen. She finds its power to make picture plays inferior, and points out the optical defects of cinematography.

Speaking of cinema acting she said "The acting of an artise is made up of a number of elements—pronunciation, intonation, voice, gesture, movements. The cinema only makes use of gestures. How, then, can a really complete and artistic impressions be arrived at? It is already difficult enough to interpret a text when one can employ all the means of dramatic art. Reduce them to one is to be condemned to a mediocre result."

"Personally, I have played in several films, amongst them being the 'Dame aux Camelias,' one act of Hamlet and Adrienne Lecouvreur. I thought I was going to be asked to play several other plays to which I have some claim, like 'l'Aiglon,' 'La Samaritaine,' and 'La Princesse Lointaine." I was surprised to learn that their presentation had already been arranged."

"My manner of playing? It is simple. I act exactly as on the stage. I speak the text of the play without omitting a word. I don't exaggerate gestures. I remain as is my habit. In any case it would be impossible for me to act otherwise because for me there is only one way to interpret a character. I played the act of the death of Hamlet in 1900 during the Exposition. That was my dèbut in the cinema world. It has made much progress since then. All the same, it seems to me solely from a theatrical point of view it remains just as far away from beauty and dramatic grandeur as ever."

"I don't doubt, all the same, that certain pantomimes of which the action is not very complicated, and certain sketches can provide comic or dramatic spectacles."

Speaking of artistes Madame Sarah Bernhardt said that she frequently found that artistes who played for the cinemas early in the morning were unable to work properly at the theatre afterwards. She believes that soon there will be artistes for the stage and artistes for the cinema. "There are already specialists for the film; they will certainly become more and more numerous. They will develop this special mètier to a point of perfection which only the most celebrated now attain. And all that will be for the good of the screen."

MISS FLORENCE TURNER IN EDINBURGH.

The popularity which was gained by Miss Florence Turner when she visited Glasgow, stood her in good stead recently, when she was accorded a most enthusiastic reception in Edingurgh. During the week Miss Turner appeared in vaudeville selections at the Empire, and also took occasion to visit many of the picture houses and renters' offices in the city. Receptions were held at the offices of the Anglo-American Film Company, and Mr. Lever had a goodly company present. Mr. R. C. Buchanan, Chairman of the East of Scotland Exhibitors' Association, entertained the members at an "At Home," when a large number accepted the invitation to meet Miss Turner. A very pleasant time was spent. After being fêted as they have been, Miss Turner and Mr. Trimble will carry away many pleasant memories of their visits to "the Land o' cakes."

VIEWED IN VIENNA.

The sensational Autor production, the "Tyrol in Waffen," which, writes our correspondent, is known in your country under the title "Fighting Blood of 1809," has scored a distinct success here.—The Wiener Lichspiel Theatre has featured Miss Madge Lessing in "The Blue Mouse." Hani Niese and Asta Nielsen are other popular stars in the same programme.—The programmes of the leading leading picture theatres are bristling with names of "stars" of the film world. Hansi Niese is featured at the Opern and Kartner Kinos, Emmy Destinn and Enrico Caruso at the Kosmos Theater, and Asta Nielsen and Max Linder figure on many bills.—The article entitled "Genius, Lost—and Found," which appeared in a recent issue, has created much interest here, and it would not be surprising if "The White Domino" were not screened very soon. If that comes to pass, then assuredly the film managers will not omit to boom the name of Fraulein Jungkirth.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The sum of nearly £20,000 is, I understand, upon excellent authority, to be spent in adapting Havelock House into a cinema with cafés, etc.

These glorious days of sunshine stimulate the call of the open air, but the charms of the Picture House in High Street appeal none the less. At least they did last week, but this was altogether attributable to the fact that Mr. J. McColl's programme was full of the very latest pictures from filmland and the circumstance that the orchestral selections were even more seductive than those played in the parks, where one could not listen in such comfort as is ever found at the Picture House. Premier position amongst the many films screened at this palatial continuous picture house was "Branscombe's Pal" "Her Husband's Friend" The Conqueror" "Teaching Dad a Lesson" Polidor and the Lions" The Tangram," and on Thursday, "Shanghaied,"—a splendid lot that kept the pay-boxes clinking most melodiously.

"The Blacksmith's Crime," the sole exhibiting rights of which had been secured by Mr. E. Hatfield, deservedly occupied the place of honour in the programme at the South Shields Picture House. Several other first-class exclusives have also been booked by Mr. Hatfield, who is going the right way about to make his fine hall worthy of its name and position.

More officials! The Sunderland Corporation has deputed two of the Electricity Department Staff to regularly visit the various halls just to see that all is right. Supt. Yelland, chief of the Fire Brigade, is also a frequent caller.

All Sunderland and his wife, as well as their bairns, were watching last week for the passing of the lion in the waggon, with which effective advertisement Mr. F. Sayer was booming "Thor." True, it was only a dummy lion, but it did the trick. When I dropped in there to see the show the other night, Mr. Sayer showed me how much alive the Avenue people are. Perhaps the most welcome innovation is the provision of luxurious waiting-rooms for circle, pit-stalls, and pit patrons, which have now rendered the street queues unnecessary. The Avenue can now claim to be the only picture and variety theatre in the town with such desirable adjuncts.

Mr. James Noble, head of the Weardale Film and Variety Agency, High Street and Green Street, is about to visit the Metropolis. One of his objects is to discover cheap exclusives on behalf of his many clients, and firms having these to dispose of would do well to get into communicaton with him. At the moment, Mr. Noble told me the other morning he is negotiating with one of the biggest firms in the country who desire him to give regular exhibitions of their exclusives. Should this come off, Sunderland's position as a film-hiring centre will be appreciably improved. Amongst the commissions which this alert Wearsider undertakes is that of special films required of any local event. Such a one was given him the other day by Mr. J. Raymond Waller, manager of the Millfield Picture House, who required a local benefit match and the spectators thereat filmed. Mr. Smith junior, of Gateshead, handled the camera, and the film—an excellent one—was screened at the Millfield the next night, evoking, as might be expected, a tremendous amount of local interest.

By special arrangement with the Fennnigs Film Service "The Third String" (W. W. Jacobs) was screened exclusively at the Empire Theatre last week It got as much as, if not more applause than, some of the variety "turns."

As a cinema enthusiast, one sometimes wonders how we existed ere the Theatre de Luxe came into our lives. There was no slipping by last week, for Mr. Frederick J. Hudspeth, had rare fare to tempt one with, such as "The Hour and the Man" "Ghosts" "The Honourable Algernon" "A Flight in a Hydroplane," and the Topical Budget," as well as, starting on Thursday afternoon, "The Open Door" "Blowing Bubbles," and "The Secret of the Bulb." Last week Mr. Harry Pullan became the leader of the orchestra, and in him Mr. Hudspeth has certainly found the right man to maintain the high reputation of the de Luxe orchestra.

In deference to the earnest requests of many patrons of the Queen's Kinema, Mr. Thomas Adamson has reverted to a non-stop programme. There is now no break from 2.30 till 10.30, and the change has told most favourably. Another thing he has just done, he told me, was to improve and strengthen the orchestra, which last wek came under the conductorship of Mr. Bern Farrar, recently of the Avenue Theatre. Many good films were shown to increased attendances, amongst them "The Finger of Destiny," "Shamus O'Brien," "Hearts and Flowers," "The Little Hero," and "The Bowling Match," to say nothing of a fine selection of interests and topicals. "Addresse Dead" set this week's ball a-rolling.

Last week the Villette, at Hendon, where Mr. R. Little does excellent business, and the Pavilion in Sans Street, which is under the management of Mr. F. W. Hunter, made "holiday houses" with "Circumstantial Evidence," "Regiment of Two," The Diamond Makers" and "The Mystery of Elk Bank."

Mr. J. E. Richardson and Mr. Harry Lavenu are "making good" at the West-end Cinema, and the smart advertising devices of the latter gentlemen are to a large extent responsible for the way in which the hall is patronised. No less than 700 of the juveniles who regularly attend the Saturday matinée, as well as another 300 from Messrs. Lough and Richardson's Central Hall, paraded the other day and "processed" to the West-End football ground, the Chief Constable of Sunderland (Mr. Wm. Carter) very kindly providing a police escort. At the field there were sports, a football match between boys and girls, and another in which the staffs of the two halls participated—the Cinema won by 4 to 1—after which all had tea. There was no happier man in Sunderland that afternoon than Mr. Lavenu, who has made himself an exceeding favourite with the youngsters, not one of whom was hurt or lost. Mr. Lavenu tells me he is arranging another similar "treat" for the August Bank Holiday week, and at Christmass will have a "tree."

THE ADVANCE OF THE CINEMA.

By GLENN. H. HARRIS.

Under the above heading it is my intention not so much to review the advance of the Trade itself, with its wonderful ramifications and extensions in every corner of the globe, as to trace the far-reaching effects of this triumphant march, through a multiplicity of obstacles, prejudices, and interferences, upon our different phases of business, political, and social life.

A clever writer recently observed that the cinema resembled an octopus in the manner of stretching its tentacles around the things within its grasp. The cinema is an octopus, but with this distinction—the tentacles of the octopus are limited to a certain length; the cinema and its scope are limitless.

Slowly, but surely, the keenest of business men have realised the value of the moving picture as an asset to advertisement and exhibition, with the result that there are few large concerns to-day which have not utilised the ubiquitous cinema in some shape or form. Not among the least important of these may be included the enterprising railway companies, whose methods of pushing the seaside and inland resorts upon their lines have included interesting series of films of such a nature as to convey to the prospective holiday-maker the advantages and resources of any particular resting place. Such films are being screened, by arrangement, in picture houses all over the country, and, as recently stated in THE BIOSCOPE, such exhibitions have been immediately followed by an exodus from the place of exhibition to the resort thus advertised. A movement is on foot, I understand, towards the showing of moving pictures in the waiting-rooms or halls of the larger stations of the metropolis of the world, and the value of such an exhibition from every point of view is obvious. Further, a firm manufacturing massive machinery, in order to obviate the cost and trouble of dispatching sample working machines to different branches, would find the cinema a reliable and sufficient exhibitor of the merits of their goods, a method which, I believe, has already been used to advantage by some of the big American houses.

Birmingham, as a city noted for its wonderful variety of manufactures, has not been backward in having films taken of the various processes of manufacture of the more common articles, and only recently a large manufacturer of hooks, eyes, etc., had a film taken showing the complete process, which is now touring the various picture houses in the country.

The advertising cinema story, too, will probably gain more popularity as time passes. For instance, the man with a certain commodity, in order to bring its advantages before the public, will have a story prepared, with a drama or comedy interest, incidentally setting forth, by sub-title and action, the superiority or use of such an article. Advertising specialists are taking full advantage of this idea. There is a slight danger to the status of the picture houses from the point of view of the public in these steps, but one which, with care, can easily be avoided. For instance, the patron might resent his being taken in by what he thought to be an ordinary film, but which turned out to be an advertising "gag," though possibly the novelty of the scheme would mollify this resentment.

The use of the film as an exposer of deplorable practices of any kind has recently been exemplified in the two films which depicted the horrrors of the traffic in worn-out horses, and the Mendel Beiliss film which exposed the barbarous treatment of Russian prisoners. The world realises that the picture palace, besides being a place of amusement, is a certain source of appeal to all that is just and fair in the public mind tending towards the exposure of like practices.

The stage has yet to learn the possibilities of the moving picture screen in connection with the production of dramas of an intricate nature. Only recently Cluny's Theatre, Paris, used to advantage a film in the course of a play, for the purpose of explaining a rather intricate portion of it. The reading out of letters, telegrams, etc., on the stage is often inaudible to the occupants of the back portion of the hall, but a few feet of film flashed upon a convenient screen would convey to everyone the contents of the missives in question.

As an instructor the cinema is invaluable. Apart from the educational point of view, which has already been treated very ably by Mr. Best in these columns, it has recently been demonstrated to us that the cinema can be used to good advantage for such things as coaching the police in their duties, and instructing 'bus drivers and other public servants of the dangers and precautions necessary thereto of their occupation.

"To see ourselves as others see us" is a fine form of education, and athletes, and even stage artistes, have come to appreciate that the cinema is a true guide to improvement in their work. Both, by studying films taken of their performances, are able to pick out errors which probably they were unconscious of before. Public-houses, restaurants, schools, hospitals, workhouses, have all in varying degrees on occasion taken the cinema into their midst, and the time is not far distant when its permanent installation on our our modern liners will be a fait accompli. Without doubt I could go on enumerating ad infinitum the phases of life and work into which the moving picture has thoroughly permeated, but the cases I have noted are sufficient to show that as an educator and amusement caterer the cinema has achieved such a publicity and general use as has never before fallen to the lot of any invention on record.

Another important indicator of the popularity and good standing of the motion picture is the attention which the Press—and when I say Press I mean every conceivable phase of it, from the paper catering for housemaids to that edited for the benefit of the highest intellects of the age—has devoted to us. As one whose vocation is partly journalism, it is interesting to watch the cinema articles and features observed by the various papers. As a news item the dailies are not slow to grasp the possibilities of cinematography, and with the barest excuse they will include the magic word "cinema" in their posters and headlines.

The new trades and professions which have sprung into being from the parent idea are too numerous to record, but amongst them we have the producer, the scenario writer, scenic artist, film editor, cinema journalist, cinema publicity man, numerous firms which cater for the requirements of the picture house, and also those who assist in the stocking of the studio property rooms, and towards the preservation of the film itself.

Reviewing the brief and brilliant history of the cinema, is not the progress we have made well-nigh incredible? What other trades have taken centuries to achieve we have done in a few short years. We may be egotistic as regards our advance and position to-day, but in the circumstances it is excusable, for since the beginning of life and conditions on this sphere as we know it there has been no invention, no power, no trade, no appeal, so efficient, deep-rooted, and lasting as this moving picture enterprise. The men who have contributed to its glory in these early stages will, in the days to come, when our advance will be a thing more wonderful than the most imaginative suggestion, be looked back upon as amongst the greatest of the world's pioneers.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT NOTES.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The new manager of the spacious Regent Hall, Mr. W. Dodson, well maintains the high traditions this house gained under the control of Mr. E. C. Morley, and I am pleased to hear the latter gentleman is meeting with equal success at the recently opened Parliament Picture House. So successful was the screening of "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," at the Mansfield Road house a few weeks ago, when many patrons were unable to gain admittance, that Mr. Dodson arranged for a return visit. He also did big business with Mr. Martin Harvey's "Romance" last week, which was well backed up by "Deception," "Wiffle's Twin Brother," and "His Sister's Kids." Mr. Morley has been featuring the Clarendon "speaking pictures," and a great draw they have proved. "Phil Blood's Leap" and "The Woman Thou Gavest" were recent features. features.

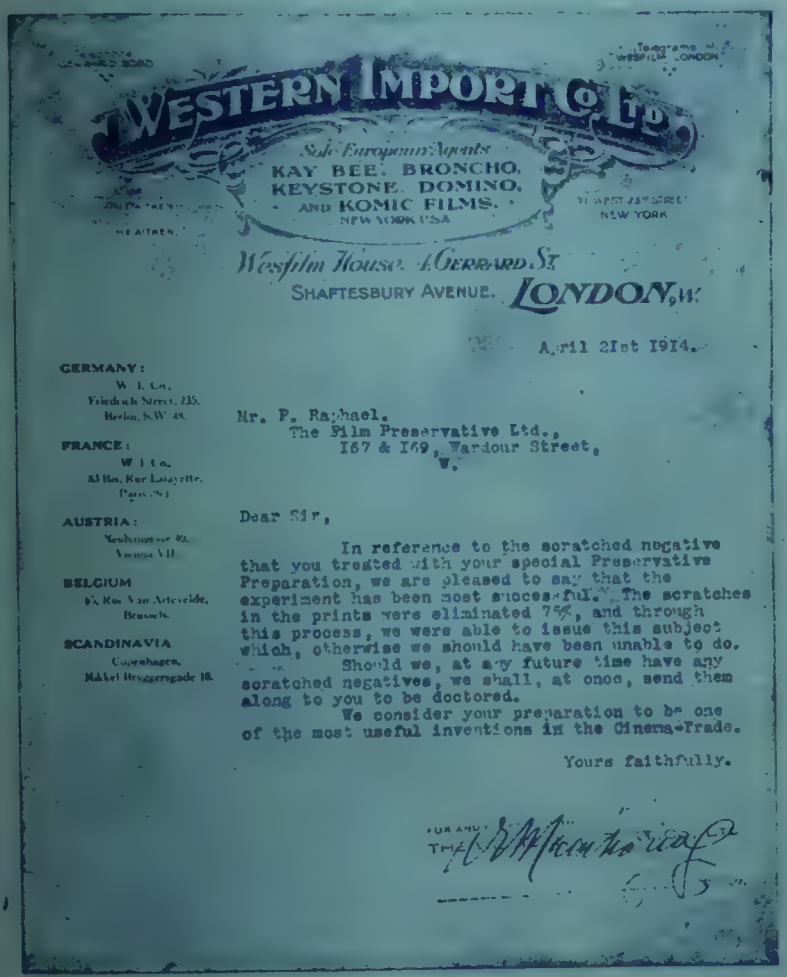
Mr. Gunn, "commander-in-chief" of the Globe, evidently knows just what suits cinema-lovers in the city, for he has never experienced a slack week since the Trent Bridge House opened; in fact, it is frequently a difficult matter to accommodate his numerous patrons. Mrs. Gunn is a great help in the musical part of the programme, which is always of a high-class order. "A King's Romance" and "The Lure of Gold" were two much appreciated items, and "The Shadow of Guilt" and "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," were perhaps the chief screenings in last week's excellent all-round list.

With the great influx of visitors to the city during the holidays, Mr. Green has reaped a rich harvest at the Victoria, which is so conveniently situated near the Victoria Station. British comedies of the highest quality are a great feature, the "What Happened to Pimple" series being especially noteworthy productions.

"Pimple" also tickles the fancy of the crowded houses at the Scala Theatre, while "In the Hands of London Crooks" and "When a Schoolboy" were two recent features.

The management of Leno's Royal Picturedrome has met with much prosperity, and at the present time extensive structural alterations are being carried out. "The Dare-Devil Mountaineer," "The Upward Way," and "Blind Fate," were very popular last week, backed by the Keystone and Vitagraph humorous element.

The Picture House well maintains its enormous popularity at all seasons, but during the recent holidays the luxurious building has been thronged early and late. Nowhere in the city can better music be heard or more comfort obtained, and however crowded the house may be, the ventilation is so perfect that there is never the slightest feeling of "stuffiness." The pictures are the "last word," and screened to perfection. What more could the most fastidious desire?



"The Miracle" was the special treat provided by Mr. Vernon Hague at the Goldsmith Picture Palace last week. "The Shadows of a Great City" was a recent attraction.—At Hibberts' Pictures, "Saved by a Miracle" and "The Clown's Daughter" were recent stars, and "Mystery of Hill Street 13" was the chief item last week.

Business is very brisk at the Kinema Picture House, Sherwood, where "The Wreck," "Between Man and Beast" and "The Modern Girl" were the leading lines during the holiday season.—"Sixty Years a Queen" was a great attraction at the Heanor Town Hall Picture Palace last week.

¶ We told you last week that the non-advertiser pays for your advertising.

¶ We wish to emphasise this fact.

Your advertising procures for you extra customers, who buy those wares with which they are familiar.

They are made familiar with your goods through your advertisements.

Your rival — the non-advertiser — fails to attract new customers because his goods are unknown to them.

His is an ACTUAL LOSS; yours an ACTUAL GAIN; and the cost of the advertising which has brought YOU extra customers falls on the MAN WHO LOSES THEM.

NOTES FROM SURREY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Property agents report a business boom at Richmond just now. Houses which have been standing vacant for months are rapidly filling up and the town is speedily regaining some of its quondam popularity as one of London's nearest pleasure resorts. The discriminating public has realised that Richmond is now no ordinary London suburb, but has its own particular characteristics by means of which it stands out in an enviable solitude of distincton as the residential resort of London. This means an accession of business for the various picture houses, for a larger population and more casual visitors will certainly conduce to more patrons and improved box-office receipts. No doubt this improvement in the prosperity of the riverside borough has led one of its best known townsmen, Mr. Joseph Mears, to decide to erect in one of its leading thoroughfares—Hill Street—a picture theatre de luxe, which he intends to furnish on a lavish scale with all the latest improvements. Richmond is also connected with the cinema industry, for Messrs. Chancellors, the well-known estate agents, have just disposed of that fine old Georgian residence, "Worton Hall," Isleworth, together with its picturesque grounds, for the purpose of film-making.

A very cordial feeling has always existed between Mr. Smithers, proprietor of the Talbot Picture Theatre, Richmond, and his staff of employees, both at the theatre and the riding school which he also conducts. Accordingly it was a very happy gathering which assembled at the Castle Restaurant one evening last week, when Mr. Smithers entertained his staffs to dinner. He himself occupied the chair, and was supported by the members of his family and several friends. After a sumptuous repast, a pleasing incident took place illustrating the happy relationship that exists between employer and employees. On the two previous occasions that a similar function has been held, the staff, as a mark of their esteem, presented Mr. Smithers with illuminated addresses, which now adorn the entrance to the Talbot. This year a change was made, and instead of an address Mr. Smithers was made the reipient of a very handsome silver salver, suitably inscribed. Mr. Harry Beck, in making the presentation, said it had been subscribed to by every member of the staff, and they had asked him to present it to Mr. Smithers as a token of their great esteem and regard. They wished him and his family continued happiness and health, and at the same time expressed the hope that the success of the Talbot would continue. The genuineness of this wish was reflected in the hearty applause which followed.

Mr. Smithers, in reply, expressed his appreciation of the very handsome gift, which had come as a surprise to him. The health of Mr. and Mrs. Smithers and family was then toasted, with musical honours.

Last week many boy scouts were attracted to the Cinema Palace at Kingston, where a popular feature was a film showing scenes at the final of the Boy Scout Cup at Barnes, the Kingston Boy Scouts being the victorious team. The film naturally was greeted with great enthusiasm. "The Old Curiosity Shop" was the other leading attraction. This week the English Cup Final is being screened at this house, the other leading features being "A Terrible Alternative," "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," and "A Ride for a Bride."

The management of the King's Palace, Wimbledon, have always shown commendable enterprise in securing the latest and best films, and this week that enterprise is being rewarded by well-filled houses, attracted thither to see "Sixty Years a Queen." This is the first time the film has been shown in the district.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

The weather in this part was so summerlike last week that many forsook indoor amusement, but despite this excusable reason the local picture palaces did good business. The majority of the theatres are run on the continuous performance system, and an hour or so is well spent without the necessity of sacrificing an whole evening. Nevertheless, the two big halls—namely, Andrew's and the Cinedrome—which submit two performances a day were generously supported.

At the Cinedrome, where Mr. Linsdell is never lacking in giving his patrons value for their money, the programme was of a very attractive order, and was worth an effort to see. The leading film was "Thor," and, needless to say, this fine production excited gneeral admiration. The King's visit to Paris was depicted by "Pathé's Gazette" in a series of clear pictures.

At the Theatre de Luxe Mr. Knowles introduced to his numerous supporters Sherlock Holmes unravelling the Reygate Squire's case, and it provoked intense interest. "The Money-lender" made a most enjoyable one-act play, and admirers of Western dramas had a splendid representative submitted for their appetites in "Harvest of Sin." For the second part of the week the chief films in a characteristically good programme were "In the Days of Nero," "Her Father's Silent Partner," and an instructive series showing "The Italian Navy of To-day."

Mr. Rundle, at the Theatre Elite, made a feature with the drama, "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night." Warren Kerrigan, in "The Passer-by," was seen to advantage, and this strong drama created a favourable impression. Those who visited this theatre in the second half of the week was regaled with an unusually fine bill-of-fare, for Mr. Rundle screened the first issue of the new Urbanora detective series, entitled, "The Iron Man," which revealed a most interesting plot.

Mr. Cecil Frost lived up to his high reputation in screenin leading films, and his patrons at the Tivoli, Devonport, got ample enjoyment out of the films he had on exhibition. A strong drama was presented in "Cards," and 'His Last Fight'' made a thoroughly entertaining sporting subject. "Concentration" fully merited the good things said about it.

At the Electric, Devonport, the performances were crowded nightly, and there is no more successful cinema in the three towns than this delightful place of amusement so well conducted by Mr. Sidney Boultwood. The two special subjects were "Count Zarka" and "The Parasite," a couple of unusually enjoyable dramas. Films of comedy, travel and drama blended in the programme to which the orchestra liberally contributed some pleasing music.

WORLD OF FINANCE.

All inquiries respecting financial matters must be addressed to the Editor and the envelope marked "Financial."

BIG "A" FEATURES, LIMITED.

Mr. Percy Mason, 65, Gresham Street, Street, E.C., has been appointed Receiver and Manager in a debenture holders' action.

GOLDBERG v. ELECTRIC PALACES, LIMITED.

In the case of Goldberg v. the Electric Palaces, Limited, and others, which came before Mr. Justice Eve in the Chancery Division on April 21st. Mr. Maugham, K.C., applied that the matter should stand until the plaintiff had given security for costs.

The judge assented, and said that if security was given he would afford an early date for the trial.

Council said the undertakings that had been given came to an end that day. The Gaumont Company had undertaken not to part with any money they received. The other defendants undertook to pay moneys they received into a joint account.

The Judge: These undertakings will go.

Mr. Cozens-Hardy, K.C. (representing certain of the defendants): I understand nothing has been received. The film is technically dead.

THEATRE SHARES.

In the Chancery Division on Thursday, April 23rd, Mr. Justice Warrington heard an application by Mr. Charles Besley, of Weston-Super-Mare, and his wife, to direct that the register of members of the Burnham Electric Theatre, Somersetshire, should be rectified, by substituting the name of the applicants as holders of 200 shares in the Company, in place of their son, Charles Holland Besley. The applicants contended that the refusal of the directors to register the transfer of the shares was not bona-fide, and that they had acted arbitrarily and capriciously. The directors in answer, stated that they had acted in good faith and in the interests of the Company, and that they were not bound to assign any reasons for their refusal to register.

Evidence was called.

His Lordship, in giving judgment, held that the directors were not bound under the articles to assign any reasons for the refusal to register, but he found from the correspondence and from the evidence that their action was based on two facts: (1) that the sum of £125 had been disallowed by the auditors as having been paid by the Company to Mr. Chas. Holland Besley, said to have been for services performed to the Company, and that if his father, the transferee, would give the Company an indemnity for that amount, the transfer would be registered; (2) that Mr. Charles Holland Besley was owing the Company £5 in respect of shares which he held in the Company. His Lordship held that these two grounds were quite untenable, and that the directors had not acted in the best interests of the Company and directed the register to be rectified as asked, with the costs of the motion against the Company.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE PICTURE PLAYHOUSE, LIMITED.

Application for the appointment of a manager was made by Mr. Jenkins, K.C., before Mr. Justice Astbury, in the Chancery Division on Behalf of Mr. Edge, in the matter of the Knightsbridge Picture Playhouse, Limited

Mr. Jenkins said the holders of the second debentures was cited as defendant. Mr. Edge was holder of the first mortgages in the defendant company. The first debentures issued, all of which he held, came altogether to a capital value of £1,300, a charge on all the assets of the company; the principal was repayable by instalments, one of which was overdue. The Company, he gathered, had sent out notices convening a meeting of shareholders to pass a voluntary winding-up resolution on the ground that the liabilities were such that they could not carry on business. But this was a going concern, and in Mr. Edge's affidavit he deposed to facts which counsel had stated to his Lordship. He asserted that it was necessary the business should be carried on as a going concern: it could so be carried on: and as a going concern it possessed a goodwill.

His Lordship consented that the £1,300 capital consisted of twenty-six £50 debentures, and the principle was payable by instalments of £20, £15, and £10. It was an instalment of £20 due on March 25th, that had not been paid

An order was made in terms of the motion for the appointment of a manager for three months.

NATURAL COLOR KINEMATOGRAPH COMPANY, LIMITED.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, a largely attended meeting of the creditors of the above was held on Monday at the offices of the liquidator, 1, Broad Street Place, E.C. The chair was occupied by Mr. Douglas Johnston, who had been appointed to act as liquidator in the voluntary liquidation of the company. The Chairman reported that he was appointed on April 11th last, and at that date the liabilities amounted to about £64,000. Of that amount £30,500 was due to the Trade and sundry creditors, while Mr. and Mrs. Urban were cash creditors for £33,500. The assets of the company were returned at approximately £156,000 and a very considerable surplus was thus disclosed. The assets consisted of cash at bank £84, debtors £11,400, plant, machinery, etc. £530, furniture, fixtures and fittings £1,420, negative films, including expenditure in connection with producing pictures £76,500, positive films at cost £14,000, cameras, projecting machines and sundries £7,200, freehold property at Brighton £4,857, expenditure in connection with Paris theatre £32,000, stock of films and machines in Paris £3,800, and amount deposited with landlord of the Paris theatre £4,000. Dealing with the assets, the chairman pointed out that the plant and machinery had regularly been written down by 25 per cent. per annum, while 20 per cent. had been yearly written off the furniture and fixtures. The freehold property at Brighton was held by the bank to secure a loan. The sum of £32,000 was the amount which had actually been expended on the Paris theatre. As far as the liquidator could see the concern might possibly be claimed by the landlords. The sum of £4,000 deposited with the landlord was to secure the payment of the last two quarters' rent of the lease of ten years which had been granted to the company. No value had been placed on the patents in view of the recent litigation, but the patent rights, etc., for foreign countries which were not directly affected seemed to be worth a considerable sum. He had examined the balance-sheets of the company up to March, 1913, and they showed very satisfactory results. The figures for the last year, however, could not be so satisfactory, but that was due mainly to the litigation, which had also caused the present position. The most serious question at the moment was the order of the Court of Appeal revoking the company's chief patent. He had been advised that the decision given in the Lower Court was correct, and that the Court of Appeal verdict should be appealed against. He was now taking opinion as to the advisability of appealing to the House of Lords. The restoration of the patent would very largely affect the ultimate realisation of the assets. It had to be remembered that a very large portion of the assets consisted of films. Other negotiations were proceeding which, if carried through, would produce sufficient money to put the company on a firm basis again.

A creditor asked if the company was connected with any other concern which carried on business in the same premises in Wardour Street, and the Chairman replied in the negative. He added that the company had been running for about four years and that the capital was £30,000, divided into shares of £1 each.

A creditor said it appeared to him that the assets of the company were extremely valuable, and if they stayed their hand for the moment, in order that the appeal might go on, it would be to the advantage of all. The business was a valuable one and ought to be continued. Every effort should be made to get the decision of the Court of Appeal reversed. The cost of an appeal would be only about £1,200, and they would be prepared to spend that money.

The Chairman said he hoped he would be able to find the money to prosecute the appeal. In answer to questions he said that the Paris Theatre had only been running since December 13th last. The rent was £8,000 a year, and six months' rent was owing. He did not think that the venture had, so far, been a success.

Another creditor said that all in the Trade had every confidence in Mr. Urban, and they desired the business to be continued and the appeal taken to the House of Lords.

A suggestion was made that a joint liquidator should be appointed to represent the creditors and to act with Mr. Johnston. It was pointed out, however by a creditor that the suggestion for the joint liquidator came from the opponents to the company in the recent litigation.

After a short discussion a resolution was unanimously passed confirming the appointment of Mr. Johnston as the sole liquidator, and an informal advisory committee of the principal Trade creditors was appointed to act with him. A further resolution was unanimously passed expressing the opinion that the appeal of the company against the decision of the Court of Appeal should be continued.

SNIPP.TS FROM SOUTHPORT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Southport is not inappropriately looked upon as the pleasure resort of the North of England, with its season extending throughout the year from January to December. What is called the outdoor season really begins with Easter, whether this particular holidays falls in March or April, and while the cinemas do good business during the winter months, the outdoor season does not mean that business with them in any way slackens. It is calculated that during Easter over 100,000 excursionists entered the town, and then there were "week-enders." This invasion was reflected in the increased returns of all the picture theatres, and night by night for some time it was the rule to see cards exhibited telling those outside "house full."

Although the Palladium, Lord Street, has gone over to vaudeville, thereby entering into competition with the Pier Pavilion, it has by no means said "good-bye" to pictures. Mr. Fredk. Clive, whose management of this palatial house since it was opened in January has been characterised by much enterprise, still caters for a large public by having special picture matinées at three o'clock, and also a performance ever Sunday evening. Just as in the past, he booked such films as "The British Army" and "Napoleon" as exclusives, so in the future, although films will only hold the field as indicated, he assures me there will be no lowering of the standard, a statement confirmed by a glance at last week's programme, which included "The Third String" (the Jacobs series) and "Her Husband's Story."

There is no diminution in the popularity of the Picture Palace. Mr. H. Kennedy (the secretary) maintains the high level set years ago. Among recent screenings have been "Alexia's Strategy," "A Romance of Old Brittany," "The Lure of Gold" and "Autumn Love." The bill of fare enables Mrs. Parker, the manageress, to gaze serenely upon a well-filled house at every performance.

Since Mr. Geoffrey Hill came to look after the Picturedrome, Lord Street, those who have visited Southport's first cinema house fully realise that he has always something good to offer them. Kinemapoems were followed by the Vivaphone—there were "star" films, too, of the calibre of "Daughter of the Hills"—and then, when all the streets of Southport in the centre of the town were exremely busy, he and his assistants were also busy, the sequel being some splendid topical pictures. To "Scenes in Southport," which he tells me were much appreciated, I should certainly like to add my quota of praise.

The holiday season opened as well as it possibly could do for Mr. F. M. Jones at the Empire Picture Theatre. On the Monday night I happened to be out with a party and I had a word with Mr. Jones about 8.40 p.m., when he said: "Just look here!" and, taking me to the front of the stalls, I gazed upon a sea of faces. "Phenomenal," he said. "This is the third house like this to-day, and the fourth and last will be the same." The huge crowd waiting for admittance bore this out. Recently Mr. Jones has screened such films as "By His Father's Orders," "The Fight for the Black Diamand," "Her Husband's Friend," and "His Hour of Triumph," and therein lies the secret of his success.

Mr. William Walker, who has greatly enhanced the reputation attaching to the Picture House, Nevill Street, and to whom I happened to be speaking outside his popular theatre one afternoon, was very cordial in his invitation for me to "step inside." Having a few leisure minutes, I did so. He told me that no expense will be spared to secure final releases and exclusives. He has a sharp eye for business, and thoroughly appreciates the fact that in summer thousands of people pass his theatre on the way to the Prom., etc. He, of course, was one of the managers who had to turn would-be patrons away. The afternoon I was present he was showing, as the chief film, "The Curse of Greed." This had followed a very thrilling film of the first three days for the week in "The Diver," while other "big-letter" attractions have been "Prisoner of the Harem," and "The King and the Rajah."

BITS FROM BOLTON.

Two excellent sea dramas divided attention during last week at least so far as patrons living in or near town were concerned. Mr. William Sutton at the Electric, had booked "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders," and his selection was fully justified. "The Somnambulists" and "Sammy's Iron Mask" created much amusement. I visited the hall twice during the week and really extraordinary houses were seen.

By a peculiar coincidence the top-liner at the Queen's Theatre was "Orders under Seal," and Mr. W. E. Wright stated the picture had indeed proved an unique draw. "Honour of Lady Beaumont," "Beauty Unadorned" and Scenes in the Vosges" were other good subjects. Later, "Thor" took premier place, and "The Broken Idyll," "Unjustly Accused" and "A Bad Game" completed a finely arranged programme.

Not the least important item of the last seven days has been the projection of "Mendel Beiliss," "On the Block 107," and not a little curiosity has been taken in it. In addition there were "A Traitor to His Country," "Bess and Her Goose," the "Pathé Gazette," and the ever-welcome singing picture. Mr. Parnell stated a better programme could not have been arranged for his patrons, and I can easily believe him.

"Under the Black Flag" was the special of Captain G. B. Row at the Gem Picturedrome, and very popular it was, while "Forgotten Women," "Polidor and the Lions," "A Dip in the Briny" and "Motley Wins the Cup" pleased old and young alike.

"Bolton people are getting a more refined taste for pictures, I was told by a manager. "Ninon of Montmartre" at the Atlas Picture Theatre, and "In Mid-Atlantic" at the Princess Cinema were two specials last week. At the former hall "Caught Courting," "Behind the Gun" and "Professor Austin's Hustler" proved enjoyable as also did "Lonely Road," "Bidoni's Dream," "Pimple's Schoolboy Days," "A Muddy Romance" and "Lily, the Housekeeper," at the latter."

Two huge audiences assembled at the two entertainments in the Bury Road Picture Palace on Wednesday evening, on the occasion of a benefit for Mr. Dan Foster, the manager. A splendid programme of music and pictures was given during the evening, a most enjoyable time being spent. Mr. Foster afterwards thanked all who had helped to make the entertainment a success.

LINCOLNSHIRE NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Longhurst, manager of the Electric, High Street, Grantham, has recently placed some delightful programmes before his patrons, and when I paid a visit to the commodious hall last week, on what is generally considered a "slack" night, every seat was occupied. "The British Army Film" is the big attraction in the town the whole of this week, and is meeting with the same cordial reception it met with in other parts of this district. "The Football Final" was a popular item on the programme. On Friday evening the local troop of Yeomanry (under Captain C. de Paravicini), and the Territorials will attend in full force. The feast of good things is continued next week by "The Three Musketeers."

A new departure was introduced last week by Mr. Campbell, the proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Grantham, who screened "Sixty Years a Queen." Mr. Campbell also presented several films of a local character, including a football match, pictures of Messrs. Harrisons and Sons' employees at work, scenes in the Market Place, etc. Altogether, a splendid cinema programme was given to good houses.

Following the great success of "When the Earth Trembled" at the King's Hall, Mr. R. F. C. Sanderson featured the Vitagraph drama, "Fruits of Vengeance" and "No Quarter," and a big draw they proved. The popular manager caters in fine style, and is well repaid by good business. "By the Firelight" and "What They Will Do" appear this week-end.

Mr. Leslie H. Murray, recently of South Shields, has succeeded Mr. Hook at the Cinema de Luxe, Lincoln. The interior has been redecorated and business is always brisk. I hear there is likelihood of another up-to-date picture house being added to the number at Lincoln, but of this I will give further particulars when the scheme has further developed.—"Give Us This Day——" was much to the liking of patrons at the Cinematograph Hall, Lincoln, last week, and during the week-end "Love the Victor" was the feature. By request, Sarah Bernhardt, in "Queen Bess," was Sunday's leading item.—Mr. Will Gadsby did well last week at the Central Hall with "Alone in the Jungle" and "The Cast of the Die."

Mr. Aspland Howden was one of the pioneers of the moving picture business in Boston and has no doubt been well rewarded for the enterprising and up-to-date manner in which he has always catered for patrons. Although there have recently been opened in the town two new and sumptuously furnished houses, the Electric appears to have suffered very little from the increased competition; in fact, so popular are the "pictures" that there is sufficient support to keep the three houses busy. Programmes are certainly of a very high order, and the conduct of the houses reflects the utmost credit on the respective managers.—At the Scala, Mr. Marlow has featured "The Wreck," "Ida, Queen of the Air," "Josephine," and "His Neighbour's Wife."—Mr. Howden's menu at the Electric has included "The Wreck," "The Cigarette Maker's Romance," "Seven Months' Big Game Hunting," and "The Cry of the Blood."—At the Quay Picture House, Mr. J. Hudson starred "Faithful Shep," "The Mystery of Hill Street 13" and "The Robbers." These were all shown within ten days, in addition to usual Keystone and Vitagraph comedies, topical news, etc. No wonder at the great popularity of pictures in Boston!

HALIFAX HINTS.

Included in the excellent programme shown at the Electric Theatre, Wards End, last week was the final between Hull and Wakefield, played at Thrum Hall, Halifax. The film was an excellent reproduction and was well received. Another picture which proved a great attraction was "Judith of Bethulia," which was secured by Mr. Stansfield with exclusive rights for the district. For the current week "A Trip Through India" is to be screened, followed by the Kalem drama, "The Boer War," which should prove a great draw.

On a recent visit to the Picture House, Wards End, Mr. Whitworth, the manager, kindly escorted me round the premises pointing out the different alterations which had recently been in progress. The decoration is almost palatial in its idea. The café is on elaborate lines, but the alteration carried out under the direction of Mr. Whitworth has had the effect of further increasing the usefulness of this part of the building. Upstairs the old tea room and smoke lounge is now accessible without passing through the main building. Others who may wish to view the pictures and take tea at the same time will find facilities for doing so on the promenade, while during the summer months an outdoor stone balcony affording an expansive view, will be brought into use, and here tea will be served to patrons in the open air. The programme shown here last week was of exceptional quality. "Spartacus" occupied premier place and proved a great success. A special Boy Scout matinée was held at the Wards End house on Saturday afternoon and striking scenes were witnessed when a rally of Boy Scouts of the various Halifax troops took place as a commemoration of St. George's Day. There were no less than 450 lads in uniform from a dozen or so troops, and they presented a very impressive sight.

The Theatre de Luxe, Northgate, still retains its popularity, and Mr. Harmsworth, the manager, is providing his patrons with some exceedingly strong programmes. The outstanding feature for last week was "In the Shadow of the Throne." The series of Sherlock Holmes pictures shown at the Northgate establishment was continued last week with "Mystery of the Stolen Papers," and was a decided success.

The Palladium, the new venture at King Cross has immediately made an impression on the picture patrons of Halifax. The management, as will be seen on first entering the palatial building have spared neither time, trouble, nor expense to ensure the comfort of their audiences. Mr. Job, the manager, too, seems to have an exact idea of just what the public want. During the few weeks it has been open the theatre has put itself on a very firm basis of popularity, and there is no reason to think that it will ever lose it. The general appointment and decoration of the building have been the subject of favourable comment all round. The star pictures for last week were "Pearls of Death" and "Under the Black Flag."

The patronage extended to the Gem in Crossley Street is amply justified by the excellence of the fare submitted by Messrs. Greene. "The Man with the Seven Faces" proved a film of merit and was well received.—The Picturedrome, King Cross, and the Cosy and Palace, Sowerby Bridge, under the same management, are enjoying large attendances, and the programmes are up to the usual standard of excellence.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

The Scarborough Corporation and the justices are seeking to further tie the hands of those engaged in the cinematograph business. Already exhibitors are under obligations more stringent that in many other places, and if matters go much further they will almost be prevented from opening their doors at all. At the present time no children under the age of twelve are allowed to visit a picture palace unaccompanied by an adult at any part of the day, and there have been prosecutions, which, however, the magistrates dismissed, recognising as they did the great hardships under which the exhibitors were bound. The chief constable has now made a report to the Watch Committee respecting cases recently heard by the borough justices, in which it had been stated that the offences committed had been suggested to the culprits by pictures seen at cinematograph exhibitions. After considering the report, the Watch Committee, "whilst recognising the valuable efforts of the borough justices to deal with the question of the attendance of children at cinematograph exhibitions," recommended the justices to consider the advisability of inserting conditions in cinematograph licences stipulating:

(1) That no child under the age of fourteen years be admitted to any exhibition of pictures except when such child is under the charge of his or her parent, school teacher or guardian appointed for that purpose, and who shall remain in charge of the child throughout the whole of the time such child is present at any such exhibition.

(2) That no picture be exhibited after objection to such picture has been taken by the Chief Constable, or any person acting for or on his behalf.

(3) That if required by the Chief Constable, the licensee shall at all reasonable times exhibit to the Chief Constable, or his agent, any picture in the possession of the licensee which shall have been, or is about to be, exhibited to public audiences.

In addition, the Watch Committee passed a resolution to the effect that having regard to the fact that cinematograph exhibitions are largely attended by children, the time had arrived when the Government should appoint an official censor, or Board of Censors of cinematograph films, and when statutory provisions should be made for the prevention of the exhibition of any film not authorised by the Government censor. This it was resolved to forward to the Prime Minister, the Home Secretary, the Borough Member, and to the Chief Constable of every police force in England and Wales. At the same time, the Chief Constable was requested to bring the matter before the next meeting of the Chief Constables' Association for discussion.

As described in THE BIOSCOPE last week, the new Grand Picture House, Foreshore, is a very up-to-date place, but Mr. H. A. Whittaker, the proprietor, is now seeking power to erect a verandah, and this and other picture palace matters have been referred to a special committee of the Corporation. Mr. Parnell, manager of the Grand, is continuing to provide programmes quite equal to those of the opening week. Last week "The House of Temperley" was a huge success. "The Efficacy of Prayer," "The Rustler's Stepdaughter" and some good comedies completed the programme. In the latter part of the week, "The Story of Napoleon" ensured capital business, along with "United in Danger."

Two outstanding pictures in a couple of well-varied programmes at the Futuredrome, Newborough were "Estrallita" and "Fortune's Turn," whilst at the Theatre Royal Cienma, Mr. Quniton Gibson had "Apache Gratitude" as the principal film.

The powerful picture, "Give Us This Day —" headed an excellent list at Mr. Will Catlin's cosy picture palace—the Olympia—this week, and another picture which has resulted in good business has been "The Invaders," "Told by the Cards," "Perils of the Sea" and "The Last encampment," have also been popular subjects.

The principal picture shown at the Palladium recently has been "Anne Boleyn." Big crowds have been going to see this magnificent historic picture play, besides which Mr. Catley screened "When the Hurricanes Took up Farming," "Mike Murphy's Dream of Love and Riches," "Love Sickness at Sea," "The Return of Helen Redmond," and the news film. In the first part of this week the topliner has been "The Great Leap," supporting which were "The Shadows of Life," "In the Wilds of Africa," etc.

ON THE EAST COAST.

Ipswich picture houses are doing good business, the chief attractions at the Picture House being "Mid Kentucky Hills."—At Poole's Picture Palace "Kissing Cup" was the star, and at the Central Cinema "Hand of the Law" and "Truth Will Out" pleased everyone.

The Palace on Royal Plain, Lowestoft, is probably one of the finest structures of its kind in the district. Mr. Arthur Dagnall, one of the most popular managers in the locality, is doing excellent business, and everything augurs well for the coming season. The situation is excellent for summer business. Recent magnets are "A Face from the Past," "The Right Man" and "David Copperfield."—At the top of the main street of Lowestoft is to be found the Cosy Corner. Last week the manager, Mr. C. J. Carpenter, billed "A Court Intrigue" and "The White Lie" as his specials.

The Gorleston Coliseum is being filled at every performance this week, the attractions being "Amid Raging Basts" and "His Hour of Triumph."

I am pleased to hear that Mr. G. F. Howes, manager of the Prince of Wales Palace, Norwich, has now fully recovered from his recent illness, and on Monday resumed his duties.—Mr. J. McCormic, manager of the Picture House, is undoubtedly increasing the popularity of this hall. "At the Hour of Dawn" and "Prince, the Fire Brigade Dog" are his specials this week.—Mr. J. W. Bruce, manager at the Cinema Palace, Norwich, is to be heartily complimented on the excellence of his entertainment which this week includes "And as an Angel Came" and "A Terrible Night at Sea."—The Theatre de Luxe, of which Mr. T. Hallisey is manager, is doing brisk business with "A Mother's Devotion" and "The Pit and the Pendulum."—Mr. G. E. Allen is making headway at the Norwich Electric Theatre with "The Discovery of America" and "Her Majesty the Little Queen." Mr. Allen, who also acts as general manager of the Norwich Empire, Oaker Street, is making things very pleasant for all. The management have to deal with a large number of children who are cared for in every way. Recent screenings include "The Thumb Print" and "The Madonna of the Slums."

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

Carnivorous Plants.

It is sometimes a just plaint against educational and scientific films that they are scarcely likely to prove very interesting to picture theatre audiences whose desire is for entertainment rather than instruction. But the present film, although of the highest educational value, is so intensely fascinating as a wonderfully graphic study of an unusual subject that it should prove acceptable even to the gayest audience of pleasure-seekers. It is unnecessary, at this time of day, to point out the element of wide variety which such a film as this lends to a programme, but one would like to emphasise once again the desirability of including these subjects wherever possible. They represent cinematography in one of its best and most wonderful aspects, and their exhibition to the public is of benefit both to individual theatres and to the industry as a whole.

"Carnivorous Plants" deals, as its title makes clear, with those strange members of the vegetable kingdom which capture and devour insects. One could almost believe these plants to have animal sensibilities, so cunning are the devices by means of which they are enabled to entrap their prey, and it is certainly a singularly absorbing, and almost dramatic, spectacle to watch these methods being practised upon the screen. It is a film which would interest anyone. (Scientia film. Eclair Company, Limited. Released May 28th. Length 383 ft.)

Bunny's Birthday.

When Mr. John Bunny is associated with Miss Flora Finch in a comedy produced by the Vitagraph Company the result is invariably such as must contribute to the hilarity even of the proverbial cat. It is quite sufficient for Mr. Bunny to propound some simple and ingenious idea for the gratification of his wife. We may rest assured that he will undergo tribulations of a peculiarly farcical nature from which he will emerge triumphantly in the end, in order to cogitate over further adventures for our unending delight.

To impress his guests on the celebration of his birthday, Mrs. Bunny prevails on her husband to apply to his neighbour, Mr. Smith, for the loan of his silver. When Mrs. Smith hears of it she promptly vetoes the scheme, but when Mr. Bunny calls to learn their decision, he is met by a rough-looking customer who hands him the silver in a sack. Mrs. Bunny's guests are duly impressed, and Mr. Bunny sets off next morning to return the silver in a sack. The silver, however, has been removed from the Smiths' residence by Burglar Bill, who only handed it over to Mr. Bunny as an alternative to being captured with it by a watchful policeman. As Mr. and Mrs. Smith have already reported the matter to the police, the shrewd reader can readily imagine the indignities to which Mr. Bunny is subjected before the matter is cleared up by the arrest of Burglar Bill.

It is a merry and bustling farce, played with inimitable humour by Mr. John Bunny and Miss Finch, valuable assistance being rendered by Miss Kate Price as Mrs. Smith and Mr. William Shea as a pleasant and convivial burglar. (Vitagraph Company. Released June 1st. Length 954 ft.)

The Black Gang.

This first-rate picture affords an excellent example of what very admirable results may be obtained by a clever producer with talented players to assist him, from the slightest kind of material. If one analyses its plot, "The Black Gang" in outline is little more than one long and tremendously elaborate pursuit. But into this pursuit is woven so great a variety of striking and novel incidents that the whole thing impresses one as being as original and effective a story of the kind that one has seen. A very notable feature of the production, moreover, is the beautiful natural scenery against which many of the episodes are enacted, whilst the exquisite photography and the consummate artistic photographic effects which adorn the film throughout deserve a chapter of praise on their own account. The entire story, of course, is grossly improbable, but this matters not at all in a picture which puts coldly logical reasoning to shame by the tumultuous onrush of its astonishing incidents. There will always be plenty of room for melodramas of this kind when they are presented with the imaginative skill and the care for detail that characterise "The Black Gang." Sufficiently varied in its points of interest to appeal to almost any type of audience, this film should enjoy a great success wherever it is shown. (Danmark film. Central Feature and Exclusive Film Company. Three reels.)

Those Who Suffer.

This very striking film, which we had the privilege of viewing last week at the offices of the Compton Film Agency, has been adapted by the Eclair Company from a novel by Gustave Geoffroy, and deals with episodes taking place during the Commune of 1870-71, when Paris, with a relentless foreign foe at her gates, was engaged in a disastrous internecine strife. It is the aim of the author—as set forth in a sub-title which we fear is too long for us to quote verbatim from memory—to prove that war is the outcome of selfishness, pride, and vanity, and will continue till human passions are kept in check by the encouragement of simplicity, virtue, and love.

The film, which is in five parts, opens with scenes in Paris during the December of 1870. We are shown the house of Pommier, a house painter, with his wife and family, living in decent, frugal comfort and united in the bonds of close affection. But the sons are called to take their places at the barricades, and the little family is involved in all the horrors of war, the happiest fate, perhaps, falling to the lot of the two boys who lose their lives in the firing line. Undergoing all the privations of a protracted siege, their savings expended and two of their breadwinners taken from them, the family emerges from the crisis disheartened and demoralised. The old man takes to drink, and the youngest daughter, Céline, seeks a respite from the dreary drudgery of her work in the perilous fascinations of the streets. It is only Cécile, the elder girl, who supports her mother through the wretched remnant of her life, who witnesses the death of her father in a padded cell, the shameful destitution and heartless ingratitude of her younger sister, and who at last is left alone to battle with the world as best she may.

It is a grim story, containing scenes of unusual power, produced with convincing realism, and so well played by a lengthy cast that it is difficult to assign the honours to any individual. M. Duguesne has a great opportunity for forcible acting as the drink-maddened old father, and Mme. Grandjean makes a dignified and pathetic figure of his long-suffering wife.

The photography is of that fine quality the Eclair Company has led us to expect, and the stage production, elaborate in scale, is perfect in every detail. (Eclair film. Compton Film Agency. Exclusive. Five reels.)

The Raid of the Human Tigers.

This is a powerful and well-constructed story of adventure in India, and is remarkable not only for the extreme beauty of its photography, which gives a perfect representation of the luxuriance of a tropical country, but is full of novel sensations, worked in with a perfectly natural effect, and imparting striking originality to the story. Though the Human Tigers are a tribe of hillsmen, there are scenes in which actual tigers appear, and a thrilling situation is brought about when the hero is attacked by one tiger, and succeeds in saving a boy from another. Even more startling than this is a scene where the chief of the hillsmen falls into a waterhole swarming with alligators, from which he is rescued with difficulty. It is sufficiently remarkable as a picture of life in the jungle, but even more so as an example of nerve on the part of the actors engaged.

Some very beautiful pictures are shown of the passage of an elephant caravan through the jungle, and life at a military station provides some fine scenes. The story is interesting and dramatic, and concludes with an engagement between the soldiers and the hillsmen which is perfect in its stage management. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company. Bison 101 film. Released June 11th. Length 2,728 ft.)

Andy Goes on the Stage.

The third adventure of Andy leads him to where his peculiar talents have an opportunity for their fullest development, for in his capacity of messenger boy he is sent to deliver a note at the theatre, where he appears at a moment critical to his own fortunes and those of the company. A moving melodrama is about to be performed, and at the eleventh hour the mother of the infant phenomenon has declared that no power shall induce her child to appear under such a management again. Andy's arrival seems like the special intervention of Providence, and it is not long before an agreement is entered into and Andy is decked out in silk and velvet and golden curls, quite after the traditional manner of the child of the drama. It is needless to say that he is received with rapturous enthusiasm by his fellow townspeople, for Andy's somewhat unconventional way of adjusting his wig at frequent intervals effectually disposes of any doubt as to his identity. His methods of acting show no tendency to "reserved force," and like Nero of old he takes prompt and drastic measures with those members of the audience whose expression of opinion takes too tangible a form. The centre of interest is soon changed from the stage to the gallery, and though the even course of the play is interrupted, the astute manager realises the value of securing so popular a local favourite, and Andy announces his intention of doffing his uniform and adopting the stage as a profession.

This decision promises much entertainment for the future, as Andy's stage exploits prove to be quite the best of this excellent series. The burlesque drama is admirably done, and the different scenes which take place amongst the audience are examples of stage management in which the Edison Company excels.

No exhibitor can afford to miss this excellent series, for Andy's personality and natural methods will make him most deservedly popular. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released June 8th. Length 1,020 ft.)

The Carrier Pigeon.

For the number of thrilling situations, the fertility of their invention, and the admirable manner in which they are carried out, we should imagine that this ingenious film holds a record which it would be very difficult to beat. The author, M. Plaissettey, has already given us one detective story of thrilling adventure and absorbing interest, and it is not too much to say that in the present film he has eclipsed his previous efforts. The plot is so slight that it is only necessary to say that the daughter of a South African millionaire has been kidnapped, and the great detective, Dick Dashwood, is called upon to restore her to her distracted parent, the only clue being a letter from a former associate, offering to restore the lady in return for the plans of a mine of tremendous value. With this slight guide, Dashwood discovers the den which is the hiding-place of the gang, and with the courage and self-confidence which are characteristic of the detective force, he walks blindly into a trap which has been cunningly prepared for him. He obtains help by flashing signals with a mirror, a device which is exceedingly effective, and, as far as we know, original, in the way it is worked. Having again got on the trail of the gang, he is assisted by a dwarf, who sends information by a carrier pigeon, enabling the detective to discover the place where the lady is held prisoner. She is restored to her father, but the villain-in-chief, having secured the plans, makes his escape with them, and some of the most exciting situations take place during the chase which is taken up by the detective. The climax takes place on the Eifel Tower, where the criminal takes refuge. He is shown rushing up the stairway, which at last he leaves, and attempts to climb up inside the girders. His strength fails, and after swinging for a moment by one hand, he falls to the ground, where the plans are recovered from his body. This sensation is worked with remarkable effect, and cannot fail to rouse an audience to enthusiasm.

The actors work with such spirit, and appear to take so many risks, the situations are so novel and ingenious, and the setting and effects are so well ordered, that the film carries conviction with it, and must be certain of a large measure of success. (Davison's Film Sales Agency. Released June 11th. Length 2,456 ft.)

Love and Gasolene.

Out of the many successes of the Keystone comedies, which have achieved a reputation absolutely unique in its way, none has been more surprisingly ingenious or genuinely funny than "Love and Gasolene," in which the acrobatic humours which have made the Keystone actors famous irresistibly infect a brace of motor-cars and cause them to go through a series of adventures which must be seen to be believed. It is, as a matter of fact, impossible to describe a Keystone comedy with anything like accuracy. A bare recital of the plot would reveal the fact that the producer and his company manage to get on admirably without one, and any attempt to describe the extravagant humour of these remarkable comedians must fall far short of accomplishment.

It is enough to say that for riotous, irresponsible mirth, "Love and Gasolene" is an advance on any of its predecessors, while the mere mechanical ingenuity and elaboration of effect are as remarkable as anything we have seen on the screen. The wild motor-car chase is like the illusion of a fantastic dream, and its triumphant charge through a solid brick wall into the police court produces an effect which is literally calculated to bring down the house. "Love and Gasolene" is a screamingly funny, sensational shocker, and must be seen to be believed. (Keystone film. Western Import Company, Limited. Released June 8th. Length 1,040 ft.)

Vengeance is Mine.

That wonderful film actress, Asta Nielsen, is always a delight to watch upon the screen, no matter whether she is playing light comedy or temperamental tragedy. As we have said before, her art is sufficiently great to lend interest to the poorest story and, although like everyone else she can make more of a good play than of a bad one, a picture in which she appears is never wholly tedious. In "Vengeance is Mine," Miss Nielsen does all that is possible with a difficult part—in a play which is rather morbid and unpleasant, and not particularly convincing. The story tells how an elderly lord marries a beautiful young circus rider, who does not really love him, but who does her best to fulfil honourably her part of this alliance. Then the husband's young son by a former marriage comes upon the scene, and immediately falls deeply in love with his youthful step-mother, who, although she feels an answering passion for the boy, determines to remain faithful to her husband. Eventually the two, who have met to bid each other farewell in a garden pavilion, are locked in by the lord's aged mother, who, jealous of the girl whom her son has married against her wishes, hastens to fetch the latter and confront him with what seems certain proof of his wife's guilt. Already tortured with suspicions, he is quite ready to believe in the truth of his mother's accusations, and when the pavilion catches fire a moment later, he turns away, leaving the imprisoned lovers to burn to death.

It is somewhat difficult to believe that an otherwise kind and gentle husband would act in this manner without first making quite certain that he had real grounds for doing so, or that, even had he definitely ascertained his wife's infidelity, he would perpetrate so fiendish a revenge upon her and upon his son. Gloomy and rather unsatisfactory as it is, however, this drama of passion and brutal revenge is distinctly powerful. It is acted admirably by Miss Nielsen, and well by everyone else concerned, whilst the staging and photography are all that they should be. For audiences which like this kind of fare, "Vengeance is Mine" should prove a very enjoyable entertainment. (Walturdaw Company, Limited. Three acts.)

On the Minute.

We have here a thoroughly excellent political melodrama based, for the most part, upon the notorious rottenness of American municipal affairs, into the workings of which it gives a very interesting and informative insight. The story is so good and so full of striking situations and effective incidents that many companies might have been tempted to prolong it into five or six reels. But the Selig Company, with their well-known facility for manufacturing concentrated drama, manage the whole play in a couple of reels, without sacrificing anything that is essential, and with the best possible result. Fast, powerful and intense, we have seen few films so consistently thrilling throughout.

The story shows how an aged novelist (a

Forced to make her own living, she becomes private secretary to a mayor, who has refused a dishonest alderman's offered bribe to permit the passing of a Bill without exercising his power of veto. The rest of the film shows how the machinations of the unscrupulous villains are thwarted by the brave girl secretary, whose adventures are depicted in a series of vastly exciting incidents. The play is magnificently acted, a particularly remarkable study of the scheming alderman being given by Mr. William Stowell, whilst Mr. Edwin Wallock contributes a convincing portrait of the mayor. The convict incident early in the play is rather unnecessary, since it has no real bearing upon the plot, and one would have liked to see the villains even more thoroughly confounded at the finish. With the exception of these two small points, however, the film is beyond criticism in every respect. Most decidedly, it is a picture to be booked. (Selig film. Released May 25th. Length 1,825 ft.)

The Flight of Death.

This excellent war drama, which is the work of an English company, contains numerous military scenes of the most realistic and elaborate nature, entitling it to rank, as far as vividness is concerned, with some of the best battle pictures. It introduces any number of big guns, aeroplanes and armies, whilst, as a piece de resistance, we are given a wonderful collision between two flying machines in mid-air. The story deals with a great war between two unnamed European powers, and shows how the hero of the play sacrifices his life for his country in the most sensational manner imaginable. The acting of the film is first-rate—so good, in fact, that one wishes the players had been given fuller opportunity to display their powers. In those few scenes which are played sufficiently close to the camera to allow one to appreciate individual performances, all the fine work is done by everyone concerned. It is particularly interesting to note, moreover, that the cast includes several well-known London actors, amongst whom are Messrs. James Carew, Reginald Owen, and Lyston Lyle. It is a pity that the photographic quality is not always as flawless as it might have been, but otherwise there is nothing to interfere with the success of what is really a very good film indeed. (Solograph film. Universal Film Company, Limited. Released June 4th. Length 1,290 ft.)

The Catch of the Season.

This amusing little farce, which is a new version of an ancient fishing story, was produced and written by Mr. Langford Reed, who has been responsible for the authorship of many excellent films in the past. Mr. William Allinson gives a capital performance as a guileful angler who purchases an enormous fish from a local shop and exhibits it to an admiring assembly as having been caught by himself—a stratagem which succeeds admirably until a note from the merchant of fishes puts him to rout. Among the other people who appear to advantage in the film is Mrs. Edmund Tearle, the well-known actress, whilst the performing fish comports itself with a facility for realistic effect which, under the circumstances, is positively terrifying. The photography of the film is quite flawless, and could not be improved upon. "The Catch of the Season" should prove very acceptable to those audiences for whose delectation it is served up. (Kineto, Limited. Length 737 ft.)

The Weaker's Strength.

So well is this play constructed and so clearly is it set forth by the clever artistes concerned, that sub-titular explanations are practically dispensed with. As far as its plot is concerned, it is an unconventional version of an old story. A big bully induces an innocent little country girl to run away with him under promise of marriage. He soon grows weary of her simple affection, and does not hesitate to cast her off. Eventually, however, they make things up, after having been brought together in a very strange manner, and when we take leave of them they are evidently determined to remain with each other for good. The play is rather unconvincing from a psychological point of view, because it is difficult to believe that a villain so callously brutal as the gentleman in the film would execute an instantaneous volte-face and repent with the greatest readiness—nor, in view of his character, would it seem particularly good for the girl that he should. It is quite an effective story on the screen, however, thanks in large measure to the clever acting of Miss Reina Valdez and Mr. True Boardman in the two principal parts, and it may be relied upon to find favour with the public. (Essanay film. Released May 18th. Length 997 ft.)

THE LONG FILM.

For all our reputed stolidity and phlegm, we are, in some matters, an impulsive race. Having jumped with full-blooded enthusiasm to one extreme, we are as ready as any mercurial Southerner to leap back to the other. The tendency is particularly to be observed in our attitude towards a novelty. Until we have had time to make up our minds about a thing, we blow hot and cold as readily as our English spring—and then, having been taught by our experiences to understand the full nature of the point at issue, we finally settle down to a state of comfortable and permanent tolerance.

For a considerable time the question of the long film has been a problem responsible for much perturbation amongst the members of the British cinematograph industry. At its first coming we were all—or most of us—enthusiastically in favour of it; now, by the usual swing of the pendulum, a large proportion of us seems to be against it. The truth is that we have scarcely had time to adopt towards it any final and settled attitude at all.

The matter has so often been dealt with in these columns and is so patent to the unbiassed thinker, that there is no necessity for us to point out the long film's obvious right to existence from an artistic point of view. Nearly all the greatest masterpieces that have hitherto been vouchsafed to us through the medium of the cinematograph have been "long films," and to exclude this particular type of picture would mean hopelessly maiming the wonderful new art by whose birth we are all profiting. The long film is good, and, in the end, the public (especially the most intelligent and best paying section of it) wants what is good.

We do not, of course, suggest that the long film will oust the short film. That would be as foolish as saying that the short film will annihilate the long film. When the industry has had still further time to settle down to anything approaching a final state the two classes of pictures—and of entertainment—will flourish happily side by side, and the expansion which this implies will be of benefit rather than of harm.

Meanwhile, it is regrettable that the present condition of reaction against the long film should be responsible for the practical boycotting of certain magnificent pictures whose only flaw is their excessive length—excessive, be it noted, for alleged utilitarian, and not for artistic reasons. It would, indeed, be pitiful to think that no room could be found, in an industry which has always shown itself ready to welcome noble things, for some of the recently-produced masterpieces which are apparently hanging fire on the market on account of their length, or that no encouragement could be offered to workers who, by developing the art of the cinematograph towards its highest possibilities, are assisting us all to secure for it the permanence and dignity it deserves

—WITH AN AUTOMATIC CERTAINTY THAT YOU CAN RELY ON—THE AUTOMATIC SAFETY BRAKE OF THE SILENT EMPIRE—AN EXCLUSIVE — FEATURE. —

THE SILENT EMPIRE

"You must see it —you cannot hear it."

THE automatic brake is opened by means of the steel roller resting on the film. Should the film break, or through imperfect threading etc., fail to take up on the bottom sprocket, the roller ceases to be supported, and dropping, applies the brakes automatically to the fly-wheel, bringing the machine to a standstill, and closing the shutter.

These are the devices which on a machine go a long way towards perfect projection, because they promote that feeling of complete confidence in your operating chamber that must exist before you can have perfection on the screen.

The first of a series of four advertisements dealing with certain exclusive features of the Silent Empire. These are fully dealt with in our booklet "Perfect Projection for the Picture Theatre" Write for a copy and enclose your trade card. If desired we will direct you to a Theatre running this supreme machine.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. L. SOLENNE.

We had the pleasure of a short talk the other day with a representative of Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited, and later with Mr. Solenne, the well-known general manager of that great firm.

"Our policy," said this gentleman, in reply to a question from ourselves, "remains what it always has been, and what, I hope, it will ever continue to be. Our aim is to give full satisfaction to the showman, and through him to the public. The more we facilitate the task of the exhibitor by giving him good films, the more we are promoting our own interests. Yes, we have every reason to be pleased indeed with the results of our decision last year to rent direct, and we have no intention at all of returning to the old system."

"What is your attitude towards the censorship?"

"It is true that for the present we have ceased to submit our films for the Censor's approval, but nevertheless we realise that there are many good points in this institution, and we are in sympathy with its ideals. We recognise that the Board is in the hands of capable and good men, but it was started in rather a hurry last year, and in a few matters its demands seemed to us to go a little too far. It is surely unnecessary, and even a trifle absurd, that such classes of films as scenic, industrial, and educational pictures, in connection with which the question of morality cannot possibly arise, should have to be submitted for censorship. But the President of the Board of Censors has done his best to meet us upon these points.

"With regard to our future productions, there is nothing very definite, I am afraid, that I am for the moment at liberty to tell you.

"We are now awaiting from Paris some of the finest picture stories yet produced—but you will shortly be able to form an opinion for yourself as to this. As you know, we are already releasing a good many English films. In addition to those made here under our Britannia trade-mark, there are several other brands, such as the Big Ben films, which are produced mostly for ourselves. For the rest, I can only say that there are very many big things in the air."

"And what are your views on the matter of exclusive films?"

"There is no doubt that some exhibitors have an objection to the exclusives when they are too long, and, although we have in hand many great productions of the lengths which are preferred in markets abroad, yet in England we are doing our best to meet the present wishes of the exhibitor (whatever may be our personal views on the question) by keeping our pictures, wherever possible, within two, three, or four reels. It is obviously a very difficult thing for the manufacturer, who does not cater for one market alone, to meet everybody's wishes. The manufacturer whose films circulate throughout the world, as do ours, has to consider the different tastes of his various customers in each and every market, and, although the latter are in agreement upon some points, yet upon others they hold widely divergent opinions.

"I do not think for one minute," said Mr. Solenne, "that the present prejudice against the long film is anything more than a temporary reaction. There can scarcely be any doubt in the mind of an unprejudiced observer as to the great artistic value of such pictures as "Les Misèrables," for instance, which, in spite of its length, enjoyed the utmost success in this country and everywhere, and which it would certainly have been impossible to produce in any shorter form. To exclude the long film would be to limit the possibilities of the cinematograph in a manner which no sincere believer in the future of the art could possibly approve. Naturally, a long film must be worthy of its length. It must, in fact, be as good as it is long. But this should be the only criterion.

"I quite admit, of course, that the long film must always be unsuitable for certain kinds of theatres running continuous programmes with constantly changing audiences, but I think the tendency in the future will be to divide the theatres into classes, bearing the same relations towards each other as those mutually occupied by the ordinary theatres and the variety houses. As a matter of fact, we are already finding that exhibitors are beginning to look again upon the long film with approval, and I believe that very shortly it will have reassumed its former position of popularity and importance, and that this time it will maintain its place permanently."

THE WOKING THEATRES.

Good programmes were submitted to the patrons of the various local shows. At the Palace, Mr. A. E. Smythe, the new manager, starred "The Antique Brooch," "The Life Saver" and "A Romance of Old Brittany." This week good business is being done with "Officer John Donovan" and "The Golden Beetle."—Mr. H. Quartermaine, proprietor of the Central Cinema, always has an interesting programme. "In Mid-Atlantic," "Alexia's Strategy" and "Great Python Robbery" proved a good draw last week. A film which should result in crowded houses is "A Footballer's Honour." Hepworth's "singing pictures" have again found a space in the programmes here. Mr. H. Quartermaine makes a speciality of Pathé's exclusives.—The Hippodrome reopened on Saturday with "The Fruits of Vengeance," "The Vagabonds," "War Correspondents," etc.

TRADE TOPICS.

The Americans are famous for their wonderful skill and enterprise in matters of advertising—in fact the science of advertisement, as we know it to-day, may be said to have been invented by them—and it is gratifying to think that we have some of the cleverest of their many clever publicity men in the film trade. The Trans-Atlantic Film Company have already been responsible for a great deal of smart advertising, but their latest scheme, upon which no less than £5,000 are to be spent, is probably the biggest thing of the kind yet attempted, at any rate in this country. The object of this huge campaign, which, we are told, will include unparalleled advertising in the Trade and general press, in the tubes, on the buses, and on the bill hoardings, will be the popularisation of their colossal film serial story, "Lucille Love," or "The Girl of Mystery," which will be released in fifteen two-reel parts. Concurrently with the appearance of these instalments in the picture theatres, the story of the film will be published in serial form in The Weekly Dispatch, commencing on Sunday, June 21st, and the whole of the Amalgamated Press newspapers, we gather, will co-operate with the Trans-Atlantic Film Company in their effort to familiarise the public with this wonderful series. A complete list of the theatres running the serial will be published in these papers, as well as a list of the hirers.

Miss "Lucille Love" (the identity of the actress taking this rôle is not to be disclosed until the first part of the film has been released) will herself make a tour of the country, Mr. Levine travelling two days ahead to make arrangements. Her movements will be chronicled in the Press and the places she visits during her tour, which will probably last about three weeks, will be cinematographed. There will also be issued in connection with the film any number of striking throwaways, attractive booklets and the like, to ensure packed houses for exhibitors who book this great serial.

The film is of an extremely thrilling nature, we understand, and each instalment is practically complete in itself. It was produced by Mr. Francis Ford, and it includes scenes in the Phillipine Islands, the West Indies and the South Sea Islands. Thousands of pounds have been spent in its production and many thousands more will be spent in bringing it to the notice of the public. It is improbable that there will be many people in the British Isles who, their curiosity and interest having been cunningly fostered beforehand, will not be devoured with eagerness to see the first part of the picture when it is released on June 22nd. Finally, it should be pointed out that "Lucille Love" is being placed upon the open market.

A very delightful gathering was held at the Holborn Restaurant on Saturday evening last, the occasion being the first annual dinner of the Cinematograph Northern Representatives, with Mr. Archie Brown in the chair, Mr. Syd. Smith occupying the vice-chair in the regrettable absence of Mr. Walters, owing to the illness of his father. Among those supporting the chairman were:—Messrs. Robert J. Henderson, W. A. Henderson, B. E. Tyson, A. W. Syme, S. M. Daines, R. D. Roe, P. Kimberley, J. Kimberley, James McPhie, E. de Montel, A. M. Brown, H. J. Fisher, Lionel Gilling, C. A. Miller, A. Lowry, S. G. Harper, Thomas Beach, Charles A. Beach, Joe Wood, F. Belcher, Gus Mack, E. E. Beardon, R. W. Knapman, H. E. Webbey, George W. Brown, George C. Ingleden, G. S. Aulsebrook.

The list of speakers included, in addition to Mr. Brown, who, by the way, made an admirable chairman, Messrs. J. Kimberley, L. Gilling, George W. Brown, R. D. Roe and G. S. Aulsebrook, while a capital programme of music was contributed by Messrs. J. McPhie, H. J. Fisher, A. Lowry, and others. A thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent, and the heartiest congratulations are due to those responsible for the organisation.

Mr. J. G. Avery is shortly severing his connection with the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited, and has other plans in the making, of which we hope to give some particulars in the near future.

Mr. J. D. Walker, of J. D. Walker's World Films, Limited, informs us that he has secured the wonderful Italian film, "Excelsior," the vast production which is officially described as "Fantastic, Educational, Scientific, Historical, Spectacular, Panoramic, Allegorical and Picturesque." A glance at the very fine illustrated booklet on the film which Mr. Walker sends us seems to make it clear that all these adjectives are fully justified—and more. "Excelsior" is a cinematographic reproduction of a famous ballet of the same name, the libretto of which is by Luigi Manzotti, and the music by Romualdo Marenco. The history of its conception and the extent of its subject are best described in its author's own words, which we quote as follows:—"I saw the monument in Turin erected in glory of the extraordinary construction of the Mount Cenis Tunnel, and I thought of this composition, which is intended to represent the titanic war of 'Progress' against 'Inactivity'—the greatness of civilisation that conquers and destroys for the welfare of the people the old power of ignorance, which holds them destitute in darkness and solitude. Starting from the epoch of the Inquisition of Spain, I arrive at the piercing of the Mount Cenis Tunnel, showing the extraordinary discoveries and gigantic works and accomplishments of our century—this is my 'Excelsior,' which I lay before the public."

The illustrations from the film included in the booklet indicate that the production has been carried out on the most gigantic lines. We look forward to seeing this huge picture with the most lively interest.

At the invitation of the Magnet Film Company, Limited, a large party, numbering nearly 200, left Westminster Pier on Saturday afternoon for Rosherville Gardens, which fine property has been acquired by the company for producing purposes. The journey occupied rather more time than had been anticipated, with the result that part of the programme originally arranged had to be abandoned. The gardens were greatly admired and thoroughly explored, after which the renowned "shrimp tea" was served. Informal speeches followed, the company then dispersing, unanimously of the opinion that the whole affair had been most enjoyable. We hope to give fuller particulars of the Magnet Company's plans in a subsequent issue.

A meeting of the Executive Council of the Renters' Association was held at the offices, 2, Gerrard Place, W., on Wednesday last, Mr. J. Williamson occupying the chair. The Fenning Film Service, Limited, and General Cinematograph Agencies, Limited, were elected to membership. A report was received on the progress before the Special Committee of the House of Commons of the Bills affecting the industry promoted by the London County Council, the City of London, and the Corporation of Glasgow, and which are being strenuously opposed by the Association in conjunction with the Manufacturers' Association. Among other important matters considered at length were the following:—Film hire agreements between renters and exhibitors; carriage of films and liability arising from loss in transit; Trade exhibitions.

A note from Berlin informs us that following upon the experiments recently made in certain quarters with regard to the filming of celebrated conductors at their desk before the orchestra, Herr Weingartner has been prevailed upon to appear upon a film. The eminent musician appears in the performances of Beethoven's "Egmont" and "Lenora" third overtures. Herr Weingartner cannot at present appear in Berlin, but the difficulty is being overcome by employing the cinematographic record in the direction of the orchestra.

We have pleasure in announcing that we shall be issuing a special Supplement devoted to educational and scientific cinematography with an early issue of THE BIOSCOPE. In connection with this we shall be very pleased to receive particulars of recent educational films, etc., from firms interested, but all such communications should reach us not later than Saturday next, the 9th inst.

We are informed that the London Independent Film Trading Company, Limited, are removing during the early part of next week to larger and more convenient premises at 4, Denman Street, Piccadilly Circus, W., where they will have additional facilities for dealing with their rapidly increasing connection.

The Eclair Film Company, Limited, have opened a North of England branch office at Wellington Chambers, Victoria Street, Manchester. The branch is under the capable management of Mr. Barby.

A very informative article on "How the Kinema has girdled the world" appeared in last Friday's Manchester Guardian, the author, we believe, being Mr. Langford Reed, who has written upon the cinematograph in an interesting manner so often. At the present time, it is stated, there are throughout the world, about 60,000 cinematograph theatres, a tenth of which are to be found in the United Kingdom, and the largest total (15,000) in the United States. The following are among the other computations given by the writer, the figures representing the number of theatres in the towns or countries mentioned:—Greater New York, 1,200; Chicago, 600; Philadelphia, 75; Minneapolis, 70; New South Wales, 190; South Africa, over 300; Winnipeg, 31; Bombay, 15; Germany, 2,900; Berlin, over 300; Naples, 52; Tokio, nearly 100; Barcelona, 100; the islands of Porto Rico, 39; Honolulu, 3; South Sea Islands, 2.

As will be seen from our advertisement columns, Messrs. Bishop, Pessers and Company, Limited, will handle the productions of the Balboa Feature Film Company. The firm have secured offices at 29A, Charing Cross Road, W.C., where all communications should be addressed.

The Belfast Hippodrome, a variety and picture theatre, was the scene of a conflagration on Saturday morning, the stage being completely destroyed, whilst the main building suffered severely from both fire and water. A considerable quantity of valuable scenery and useful effects was completely demolished. The managing director of the Belfast Hippodrome is Mr. Fred Willmot, whilst the manager is Mr. Harry Downs.

We are asked to mention that Messrs. Kineco, Limited, of Cardiff, are the sole agents for that district for J. D. Walker's World's Films, Limited. This, in consequence of an error in our last issue, caused by an accidental transposition of names.

Among notable Trade shows recently announced, we would remind our readers that a private exhibition of the Eclair five-reel subject, "Those Who Suffer," will be held at the Shaftesbury Pavilion to-morrow (Friday), at 11 a.m. The Compton Film Agency have acquired exclusive rights and are directing the performance at this comfortable theatre.

The Yorkshire Sales Agency, of which Mr. Lewis Roach is the general manager, opened its new premises at 30, Gerrard Street on Friday last, when many of Mr. Roach's friends, invited to an informal housewarming, had the opportunity of viewing some of the firm's first releases, and wishing Mr. Roach success in his new enterprise. The premises are extensive, well arranged, and tastefully decorated. We sincerely wish every success to Mr. Roach and his sales manager, Mr. Botting, in their new quarters.

Mr. Joseph S. Klotz, whom we mentioned some time ago as being over here from New York with the "Vero Educational" film, "The Glories of Rome," left on Sunday last per s.s. Imperator, for the States, after a busy six weeks in Europe, during which, in addition to a stay in the Metropolis, he visited Berlin, Vienna, Paris, Florence, Naples and Rome. An extensive and very comprehensive European tour and one which Mr. Klotz greatly enjoyed, notwithstanding an exceedingly busy time in the various centres.

Calling the other day at the offices of the Warwick Trading Company, we noticed a remarkably ingenious and effective poster board used in connection with this firm's famous "Bioscope Chronicle." The board is divided in the usual manner into sections which are designed to contain brief descriptions of the various events included in the current edition of the Chronicle. On the left of these printed slips, which may be inserted and removed with the greatest ease, is a series of smaller sections holding actual enlargements from the film. Each item of news is thus illustrated as well as described in a single frame, which certainly forms one of the most attractive advertisements of a new film yet seen. We understand that these enlargements, which can be procured, together with the descriptive slips with every edition of the Chronicle, are executed in the Warwick factory. Their clearness provides ample testimony to the Warwick Company's photographic skill.

We are requested by the London Film Company to give publicity to the fact that their golf demonstration film will be issued upon the open market and not as an exclusive. Exhibitors and others concerned are requested to note accordingly.

The General Film Agency, Limited, announce that the release date of the Milano film, "The White Spectra," has been altered from May 28th to June 25th.

We are asked to notify our readers that the Eclair Film Company, Limited, is prepared to consider scenarios for English dramas and comedies of a high class. Nothing inferior need be sent in, but real good attention-rivetting matter will be welcomed by the Eclair Company.

The Hepworth Manufacturing Company send us a copy of a very charmingly produced "specially recommended list of exclusives and feature subjects," issued by them during the twelve months ending March 31st, and where they can be obtained. This very excellent and useful film index has been prepared by Messrs. Hepworth for the assistance and guidance of exhibitors, and they tell us that they are sending out 5,000 copies to showmen all over the country. It is an admirable idea admirably carried out.

Some little time ago a very interesting lecture was given by Dr. George Cunningham, M.A., at Cambridge, in which the audience were shown by means of the motion pictures prepared by M. Chauveaux, at the Pathé studios at Vincennes, how best to take care of the teeth. The lecture received more than an ordinary amount of attention throughout the country, and we hear that an extra series of films have been prepared which, with the accompanying lecture, can be secured by any municipal or philanthropic body upon application to 8, Maid's Causeway, Cambridge. The film is issued by the Children's Dental League, and is a splendid lesson in pictures, both from an instructive and a hygienic point of view.

In "Eight Years in Germany," a newly issued volume, Miss Wylie, the authoress, describes the German as "preferring his novels, his cinematographs, and his pictures sorrowful, dismal, tragic. Realism for him spells tragedy, not comedy."

"PROTEA II."

Protea needs no introduction to the public, either in England or elsewhere. At her first coming she captured the whole world's attention, and in the space of a few months had gained a reputation scarcely less wide than that of any other universal heroine, from Eve downwards. The arrival of a second film dealing with a further series of her adventures is, therefore, a fact which it is only necessary to chronicle for its importance to be appreciated.

As everyone knows, the Eclair Company are specialists in the manufacture of sensational spectacles. Their famous "Zigomar" may, indeed, be said to have inaugurated this novel form of entertainment, which is peculiar to the cinematograph, and which ranks high, in point of popularity, among the latter's many varied offerings. "Zigomar" was often imitated, but it was never equalled — until "Protea" came. And now, with their second "Protea," the Eclair Company seem likely to surpass even the greatest of their previous records.

"Protea II.," or "Protea and the Infernal Automobile," (as the film is officially entitled, for some reason which it is rather difficult to understand), may be termed, for lack of a better description, a "sensational revue." Like ordinary revues of the music-halls, its main theme is of less importance than the wonder and variety of its amazing incidents. Its change of scene and the diversity of its elaborate mechanical effects are infinite. Of its kind, in fact, nothing more full of imaginative ingenuity than this remarkable spectacular melodrama has yet been seen. Impossible, sometimes almost fantastic, as far as its story is concerned, "Protea II." nevertheless holds one spellbound throughout by its wonderful incidents, which follow each other closely in one long string of novel thrills each more astonishing and more daring than the last.

Every marvel of modern science and many of the latest mechanical inventions are introduced in this extraordinary film, together with several remarkable instruments which have yet to be devised in actuality. The whole thing, with its fascinating mixture of pseudo-science and bold mechanical fancy, is worthy of Mr. H. G. Wells.

The story of "Protea II." deals with the machinations of a wicked villain against a youthful and beautiful heiress, and with the repeated, and eventually successful, attempts of the great woman detective to confound him. It is a very simple tale in outline—merely the record of a long and vigorous duel of wits—but it is filled out, as we have said, with so many striking episodes that the slenderness of the thread upon which all these sensations are hung matters not at all.

The famous Protea, who has well outstripped in versatility the old sea god from whom she doubtless derives her name, is, of course, enacted by Mlle. Josette Androit, with whom the character is already closely identified, and who has long ago shown herself to be an ideal exponent of all such parts. In the hands of Mlle. Andriot, Protea is a strangely striking and distinctive figure. This talented and popular actress's performance is most skilful and finished throughout, and is fully worth seeing on its own account. As Protea's invaluable assistant, Tommy, who not only executes prodigies of valour, but also lightens the whole proceedings by supplying a vein of very bright and engaging humour, we have an English actor, Mr. Teddy, from the London Alhambra, whilst the important parts of Lady Mabel and the nefarious Count Skettitch are very ably filled by Mlle. Madeleine Farisel and M. Mancini respectively.

"Protea II." contains too much electrically rapid action to give great opportunities for histrionic display, but, at the same time, wherever there is any scope for it, its acting is of the highest quality. Primarily, the film is a triumph of stage effect and photographic trickery—a production calculated to show off the unique possibilities of the cinematograph in these directions to the very best advantage. As an entertainment, it is a gasp—a thrill—one wild and wonderful sensation, unbroken in intensity from beginning to end. There is no need to recommend "Protea II." to the attention of exhibitors, nor to make prophecies as to the likelihood of its success with the public. The phenomenal popularity of "Protea" is already a matter of history, and it is quite certain that this second edition of her exploits will in no way fall behind the first.

SHEFFIELD SHOWS.

At the Tivoli, Capt. Harwood Briggs featured last week "Bobby Leach, "The Canadian Dare-Devil," who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel. A serious breakdown occurred here last Monday night, first house, and acting upon advice, Capt. Briggs issued publicly a reward of £10 for information that will lead to the conviction of the persons who damaged the apparatus in the theatre. "The Cup-Final Mystery" was another star attraction at this hall.

An interesting ceremony took place last Friday at the Coliseum, Spital Hill, when Mr. T. E. Gick, the manager, was presented with a gold-mounted umbrella and a kit-bag, on the occasion of the first anniversary of the opening of this popular house. Two special performances took place last Wednesday to celebrate the anniversary, and the management decided to give the proceeds to the Sheffield Royal Hospital and Infirmary. Miss Winnie Unwin, a lady well known in the concert world, gave her services, and the performances were under the patronage of several members of the Sheffield Council. "The Wastrel" is the star attraction this week, and, needless to say, business is booming.

One of the busiest men in the Trade in Sheffield is Mr. E. Smith, secretary of Lansdowne Pictures, Limited. During our conversation, Mr. Smith informed me that building operations have already commenced, and he is hoping to open on August Bank Holiday. It is the company's ambition to make the new theatre one of the most attractive in the town. An illuminated tower 50 ft. high will be erected at the corner of the new building, there will be seating accommodation for 1,250, and it is estimated the cost, when completed, will be £5,000. The directors of the new company are Messrs. E. E. Hollingsworth (director of the Weston Picture Palace), T. Earp Summerfield (manager and director of the Crookes Picture Palace), W. Swift, (of the Cinema Rotherham, Limited, and W. U. Farmer. Mr. E. Smith is the secretary of the Crookes, Weston, and Darnall Picture Palaces, and the Rotherham Cinema House.

Last Friday saw the enthronement of the new Bishop of Sheffield, and Mr. Leonard Shaw, the manager of the Union Street Picture Palace, filmed the ceremony. The film was projected the same night, and met with great approval. "Woman of the People" and "The Opium Smoker" are being featured at this hall, and business, notwithstanding the "off season," is of the best. The programmes submitted are of an all-round excellence, backed up by first-rate music, operating and effects, all making for the success of the show.

At the Electra Palace, Heeley, Mr. W. W. Austin is doing as well as in the days of yore. The Clarendon "speaking pictures" are proving a great attraction. The current bill is headed by "Orders Under Seal" and "The Passing of Black Pete."—Mr. T. O'Neill, of the Woodseats Palace, is advertising on an extensive scale. The items starred are "The Gem of India" and "The Trap."

The Grand, once a music-hall, in West Bar, and now known as the Cinema, is keeping its end up. Mr. Clayton is the proprietor, and the management is in the hands of Mr. Morgan. The programmes submitted during the current week includes "From Out the Flood" and "The Crook's Revenge."—Pictures of the A1 order, supported by good vaudeville, have been the keynote of success at the Phœnix, Hillsbro. Mr. Harold Phoenix has had competition of the severest order to contend with, but patronage has not been on the wane. Good audiences have been attracted by "In the Hands of London Crooks."

The Picturedrome, Grimesthorpe, under the ægis of Mr. F. G. J. Howson, holds its well-established patronage, and the excellent performances continue to attract large audiences. The star feature this week is "The Shattered Crown." Vaudeville is also being offered at this popular home of entertainment.

Mr. W. W. Bryan has made things hum in the Attercliffe Theatre Royal district, some of the largest posters and stations having been called in to aid in advertising his show. The Tuesday morning matinées have proved a success since their inception, but, with the advent of summer, these are now to be discontinued. "Give Us This Day" is a specimen of the fare provided.

The Globe Picture Hall, once a subsidiary concern of the Sheffield Picture Palace, Limited, has now blossommed forth as an independent company and the shares submitted to the public have been generously called for. Mr. Arnold G. Hides, the manager, is putting some excellent matter on his programmes, and the accompanying music is much appreciated by his patrons. For the current week "The Wastrel" is being featured.

Excellent attractions are instrumental in drawing large crowds to the Weston, where Mr. Lacy Lyne now controls affairs in an admirable manner. "Water War" is amongst an excellent programme submitted for the current week.—Rotherham continues to well support the Cinema House, and Mr. Victor Haydn, the manager, is deserving of all the patronage he receives. Mr. Haydn has booked "Spartacus" for this week, and the "house-full" notices are a very common sight.—Rotherham without a doubt has some very funny by-laws. I was informed by one local manager that he obtained the services of a man to stand at a corner of a street with a sign-post indicating the way to his theatre, and before very long he was visited by a police constable, who informed him he would have to call in his man or submit to police court proceedings for obstruction.

BEAUTY FILMS.

Featuring MARGARITA FISCHER, the World-Famous Photoplay Star, and presenting a magnificent show of 1914 Spring Styles in Ladies' Garments and Millinery—Attractive Living Models.

Paul Knox, son of a wealthy Californian "forty-niner," returns from Oxford, where he has been finishing his education, to learn that the "old folks" and Mr. and Mrs. Lee have arranged that he shall marry Margaret Lee, their neighbour's beautiful daughter, whom Knox has not seen since he left for the East and England.

Young Knox rebels at being married off without his consent, and Miss Lee, in a huff, leaves home rather than be united in marriage against her will. Margaret becomes a model in a department store in Los Angeles, while young Knox, cut off by his parents for his wilful conduct, is obliged to secure employment as a chauffeur.

Fate and circumstances play strange tricks in real life and Paul and Margaret unexpectedly encounter each other in the City of Flowers. They find means to spend a great deal of their time together and Paul unconsciously plays into his parents' hands by proposing to his sweetheart.

It is only when they are asked to sign their names at the marriage licence bureau that they discover each other's secret. Not at all unwilling now to return home to Santa Barbara, the young couple telegraph their respective mammas and papas and all ends serenely.

The length of this subject is approximately 977 ft., and the release date is 29th June.

The "Beauty" releases are handled by the American Co. (London), Ltd., 193, Wardour St., W.

FREE CHURCHMEN & CINEMAS.

HULL EXHIBITORS COMPLIMENTED.

(BY OUR LOCAL REPRESENTATIVE.)

The usual order of things was somewhat reversed at a meeting of the Hull Free Church Council last week at which I was present, when there was a discussion regarding the supposed evils of the cinema. Naturally, I expected and listened for nasty things, but they were not forthcoming, at least so far as the thirty or more picture palaces in Hull are concerned. On the contrary, the reverend gentlemen present and the lay members of the Council could find very little that was bad to say about them, although a resolution came from the National Free Church Council, affecting Sunday opening and films likely to have undesirable consequences, and the attendance of young children was passed. The Hull exhibitors were warmly complimented on the way in which they conduct their various picture palaces.

The President of the Council (Rev. W. H. Heap), who introduced the subject, gives a picture exhibition at the Queen's Hall Wesleyan Mission every Saturday night. He invited discussion, and said that as picture palaces had come to stay, they wanted to make the best of them. Proceeding, Mr. Heap said the Free Church Council had been asked to take some notice of the present position. In Hull, however, the standard of the picture palaces, they all agreed, was better than in many places, and he paid a warm compliment to the attitude of the Hull Licensing Committee. The matter was bound to come up eventually as to whether there should be a public censor of films. The Trade, however, was very anxious that this should not be the case. There was already a censor appointed by the film manufacturers, and it was for the Council to consider whether they should support the attempt to have a Government censor appointed.

The Rev. A. C. Greenwood read a resolution drafted by the National Conference, and the Rev. J. G. Patton moved its adoption.

Mr. E. Chatterton, secretary of the Hull Vigilance Association, said he had the privilege of visiting the Hull picture palaces at any time, and it was a long time since he had seen an undesirable film in the city. The managers were most careful, and repeatedly he (Mr. Chatterton) had been asked to see a film before it had been exhibited to the public, so keen were the managers not to offend the people who visited their particular theatre. He ventured to say that any member of that Council would be most welcome, and their criticism would be well received and seen to. He did not think there was any evil attending the young minds of Hull as a result of picture palaces. At any rate, he had not seen any of it, and he had opportunities for seeing such things if they existed.

The Rev. W. H. Heap said they might take it so far as Sunday opening in Hull was concerned, that the proprietors of some of the oldest cinemas in Hull were strongly opposed to any movement in that direction, and it was well that their hands should be strengthened. He thought they would strongly endorse the action of the Licensing Committee regarding the attendance of children at cinemas. So far as the nature of the films was concerned, he was not inclined to agree with Mr. Chatterton. He approved much more heartily of the humorous than of the dramatic pictures, for sentiments of the dramatic pictures were often harmful. Mr. Heap added that he believed that if there was any valid ground for objection, and it was conveyed to the managers courteously, the matter would receive attention.

The resolution was seconded and carried, and Mr. Heap said that at the same time they should express their gratitude to the Licensing Committee and the Hull cinema managers for the attitude they had already adopted.

SWANSEA & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr, Geo. Damer Vaughan, A.M.I.E.E., manager of the recently opened Elysium, Swansea, reports excellent business. From the commencement crowded houses have been in evidence, and this well-appointed cinema shows every sign of becoming one of the most popular in the town. The large audiences which gathered last week voiced unanimous approval of the excellent programmes provided, in which were included the orchestral and vocal selections.

Under the personal supervision of Manager Hal Cummings, the Carlton Cinema, Swansea, is rapidly gaining popular favour. "The Fatal Three," "Heartsease" and part 5 of the series of "Life in the British Army" figured prominently in an excellent programme, whilst the cup-tie final proved a great draw. The pictures here are well projected, and Mr. Fred Adlington's orchestra supplies delightful incidental accompaniments.

At the Uplands Cinema, Swansea, another recently opened hall, excellent business is done. "In the Firelight" and "At the Potter's Wheel" were amongst the chief dramatic subjects screened during the early part of the week, whilst there were a number of laughable comedies and interesting travel pictures.

At the Picturedrome, Morriston, Mr. O. T. Haines has evidently found Morriston's taste, for his programmes are being highly appreciated. "A Solitary Fort," "The Supreme Moment," and "Beauty Unadorned" were but a few of the good things screened during last week. The orchestra here, led by Mr. Hyman E. Jones, ranks amongst the best in the district.

Mr. Bowden has had a capital series of films at the Castle Cinema, Swansea, with the result that excellent business is being experienced. During last week "Napoleon" and "In Mid-Atlantic" were the outstanding features of high-class programmes.

"In the Coils of the Python" was the star attraction of strong programmes, which drew large audiences at the Palace and the Pictorium, Swansea. Other good features were "The Law and His Son," "The Sixth Commandment" and "A Texas Feud."

High-class films continue to form a prominent part of the programme of the Alpha Cinema, Morriston, and during the past fortnight a wealth of good things has been shown, including "Brand of Cain," "In Peril of the Law," "Bride of Death," "The Test" and "When the Earth Trembled."

The Picture House, Swansea, and the Tivoli, Cwmbwrla, both under the same directorate, screened similar programmes with excellent results. "The Convict's Son," "A Terrible Alternative," and "Beauty Unadorned" were the chief items.

At the Shaftesbury, Swansea, business is good; with "Her Lover from the Sea," "The Ironworkers' Strike," "Fates Round-Up," and "The Upward Way," the patrons have plenty of variety.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A PETERBOROUGH PAR.

An ideal programme was presented at the Broadway Kinema last week, the chief films including "Address Unknown" and "Love the Victor." For this week "The Three Musketeers" heads the bill.

STRENGHTENED AND SCRATCHPROOF.

The process introduced by Film Preservative, Limited, for the renovation of damaged or prematurely aged films has met with complete success, and the firm is kept at top pressure in order to cope with orders. By their process and special machinery, it is stated that the sprocket holes are strengthened, the films are cleaned and improved, and are rendered both scratch and waterproof. It is also claimed that an undoubted gain in clarity is seen in many of the subjects, whilst all tendency to brittleness is eliminated from films which have lost their pliability, this being restored to a wonderful degree. New films are improved by the preservative used, the waterproofing also facilitating their being cleansed from oil or dust.

EASTBOURNE ENTERPRISE.

Eastbourne, with its present half-dozen or so of picture houses, might be considered to be well provided. However, that may be. A new picture house is being erected in the eastern part of the town, while there is a rumour that yet another enterprise is projected for the central district. Meanwhile present concerns are giving a good account of themselves. In passing, it may be noticed there are no Sunday performances in Eastbourne.—The Gallery Kinema has the advantage of being situated most centrally and near to the residential area.—Enlarged accommodation has been amply justified by results which must be very gratifying to Mr. Arthur Davis, the manager. Principal items last week were "In the Grip of a Villain" and "An Italian Bride." The excellent equipment includes two Power's projectors.—The Tivoli Palace is a pioneer house in Eastbourne, having been open nearly six years. Improvements which include redecoration and reseating are being carried out. The manager, Mr. O. Denton, is well qualified by a long association with the house to cater for its patrons. Among principal films shown last week were "Her Husband's Friend" and "Fight for the Great Black Diamond."—The Eastern Cinema is well located for supplying the needs of one side of Eastbourne. Last week the principal attractions were "The Stolen Papers," a Sherlock Holmes drama, and "In the Firelight." This theatre has been open about two years. At the Electric Theatre, which occupies a good position in a main street, the principal films shown last week were "Temptations of a Great City" and "The Gunmaker of Moscow."—The Old Town Cinema occupies a district quite to itself. A popular programme is submitted, as may be inferred from the fact that the principal attractions last week were "Amid Raging Beasts" and "The Burning Train," and that for this week the Wells v. Blake contest is announced. This theatre is under the management of Mr. W. G. Wilkinson.—The Pavilion Cinematograph, Devonshire Park, screened as principal films last week "The Great Leap" and "The Mystery of the Stolen Documents." The Eastbourne Hunt Point-to-Point Races were also shown. In the Racquet Court the new "Life Targets," are an attraction to visitors.

EVENTS AT EVESHAM.

There has been an excellent selection of pictures at the Electric Playhouse during the past week. Mr. Beach secured "The Children's Hour," backed up by a fine range on the comic side, which proved a draw. For this week the patrons will find some interesting pictures, "In the Firelight" being the principal feature. For the latter portion of the week "Caprice" will be screened. "The Escape of Jim Dolan," a great "Western," will also be shown.

ANOTHER "DAVISON" SURPRISE.

Messrs. Davison's Film Sales Agency are rapidly gaining a name for smart advertising dodges in connection with their various releases. Their motto seems to be to let the "ad." fit the style, or the subject, and in this present instance a surprise is in store. "A Reminder from Davison's" refers to the comic, "Through the Ages," and fortunate indeed will the recipient be if he is not very forcibly "reminded" when he has torn the envelope. When, however, one remembers the nature of the comedy the shock will be readily forgiven.

EAST ANGLIAN EVENTS.

Important developments of an interesting character have to be recorded from Bury St. Edmunds. Mr. E. W. Nicholls, the well known amusement caterer of Great Yarmouth and Ipswich has acquired the Theatre Royal and has carried out extensive alterations with a view to providing entertainment which will vary from drama to up-to-date pictures and variety turns. The building has been thoroughly redecorated and equipped with an ice-cooling plant for use during the summer months. New upholstery has been fitted, also a new electric lighting system and generating plant. The dimensions of the stage are such that the films will be projected from the rear. We are pleased to note that Mr. Alec Wilkinson, late of the Gem, Great Yarmouth, has been appointed general manager, and during the short time he has been at Bury he has already made many friends by his geniality and tact. Well known as a successful exhibitor. Mr. Wilkinson has also a considerable reputation as a writer and has written a sensational scenario dealing with the historic associations of Bury, which will be produced under his own supervision, and will doubtless prove a strong local attraction. Mr. Nicholls' plans with regard to Bury by no means finish with the Theatre Royal, for he has acquired a large site in the centre of the town for the erection of the Coliseum, with a seating capacity of 1,500. It is proposed to vary the picture programme with variety and aquatic performances, for which purpose a sliding stage will be installed. The work will be commenced within a few days, and it is expected that the theatre will be open to the public at Christmas. We congratulate both Mr. Nicholls and his general manager, Mr. Wilkinson, and hope their efforts will be rewarded with every success.—Mr Cook put on at the Empire an attractive list of films last week, the programme including "The Clown's Daughter," "A Fatal Invention," and several humorous subjects. The accompaniment is now provided by a new orchestra under Mr. H. Stone's direction, and they are well maintaining the reputation established by their predecessors.

EXCELLENT ADVERTISING.

Mr. Ratesbonne, of the Eclair Film Company, Limited, has shown us one of the dainty throwaways prepared by the Eclair Publicity for "Protea II." It is very ingenious showing scenes from the film in a kind of merry-go-round. No doubt this smart throwaway will help boom "Protea" very effectively.

LARGE CONTRACTS SECURED.

Mr. James Hellenbrand, the well-known furnishing contractor, informs us that he has at the present time no less than twenty-two large contracts in hand for important cinema houses. These include new theatres at Rotherhithe, Goldsmith Row, Hackney, Gospel Oak, Felixstowe and Brentwood. His large staff is turning out the "Cinema" chair in huge numbers, and in a variety of styles.

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

Mr. D. W. Griffith, producer for the Reliance and Majestic Companies, has now finished work upon "Home, Sweet Home," the special release under the former trade-mark of which we have already given some particulars. The entire acting strength of both companies is featured, and Henry Walthall, in particular, gives one of his best performances as John Howard Payne, the author of the song. The subject is one in five reels, and will shortly be shown by the Western Import Company, Limited.

OPERATIC ARTISTES AND PICTURES.

An attraction which proved very successful at the Gaisford Cinema, Kentish own, N.W., last week, succeeded in taxing the capacity of the theatre. There were selections from "Faust" and "Il Trovatore," while the Toreador song (Carmen), sung by Signor Morro, enabled him to use his powerful voice to full advantage. In conclusion to a delightful film-opera entertainment, to which THE BIOSCOPE correspondent was heartily welcomed, we might say that Miss May Boothroy and Frank Beresford, a robust tenor, sang also in perfect unison with the films. Miss Lillie May at the piano gave some very fine renderings which were much enjoyed, and to judge from the enthusiastic reception, the innovation of operatic pictures will do much towards enhancing the reputation of Kentish towns oldest cinema house.

RESTRICTIONS AT HALIFAX.

At a special meeting of the licensing authorities, held last week at Halifax, Mr. Arthur Willey, appearing for the exhibitors of the district, asked for the deletion of clause 10 in the regulations with regard to the admission of children after 9 p.m. He also mentioned that, in addition to the clause mentioned, a further rule had been made that no child under fourteen should enter after 7 p.m. unless accompanied by an adult. In a great many cases an age limit of thirteen was fixed and the time 9 instead of 7. His clients wished they had been able to confer with the Justices and he felt sure that they would have convinced them that the new rule was unreasonable. Halifax was the only place he knew of where such a restriction was in force. He pointed out the position in which the working classes would be placed by the new rule, and asked for revision on the lines which obtained in the towns he mentioned.—Mr. Robertshaw, the magistrates' clerk, pointed out that the Bench could not deal with the application that morning. If Mr. Willey would write to him fully he would convene a meeting of all the licensing justices to consider the question.—It may be pointed out, says our correspondent, that in consequence of the previous deputation from the local managers, the justices have already altered the hour of prohibition from 7 to 9 p.m.

BRITISH MAKE APPRECIATED.

We are in receipt of a leaflet which gives an unsolicited testimonial to the Kinarko cinematograph carbons, mentioning that they are giving every satisfaction at theatres with which the writer is associated. These include some of the best known London houses, where the operators express themselves as particularly pleased with the results from the use of Kinarko carbons, both for steadiness and for inincreased facility. The new British-made carbon can be obtained from all leading supply houses, and is manufactured both for continuous and for alternating currents.

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

The King's visit to Cambridge last Thursday was a red-letter day in the history of the town. The local managers arranged to screen films of the proceedings, and undoubtedly this proved wonderfully successful. The programme at the Playhouse for this week is quite up to the standard, the chief pictures being "In the Firelight." "Snakeville's, New Doctor" and "The Long Portage."—"Amid Raging Beasts" is the principal film at the Electric Theatre this week.—"The Fatal Shot" and "The Iron Trail" attracted large audiences at the Empire.—As usual good programmes are screened at the Gaiety, the Palace Rink, and the New Palace (East Road).

CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

The local football picture referred to last week has been the means of filling the Rectory Hall each evening to its utmost, and will, in all probability, be shown in Jersey and Alderney in due course. Mr. Nisbet is now taking films of the beauty spots of Guernsey for screening in England. The manager applied for a renewal of his licence last week and was granted a provisional one for a month in order to effect alterations. "The Subterranean Town" and "The Autocrat of Flapjack Junction" have been among the chief items at the Rectory.—West's, Jersey, have screened "Old St. Paul's" and "The Face of Fear."—At the Alhambra, Jersey, "The Blight of Wealth" and "The King and Queen in Paris" proved attractive features.

LINES FROM LEICESTER.

The high level attained by local exhibitors is well maintained this week, the individual attractions being many and varied. Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale" and "Kronstadt" are among the splendid attractions provided at the Picture House.—"The White Witch" makes an exclusive appearance at the Silver Street Electric, "The Delayed Special" being another prominent feature.—Two "gems" at the Coliseum are "The Opium Smokers" and "The Wastrel,"—yet another attraction being the special engagement of the well-known Leicester vocalist, Mr. W. Payne.—"Kinemapoems" at Olympia will be an exclusive draw throughout the week, supported by a programme of all-round excellence—At the Empire, Wharf Street, the dramatic song-scena. "The Collier" will be a dominant feature.—Leicester's latest, the Tudor Cinema, is losing no time in making a bold bid for favour. "Perils of the Sea" and "The Runaway Freight Train" are among this week's allurements to this comfortable house.—Another house to "do things" is Mr. W. H. B. Emson's Belgrave Cinema, where compelling programmes have long been the rule. "The Master Crook Outwitted" and "The Shadow of Guilt" are the top-notchers here this week.—Among other important films showing—"Whimsical Threads of Destiny" at the Knighton Cinema, and "A Wall of Money" and "The Parasite" at the Boulevard, West End, are especially deserving of notice.

DOINGS AT DERBY.

The granting of stage play licences in respect of picture houses is down for discussion at the next meeting of the Derby Town Council. The special conditions which the Improvement Committee of the Council are in favour of imposing are that the premises shall be specially adapted for the purpose; that in any one entertainment no other item other than the display of pictures shall exceed in duration twenty-five minutes and other rules regarding safety from fire.

INTERESTING AMERICAN INJUNCTION.

A case recently decided in the Supreme Court at New York, on the application of Henry W. Savage, Inc., resulted in William Karrer being restrained from offering a feature identical in plot and by advertising methods in title with "Madame X." It was stated that the words "Magda, a Modern," were billed in lower case type, and the others in big poster type. The Famous Players Company, it may be mentioned, have the film rights of the Henry Savage, Inc. and the Charles Frohman productions.

NOTTINGHAM N.A.C.O.

The monthly meeting of the Nottingham Branch was held on Sunday at Trinity Square. The minutes of the last meeting were read and passed. Papers were asked for for the July meetings.—Mr. B. Pritchford promised one on "How to become an Operator." Mr. Pritchford's paper is to be backed up by Mr. Gilbourn with "Information for Operators."—A presentation was made to Mr. Chisholm, the introduction of this matter being left to Mr. E. Smith, of the Boulevard Palace, chairman of the Presentation Committee. The presentation took the form of a solid leather suit case—Mr. Chisholm briefly responded.

MELTON NEWS.

Once again the aged poor and cripples of Melton Mowbray have been provided with a pleasant entertainment at the King's, on this occasion through the generosity of residents in the town—Mrs. Pacey, Mr. Mackley, and Mr. Marshall. The popular manager always puts on a first-class programme, and the climax to a memorable matinée was reached when each visitor received a suitable gift. "Trapped" and "Fight for a Fortune" were recent successes, and "Sea's Recompense" is the feature this week-end. During the summer months (commencing this week) there will be one show only each evening.—Good business has resulted from "House of Discord," "The Message to Headquarters" and "Circumstantial Evidence" at the Thorpe End Picture Palace, and Mr. Cox is to be congratulated upon the way he caters for his patrons.

DOINGS IN FAIR DEVON.

The Bijou Picture Hall, Bideford, has now changed hands and was last Monday taken over by Mr. Ernest Blake, formerly pianist at the Electric Palace. He has secured the services of Mr. Allbright, late manager of the Electric Palace and Mr. Harry Gole. Mr. Blake commenced his management with a fine programme, the star picture being "The Wreck," which vastly pleased a crowded house. Mr. Ernest Blake will himself undertake the duties of pianist for a time.—The Electric put on a strong programme this week, including "Sixty Years a Queen." Special matinées will be given on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Mr. Otto Lind, formerly pianist at the Bijou, has now returned to the Electric Palace and received quite an ovation on his appearance on the Monday night. The management of this hall has now been taken over by Mr. J. E. Squire, the lessee.

PICTORIAL PERSHORE.

The manager of the Pershore Electric Theatre, is continually on the look out for and soon recognises a "winner." During the past week he has tried coloured pictures. The beautiful film, "The Path of Destiny" abounds with true dramatic art. Another fine number was "The Guiding Light." On Friday evening great interest was manifest when the "nameless film" competition came to an end, and the names of the successful competitors were announced. This week's films include "Saved from the Sea" and "A Race for an Inheritance," interspersed with comedy items.

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

At Keighley last week Mr. Michael P. Cryer, who as secretary represented the owners of the Haworth Hippodrome, was summoned for an alleged breach of the licence of the hall by permitting a concert by the Haworth Brass Band in the Hippodrome on Easter Sunday. The case for the prosecution was that the place was unlicensed for music and singing only in respect of accompaniment to cinematograph pictures, and that no performances should take place on Sundays except by special licence.—For the defence, Mr. Harry Laycock contended that the defendant had erred innocently, and he submitted that to keep open the building for a concert of that nature on Sunday was not a breach. If a concert of that kind could be given in an unlicensed building, why not in one licensed? The licence referred to music accompanying pictures. Such a concert had never been contemplated in the regulations, and, therefore, there could be no contravention of them. Similar concerts had been given in other licensed halls, and why should this building have been singled out for prosecution?—The magistrates, after a retirement, decided that a breach had been committed, but dismissed the case on payment of costs.

SOUTH WALES SNIPPETS.

The interest shown in the programmes provided at the Porth Grand is never allowed to diminish. The items are selected with great care, with the result that the cinema enjoys a high reputation. "Antony and Cleopatra" was screened recently, and while the picture was being shown, Mr. George Roberts, the manager, effectively described the film. During the first three nights of this week the special feature was "Sapho," other star pictures screened during the week being "A Lonely Road," "Raised from the Ranks" and "Her Boy." Two Gaumont machines are installed here, and the cinema is correctly advertised as one of the best ventilated in the district.—Mr. W. J. Bynorth, on behalf of Messrs. Poole's, Limited, at the Pictorium, Porth, is doing excellent business and giving a strong programme. Recent leading bookings were "The Great Python Robbery," "Beauty Unadorned," "The Worker," "The Golden Beetle" and "What Might Have Been."—Another of Messrs. Poole's successful ventures is the Ynyshir Hall, Rhondda Valley, where Mr. Fred Parry is in command. Mr. Parry is an expert advertiser and good business is the result. Top-liners shown included "Pearls Mean Tears," "To Shield Her Son" and "His Double Life."—The Tylorstown Amusements Company, Limited, are now lessees of the Coliseum, Tylorstown, and have retained the services of Mr. Frank Langley as manager. "Amidst Raging Beasts" has been a big hit with "Alone with the Devil." For this week, "Chinese Death Thorn" will be screened. For the last three nights "The Escape of Jim Dolan" will be screened. A morning performance is given here on Tuesdays with a full programme of pictures and varieties.

PUBLICITY FOR LINCOLN-CASS FILM.

We are informed that a well-known weekly is giving a long account of "The Two Bushmen" in its columns within the next week or two. This Lincoln-Cass exclusive is approximately 2,000 ft. in length. The X. L. Film Company hold the British rights and have booked most of their copies round about release date (end of this month). We are told that the remaining districts are filling up quickly.

NOTED AT NEWPORT.

Despite the foretaste of summer there has been no slackening in the patronage accorded to Olympia, Newport (Mon.), where the "talking pictures" (Edison's Kinetophone) are changed twice weekly and prove a tremendous draw. They are in addition to a full ordinary programme of such films as (this week) "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," "True Irish Hearts" and "A Woman of the People," and numerous comedy pictures.

HEROES AND HASTINGS.

Several cinema producers have arranged to take pictures of the "Pageant of Heroes" to be held at Hastings and St. Leonards at Whitsuntide. Among other very interesting aspects will be demonstrations by makers of diving apparatus and divers, waterplane flights with life-saving demonstrations, rescues by rocket apparatus, raft building competitions, and a mining display. The latter will be given by the Welsh team of rescuers whose work at the Senghydd disaster won such warm praise.

BY THE SANDS OF REDCAR.

A big scheme is mooted for Redcar, the popular Yorkshire Coast holiday resort. A company has been formed which includes in its most active promoters Mr. Thomas Thompson, the well-known exhibitor, for the purpose of erecting a White City, to be in beautiful grounds and to include practically every form of entertainment. The presence of Mr. Thompson on the Board will doubtless ensure a considerable proportion of attention being paid to the cinema side. The capital of the company is £7,500, of which £6,000 is offered to the public in £1 shares. The architects are Messrs. Marshall and Tweedy, of Newcastle, and the secretary of the company, Mr. William Anderson, of Middlesbrough.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

The "God of Girzah" was the principal attraction at the Grand, Middlesbrough, last week. There were also included in an excellent programme "The Invisible Hand" and "His Foreman's Conscience."—At the Hippodrome, "The Inspector's Story" was a big attraction, whilst "An Elusive Diamond" and "Bunny's Mistake" were excellent comedy films.—"The Golden Beetle" was an exciting star at the Empire Palace, Stockton, where "The Frail Vessel" and "Max, the New Butler," were also shown.—A popular reception was accorded to "The Cup Final Mystery," which was successfully shown at the Royal Cinema. "Jim, of the Haunted Police," was another capital drama, and "Beauty Unadorned" was also well received.—"A Wrecker of Lives" and "A Fight for Fortune" attracted huge crowds to the Globe Theatre, where the story of a Northern ironmaster, "Justice," was shown in the latter part of the week.—The programme at the Empire Playhouse, Darlington, included "After Many Years" and "Through the Clouds."—Large audiences visited the Court Kinema and Arcade Cinema, where notable incidents in Napoleon's life formed an excellent theme. The programme also contained "Deception" and "Lily, Housekeeper." During the latter half of the week "A King's Romance" and the "Cup Final" were prominent attractions.

FINE FLORAL DISPLAY.

Among the most successful of North London houses is the Palais de Luxe, Wood Green, which is now under new management and has the happy record of crowded houses, owing to the renown of its programmes. A charming feature of the building is the furnishing by the Bioscope Film and Supply Company of some very fine floral decorations, which give the entrance and the theatre quite an ideal and artistic touch.

A NORTHERN RECORD.

What must be a record for the screening of the great Cines production, "Quo Vadis?" is that held by Mr. J. G. Cole, of Buckie, who showed the picture in a village (Fochabers) the entire population of which musters 900. But this is typical of the man, and is just what one would expect from a member of the Trade who, by his individual efforts and business acumen, has risen from the position of manager to the controlling head of one of the largest syndicates in the North of Scotland. Eighteen months ago Mr. Cole was manager at the Lyceum, Buckie, for Mr. T. H. Carr. Striking out fearlessly for himself, Mr. Cole formed a syndicate, which controls theatres in Buckie, Nairn, Huntly, Inverurie, and Keith, all of which are doing excellent business. "East Lynne," "The Three Musketeers," "Cleopatra," "Sixty Years a Queen," "Amidst Raging Beasts," "The Wreck," etc., have all been shown on this circuit. Though far removed from the great film centres, Mr. Cole is out for big things, and would be pleased to have his name added to the mailing list of any firm with whom he is not at present acquainted. The Palace, Buckie, is sufficient address.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

The Prince's Picture Theatre occupies a position within a stone's throw of the busy thoroughfare of King Street, Hammersmith. Evidently the management is determined that the house shall not suffer through not having a frontage on the main artery of traffic, for in the evenings an electrically lighted hand inscribed with the name turns the gaze of passers-by in the direction of the brilliantly illuminated approach to the theatre. Arrived there, the visitor finds a spacious interior, with a comfortable lounge annexed. The house has been open nearly nine months, and accommodates 750. Last week's principal films were "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" and "The Mystery of the Stolen Documents." Detective drama is found to take well with patrons, who appreciate the music of an orchestra of four skilled performers, and the projection of the pictures, which is excellently effected by an Ernemann machine of the newest model. The proprietors are the C. and B. Cinemas, Limited, and the resident manager counts nearly ten years' experience in the London district alone, having been previously manager of another enterprise of the same firm.

The Picture Playhouse, Hammersmith, which is one of the enterprises of Electric Palaces, Limited, accommodates nearly 700, and has been open four years. Under the management of Mr. Gordon Mare, seconded by Mr. R. E. Farwig, it has established itself in the regard of a wide circle of patrons, many of whom are constant in their attendance here. The screening of the pictures is particularly effective, a Gaumont projector being used. Prompt attention is given to the events of the present, and a film of the Cup-Final was shown in the evening of the day on which the match took place. An orchestra of four pleasingly accompanies the pictures. Last week's programme included the Vitagraph drama, "Officer John Donovan."

At the Picture Coliseum, Harlesden, last week, the chief attractions were "Unjustly Accused," "Wamba" and "The Golden Pathway."

"Sixty Years a Queen" was the attraction provided by Mr. E. J. Rawkins, managing director at the Grand Cinema, Paddington, last week.

The Ionic Theatre, Golder's Green, which caters for the Hampstead Garden Suburb, has been drawing patrons by the films, "Lure of London" and "Romance of Old Brittany."

Mr. Weller featured the "Discovery of America" to good houses. "The Lure of London" will shortly make its appearance.

At the Frognal Bijou, Mr. V.. Mann continues to do capacity business. Interesting items from a generous programme were "Mabel's New Hero" and "A Modern Steel Plant."

"Quo Vadis?" is doing the business at the Hampstead Picture Playhouse, where "effects" and a capable orchestra continue to make this theatre the rendezvous of Hampstead picture-lovers.

Calling in at the Hampstead Electric Theatre, I found Mr. Siden screening "O'Brien Comes Back," to the delight of a huge audience. Other subjects on the two and a half hour programme were "The King's Men" and "Almost a Rescue."

At the Electric Palace, Highgate Hill, "The Devil's Gap" was topping a liberal programme, while "A Stage-door Flirtation" was quite to the liking of the large audience. Incidental music is submitted by a capable orchestra, while "effects" are also utilised.

With "The Lady of Monsoreau" heading the programme, it is not surprising that the capacity of Mr. P. M. Beck's Ideal Cinema, Holloway, was taxed to its utmost. From Mr. Van Biene, who is in charge of affairs, I gathered that several "big things" are to be included in forthcoming programmes. The performance here is greatly enhanced by the fine recitals of the Imperial Orchestra, which accompanies the afternoon and evening performances.

I found Kinemacolor on the screens at the Highbury Imperial, where capacity business has been the order.—Looking in at Biograph's Parkhurst Theatre, I found a good house enjoying "Bunny's Mistake," while "Elusive Diamond" and "The Conqueror" were also included in the programme.

At the Electric Pavilion, Holloway Road, Mr. Phren has featured "The Port of Doom." "Effects" and the fine organ recitals are popular features at this hall, which has a capacity of 850.

Mr. Frank King, R.A.M., is now at the head of the orchestra of the Balham Palladium, where comfort and first-class programmes continue to draw full audiences.

An institution of great public utility has been chosen by Mr. Pearse, of the Tooting Pavilion, as the object to benefit from a portion of the receipts from the Sunday evening entertainments, which are of a special character. It is the St. John's Ambulance Brigade, whose members are prominent in devoting their weekly half-holiday, and occasionally a Sunday, in Hyde Park, to giving first-aid in accidents at local and Metropolitan assemblies.

There is a homeliness about the cinema theatre that renders it particularly suitable for the exercise of the talents of ladies in giving the patrons a cordial reception, or in supervising the efforts of the members of the staff in that direction. This fact has been noted by the owners of two of the Tooting enterprises. Ever since its opening, two years ago, the Broadway Cinematograph Palace has been most successfully controlled by Mrs. Hiller, the wife of one of the proprietors. Mr. Pearse, the owner of the new Pavilion, who, as a former travelling entertainer, has experience in all parts of the kingdom to his credit, is assisted by Mrs. Pearse. One wonders if the commodious and comfortable tea lounge at this house was the contribution of this lady to the plans. On the night of the Football Final the film of the match and the doings of the King were available here as early as 10 o'clock.

The cinematograph camera is being cleverly utilised for advertising purposes by Messrs. H. S. Mason and Co., of Mitcham Road, Tooting. They have taken films of the shopping district at Balham during the busiest part of the day, and also of scenes at various establishments. The pictures, which also show the activities of a local newspaper, and of various newsagents, are being screened this week at Pyke's Circuit, Balham, and at the Balham Hippodrome

Dropping into the Picture House, Crouch End, I found Mr. G. Martinengo entertaining a large audience with an excellent programme. There is a continuous performance commencing at 6.30, the prices of admission being 3d., 6d. and 9d. A film depicting the life and works of Richard Wagner is being shown this week, and the incidental music consists of Wagner compositions. "The Two Sergeants" and "Madame Sans Gène," will be shown next week. The gardens adjoining the theatre are being laid out and seated for al fresco picture entertainments.

The management of the Crouch End Hippodrome have recently added one or two variety turns to the programme. This week, despite the warm weather, excellent business is being done with such fine dramas as "A Wrecker of Lives" and "The Great Leap," besides a number of good comedy films. The musical programme is supplied by Miss Enid Lawrence, a soprano, and Mr. Fred Collett, a concertina and dulcephone bell player. The theatre is capable of accommodating about 3,000, the prices of admission ranging from 2d. to 1s. There are matinées on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 3 p.m.

The large audiences which assemble nightly at the Electric Coliseum, Harringay, prove that the management caters well to the public liking. When I visited this cosy hall there was hardly a vacant seat. The features of the programme for this week includes "The Crime in the Tunnel" for the early part, and "David Garrick," featuring Sir Charles Wyndham, for the latter three days. The Army film is proving very popular. Seats can be booked at this hall, no extra charge being made.

The popularity of the Rink Cinema, Finsbury Park, increases each succeeding week. This is due in no small measure to the manner in which Mr. Walden controls affairs. "A Wrecker of Lives" is the feature for the first three days, whilst the week-end programme includes a Western drama, "The Great Leap." A word of praise is due to Mr. Parker's band, which accompanies the pictures in excellent style. Admission to the winter gardens at this theatre is free, and dainty teas are served at popular prices.

The management of the Highbury Imperial invariably select an up-to-date programme, which includes this week, "Devil's Gat," "The Freedom of Cuba," "Duty," and "Her Children."

Mr. Williams, manager of the Alexandra Theatre, is doing good business. This theatre is capable of holding 3,000. The prominent picture at this hall last week was "The Jew," while this week the feature is "The Third String." There is also an excellent variety programme. Matinées are given every Thursday at 2.30 p.m., free teas being supplied at these performances.

Mr. Fred W. Purcell, managing-director of the Amherst Hall, Kingsland, knows how to secure a full house. Each week he books an exclusive, that for last week being "Maria Marten." This week "The King of the Seven Dials" is being shown in conjunction with a full comedy and dramatic programme. On Sunday evenings there is an entire change of programme, the proceeds of the performances being given to the London Medical Charities Fund.

Mr. Courtney Crocker informed me that business is satisfactory at the Electric Coliseum, Stoke Newington. This week he is showing "The Murdoch Trial" and "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves."

A petition in favour of the granting of a music licence for the "Norton Lodge" Cinema, Stoke Newington Road, has been prepared for presentation to the London County Council by the promoters.

Miss Florence Johnson, manageress of the Clapton Cinematograph Theatre, is doing excellent business. The programmes for the week include "The Stolen Pearls," "Beauty Unadorned," "Thor," and "Officer John Donovan." There is a continuous performance from 3 to 11, the prices of admission being 3d., 6d. and 1s.; children are admitted half-price. On Sundays a programme of high-class pictures is shown. Doors open at 6 p.m., and the proceeds go to the Haggerston Medical Society.

Something out of the ordinary was seen at the Central Hall, Stamford Hill, this week, in "War on the Lilliputians." Yesterday (Wednesday) "Master of the World" replaced it as the outstanding attraction.

A FORTUNATE ESCAPE.

Motoring from Hastings to London the other day, Messrs. de la Cour and Facey, directors of the Bioscope Film and Supply Company, Limited, met with what was very nearly a bad accident. Mr. de la Cour was driving a 20 h.-p. car, when, owing to a baker's cart being in the middle of the road, he had to take a bad corner from a sharp angle. The car skidded in the dust, and finally ran off the road, mounted the bank and turned broadside into the hedge, where it overturned, having destroyed about 10 yards of privet hedge. Mr. Facey was thrown out of the car over the hedge, but escaped without injury, while Mr. de la Cour was pinned under the steering wheel. Fortunately, he also escaped unhurt, the car being only slightly damaged. Mr. Facey estimated the speed at the time of the accident at about 10 miles an hour. The scene of the accident was Vineball, the seat of Lord Ashton, former M.P. for Luton.

By JOHN CHER.

John Calvin Brown, the well-known American entrepreneur, who started Magic City, and for a season controlled Earl's Court, London, has returned to Paris, and is renewing his energies in the amusement business. It is rumoured that Mr. Brown has a big scheme on foot to start a music-hall in the capital.

Much fun was caused and obtained on one of the days during the King and Queen's stay by half a dozen students with an imitation cinematograph camera. The jovial young men went amongst the crowds with their comical apparatus and directed the "lens" on all the pretty girls who happened to pass by, which proceedings, needless to say, proved vastly amusing to the onlookers, and occasionally a trifle humiliating to the individual concerned.

Mr. Abe Warner, of Warner's Features, wound up his trip to Europe with a short stay in Paris. After having purchased an important feature film, he left last Wednesday week for the States.

A league boasting of a committee of the leading theatrical and moving picture men has been formed to try to abolish "poor rights." "Poor rights" is a 10 per cent. tax levied on all tickets for amusements. The 10 per cent. is paid by the public; consequently, as the poor people are probably the greatest patronisers of the cinema, it is a case of the poor feeding the poor.

Gustave Flaubert's "Salammbo" is the latest literary work to be adapted for the moving pictures. A French producing firm is now making the film on a lavish scale.

Statistics published in the Cinema show that England is far behind other countries in transacting business in Hungary. Last year Austria contributed 55,000 films to that country, Germany 5,000, Italy 2,000, France 12,000, Denmark 2,000, and England 1,000. As to apparatus, Germany tops the list with 125, Austria follows with eighty, then France seventy-two, and lastly England six.

Last Saturday the Cosmograph Company presented to the Trade at the Lutetia Wagram a magnificent production, entitled "1870—1871." This is undoubtedly one of the finest pictures produced by the new and enterprising firm.

Readers who follow these notes will doubtless have noticed that I was quite right when I said several weeks ago that the cross-channel trip of Their Majesties would not be neglected by the vigilant camera men. But why is it that the Warwick "scoop" has not yet been seen in Paris?

The Paris Trade now includes a woman agent. Mdlle. Halley, who, I believe, was recently with Louis Aubert and Co., has opened offices at 19, bis rue Richer.

Monsieur Monat, in view of the coming slack season, has decided to retard the release of "Shakespeare" until next September. Monsieur Monat has just secured the concession for a new Dutch brand of films called "Tulipa."

The Agence Moderne Cinematographique has obtained from Messrs. Anderson, Vay, Hubert, and Blumberg the French rights for a sensational Alfred Lind production, "In the Name of Allah."

Mr. Prieur is handling the Ammex feature, "The Rebellion in Mexico."

After having been successfully launched in England by the New Gallery Kinema, the Film Color Ulysse is now being exploited in France. It is noteworthy that most French inventions are first seen in England.

Mr. Paul Ladewig has returned from Barcelona, where, he tells me, he passed a very busy and fruithful few days.

"A Love Sacrifice" is the title of the first product of the Artista Company, of Bordeaux.

A dancing school, where pupils are taught the rudiments of the latest terpsichorean novelties, is one of the newest Parisian innovations in the world of gaiety. Not only are films of expert dancers shown, but from time to time the amateurs are cinematographed in order that the defects of the latter may be graphically shown by comparison between the two films. This excellent idea is capable of being developed more especially with regard to big stage ballets and plays which are to be presented by touring companies. The original production would be taken by the picture men and the result shown to the people who are to produce the replica.

PRESTON'S PICTURES.

The possibility of good local pictures for reproduction always finds the management of the Prince's Theatre ready to avail themselves of the opportunity. Their enterprise in this connection has always been liberally recognised in the past, as might be expected. The depicting of a recent Boy Scout rally held in the town, and attended by troops from many towns and villages, attracted large audiences to the theatre. These local events are always worth doing. Another picture of a sensational turn shown was "Through Flaming Paths." There were also some good humorous items, among which "Mike and Jake," as pugilists, took a lot of beating for pre-eminence.

At the Imperial, where two different programmes are given weekly, it would be difficult to choose any picture for special distinction. In one film, "In Peril of the Law," the picturesque was very much to the fore. "The Lure of Gold" was a stirring detective drama, and "The Mystery of St. Martin's Bridge" showed an exciting race to the scaffold to save an innocent life. As for humour, it was well represented, especially in "Bunny for the Cause of the Suffragettes."

The proprietor of the Temperance Hall must often wish that his theatre were larger. In the most pressing picture season, the winter months, the house is always packed to the fullest capacity, and to find the place as full during the heat wave, as I did the other night, was certainly wonderful. It says a great deal for the standard of subjects displayed. Those in last week's programme fully occupied the allotted time for the performance. They included "Were Wolf," an excellent American Indian tale of allegiance, "Her Love Letter," a pretty romance, and such fine comedies as "The Passing of Black Pete," a boxing picture, and "Sammy's Double Bass," besides other pictures.

The Embee Hall continues to receive good patronage. Its principal pictures were "Little Kaintuck" and "A Lesson in Jealousy," a particularly smart comedy.—Chief of place at the Marathon was given to "The Boomerang," a war romance.

Among the films screened at other halls were:—"In the Slums," at the Alexandra Palace; "Orders Under Seal," at the Cosy Cinema; "Joseph and His Brethren" and "The Moonshiners' Last Stand," at Bennett's Electric; "Hearts and Flowers" at the Picturedrome; and "The Mystery of the Silver Skull" and "The End of the Circle," at the Queen's Hall.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE THANKS EXHIBITOR.

The Bootle Education Committee at their last meeting expressed their high appreciation of the generosity of Councillor George Prince in having entertained 6,000 schoolchildren to see "Sixty Years a Queen" at the Sun Hall; also for having awarded eight handsome prizes for the best descriptive essays. The film has exercised a good influence at Bootle, and everyone concerned has been loud in praise of it.

AT BREEZY BLACKPOOL.

"Parsifal" proved a tremendous draw at the Clifton last week, where it was screened with full music accompaniment. Judging by the consistently good audiences patronising this theatre, Mr. Holgate seems to be able to hit their taste to a nicety. A continuance performance is now being given.

The Royal Pavilion is obtaining a fair share of business. Last week the "star" for the whole period was "Tragedy in the Clouds" in four parts. Another feature was "The Harper Mystery." Among future bookings is "The Midnight Wedding."

Although only open for the present season since Easter, the Central Beach Cinema is making rapid progress, and bids fair to become one of the most popular picture houses in Blackpool. Included in the programme were "On the Track of the Spider League" and "The Escape of the White Glove Gang." Special mention must be made of the benefit to be held on Friday evening on behalf of the St. John Ambulance fund. Apart from the ordinary programme, several artistes will appear in a musical programme. On May 11th and 12th, a performance will be given on behalf of the "Bohemians" Benevolent Fund. The Mayor of Blackpool, who is the President of the Fund, together with the Lady Mayoress, will be present. A special programme has been provided, among the pictures being "A Winter's Tale."

Mr. Beck, of the Waterloo Picture House, featured "Tess," and the reception accorded this picture far exceeded his expectations. "Eileen of Erin" was also a popular film.

The Winter Garden's Pavilion has returned to pictures, and last week reopened with "Birds of Prey."

I must apologise to my Fleetwood friends for my notes on the picture theatres of that town being crowded out of a recent issue, but I hope to include further details at a future date.

CHARMING EAST END CINEMA.

In connection with the recent opening of the Mile End Palladium, an exceedingly fine souvenir booklet was distributed to members of the large audiences. This gives an excellent resume of the various special features of the up-to-date building from screen to pay-box. The house is luxuriously furnished and was erected to the designs of Messrs. Adams and Coles. The elaborate plastic decoratons are by Messrs. Bockbinder, Limited, while a somewhat unique system of ventilation has been carried out. Steamless gas radiators by the Davis Company are used, while the pictures are excellently projected by two Indomitable projectors supplied by the Tyler Apparatus Company. An unique feature of the theatre is seen in the fine conservatory which forms the entrance hall and is lit by subdued amber incandescent lights.

Both Sides of the Picture Show Question.

By G. E. HOPCROFT.

Much has been said, and perhaps even more written, concerning picture theatres and their films, but it seems to me that no two writers can agree concerning them. On the one side we are confronted with stories of children going quickly down the "broad road" all on account of the dreadful picture palace, and, on the other hand, we are asked to believe that all is well. Is it not time that we tried to look upon this question in a sensible and fair manner?

I suppose it will be admitted that it is possible for some films to do harm, but it is not fair to condemn picture theatres because some films may possibly suggest a certain course of action to a certain type of mind. To begin with, it should be remembered that films have to pass the Censor, and, therefore, it is impossible that really bad or indecent films can be shown. The danger really lies in the fact that the Censor cannot save people from themselves.

Any control over films can only be exercised up to a certain point. For example, a film which absolutely breaks the law of the land would be banned at once, but we can hardly expect the Censor to exclude a plot which shows, for example, a murder or the clever tricks and dodges of a gang of thieves. What we want is films which deal with good, honest, sound subjects, and, in justice to our British companies, let us confess that it is very rarely that we get a British film of a morbid or undesirable class.

In dealing with objectionable features, let me say that I am not referring to anything definitely bad or immoral in itself, for, even before the censorship was established, I cannot remember seeing a film which could be objected to as immoral.

It is far better that certain episodes should be ignored by film producers, among them being scenes depicting the methods of robbing a safe or other expert criminal dodges in great detail. Deathbed scenes might well be excluded, and it is entirely unnecessary to include situations glorifying divorce, murder, etc., and in which evil is made to triumph over right.

There are so many subjects to choose from that it seems a pity to rake over rubbish heaps. The stage has at times dealt freely with some of these subjects, and many scenario writers seem to think that the picture house must ape the theatre. I trust this may never come to pass, for at present the picture shows—with all their alleged faults—are doing what the theatres and music-halls cannot do—they are attracting all classes and every section of the people, not in thousands, but in millions.

It is asserted that "the pictures" put ideas into children's heads, and it would be idle to deny that this is true. They often inculcate kindness to others, courage, and hope. Is it not possible that at times the turning point of a lifetime is that supreme moment when the child or lad sees the hero of the film turn from his evil ways and follow that which is lawful and right? Children worship the hero of the film, and I fancy that Mr. G. M. Anderson and Mr. John Bunny rule over very big empires.

If we speak fairly, we must admit that we seldom see a British or American film which could be objected to as likely to do harm to children. After all, the children generally show what they like, and anyone who has visited the pictures half a dozen times must have noticed how they cheer the triumph of right over wrong. Some time ago an American film was being shown in the south of England, and I was much struck with the way the lads and children hissed the villain, and how they shouted when the hero, in spite of the threats of the "farm hands," helped a poor old farmer and gave the villain what he richly deserved—a good thrashing.

Although I do not profess to be an expert on the technical side of film producing, I may perhaps, as one of the public, be allowed to express an opinon on one or two points. To begin with, does it not seem strange that so many of the films shown should be produced by foreign companies? Our own companies are turning out good work, and, as an expert writer pointed out some little time ago, half the point of the American films is lost on the average Briton because, never having visited the United States, he is unable to understand the different social conditions which exist there. I fancy that quite a different kind of picture play would succeed in this country, because the British public must surely be getting tired of cowboys, French villains, and the Continental detectives. We British depend upon the sea and love it. Why not give the poor cowboy a rest and show us the British sailor? Surely if he were given a chance he could hold his own as a popular favourite?

Let me suggest that most of us would like to see the public insisting on the right sort of film being shown. If managers would take a ballot and find out what their patrons like and dislike, they would have something to go upon. Provided the public insisted on good, wholesome films and natural acting, the high standard of the picture theatre would be maintained.

Sunday Opening in Middlesex.

Some time ago, it will be remembered, the Middlesex County Council delegated powers to their Licensing Committee with respect to the granting of provisional licences, and with regard to the annual licences it was agreed to follow the same procedure as the London County Council. One of the conditions under which the licences were granted was that there should be no opening on Sundays.

At the meeting of the Middlesex County Council last Thursday the Licensing Committee reported that the powers conferred upon them did not enable them to institute legal proceedings in cases where the statutes under which they granted licences were infringed. Accordingly they recommended a formal resolution giving them the necessary powers. The Committee further reported that they had had under consideration reports from the police as to Sunday cinematograph exhibitions being held in premises licensed by the County Council. These entertainments are stated to be taking place in upwards of fifty cinemas. In the first instance, the report proceeded, the Committee thought it desirable that proceedings should be instituted against the licensee of at least one cinematograph theatre in each Petty Sessional Division which is, or has been, open on Sundays. The Committee recommended accordingly.

On the reception of the Committee's report a discussion ensued on the first recommendation, and an amendment having been put that the debate should be adjourn for one month and carried, a similar motion was proposed in the case of the Sunday prosecution and this also was agreed to. The whole matter therefore remains in abeyance.

The discussion followed on an amendment by Mr. C. L. Attenborough (Staines) who moved "provided that as regards Sunday performances no such prosecussion ensued on the first recommendation, and an the district council or corporation of which shall by resolution request the County Council not to take such prosecutions." He said he hoped he came as the bearer of the olive branch. The whole question of Sunday opening had been a matter of considerable irritation to the Licensing Committee, but he thought the suggested amendment was a way out of the difficult situation. He was assured by the cinema proprietors that they did not wish to open in a district where the idea was opposed, but at the same time they asked to be allowed to meet the wishes of a deciding majority who required the Sunday opening. The County Council ought not to prevent the reasonable wishes of certain parts of the county. As they knew, Tottenham had expressed a desire for Sunday opening, and the County Council should not oppose the wishes of those who knew their own requirements best. It might be said that the County Council, if it passed the amendment, was shirking its duties. He would point out, however, that they had no statutory powers to prevent Sunday opening. The Act only required the authorities to see that the premises licensed were suitable for the entertainment. The situation had only arisen as the result of their prostituting the Act.

Mr. W. L. Ainlsie (Hampton) seconded, and said if a section of the county desired Sunday opening it was not for the County Council, whose component parts were made up of representatives from north, south, east and west, to oppose then in their desire. The locality concerned should know best, and it was not within the power of the County Council to try to stop it. He had never been in a picture palace and did not want to go, but he should certainly object if anyone encavoured to stop him playing golf on Sunday.

Mr. Basil Holmes (Ealing) opposed the amendment, and said by passing it the County Council would be fettering their hands. It seemed to him that, however grave the case, the County Council could not prosecute unless they had the sanction of the local authority. He would point out that a local authority had no power to deal with such a question, and should the amendment be carried they would find future district council elections being fought on the question as to whether cinemas should be opened on Sundays. He did not think that was right. Local authorities would object to pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for the County Council. It was their duty and not the district council. The County Council, by passing the amendment, would be stultifying itself in the eves of the local authorities and the public.

Mr. Warnford-Davies (Chiswick) supported Mr. Attenborough. He could not see any more harm in looking at a picture on a screen than one in a gilt frame. Personally, he considered it would be an immense advantage if the district councils could take a referendum on the subject of Sunday opening.

Mr. H. Barrass (Edmonton) spoke in support of the amendment, pointing out that whereas in the summer the people had the open-air amusements, in the winter they had only the picture palaces, and argued that their one form of recreation should not be closed to them on Sundays.

The Chairman (Alderman Regester) remarked that the amendment seemed to him to put the County Council in the position of abdicating its powers to the local authorities.

Mr. Glyn Jones, M.P. (Palmer's Green) disagreed. He thought it was merely a limitation of the powers already delegated to the Licensing Committee, and left the County Council with full powers to take action should they think fit.

Mr. H. Neild, M.P. (East Finchley) thought, in view of the importance of the subject, full consideration should be given to it, and he accordingly moved the adjournment of the debate.

This was seconded and carried.

Mr. Attenborough thereupon moved that a similar proposition on the recommendation that prosecutions should be instituted. This also was carried, and the whole question therefore stands adjourned until the next meeting.

FORTHCOMING FEATURES.

It is announced that the New York Motion Picture Corporation are shortly issuing the first of a series of special subjects of from four to six reels in length. This addition to their programme is the result of a lengthy visit of Mr. Charles Baurmann, Vice-President of the Company, to the producing studios at Los Angeles. The first will be "The Wrath of the Gods," with the Japanese actress, Tsuru Aoki, in the leading role. "The Typhoon" will also be shortly released. The New York Corporation's regular staff at Los Angeles now numbers over 400 persons, and they also possess a complete Indian village, a troupe of Imperial Japanese actors and some hundreds of horses The Western Import Company, Limited, are the English agents.

NEWS FROM HERTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The trend of the cinematograph towards becoming an educational asset has received a little impetus in the county through the action of the Letchworth Parish Council. At the last meeting of that authority a petition was read from Mr. Percival Westell, whose cinema Nature lectures have been a signal success. The petition, referred to the educational value of the Nature lectures, and asked the Council if it could bring this matter before the notice of the County Council with the view of obtaining a grant towards the expenses of the lectures.

A member hoped that something would come of the memorial and that the lectures might be continued. At the same time he desired to say that the Council had no status to apply to the County Council. He suggested that the letter and petition be sent to the local body of school managers, strongly advising them to communicate with the County Council and bring about the desired result. The proposal was seconded and unanimously carried.

This week I had the pleasure of welcoming back to Watford Mr. W. J. Palmer and cogratulating him on his recovery from a somewhat serious illness. Mr. Palmer now has sole control of the Kinetic Company's old-established house in the Market Place, as well as the Gem Picture Palace at Tring, for which town he left Watford for a short time. Mr. Palmer's return to Watford was made the occasion, on April 27th, of a grand reorganisation and opening day, and there was a big assembly of friends and patrons to wish Mr. Palmer success and renewed health. The proceeds of the day was given to the Summer Wages Fund of the Watford Football Club, and this generous act elicited many expressions of approval, for the local public take a keen interest in the club and all its doings. Variety has also been introduced at the Kinetic Company's house, and this is the first picture hall in the town to give films and vaudeville. The picture of the week was "Kelly from the Emerald Isle," and Mr. Palmer is introducing Walter Howard, a banjoist, during the current week. With admission prices as low as 2d. and none higher than 6d. the Kinetic house starts afresh under Mr. Palmer's direction with every prospect of renewed prosperity.

The management of the Central Hall continues to show that pictures have an increasing hold upon the public. Patrons of this popular house having a rich feast of film fare. Sir J. Forbes-Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott in the "Hamlet" film. "In the Hands of London Crooks," "Oliver Twist," and Master of the World," have all been on the programmes here. On Cup-Tie Day the evening audience was given the film of the match, and by the time the picture was due the building was quite full.

Mr. Jacobs gives the Empire the fullest local publicity, and having excellent picture to fall back on, besides one of the best orchestras I have heard in a picture house, pulls in a good share of patronage. Powerfully attractive programmes have contained as exclusives "Zigomar," "Napoleon" and "Honesty," which films have proved as successful as any pictures shown in the town.

Messrs. W. Skipp and Sons scored freely last week with "The Last Days of Pompeii," and have shown at the Ware Picture Hall film programmes including "A Fight for a Fortune," "Mother's Boy," "The Club of the Black Mask" and "The Diver."—Harpenden White Palace experienced quite a boom in business through the booking of "Sixty Years a Queen," and other films booked for this hall have been "Shadows of the Night," "Fascination of the Dance," and "The Message from Mars."

OUR POSTER GALLERY.

There is invariably an irresistible appeal in a feature drama which portrays such heroism as that associated with mining life, and the Vitagraph Company give the promise in the story of "The Master of the Mine" of a stirring heart appeal and a production of especial merit. The poster depicted above is of an extremely artistic nature, and gives three actual scenes from the drama.

NEWCASTLE NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Barry Rayne broke all records at the Grainger Picture House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, his programme being exclusive practically throughout. The pictures included "The Lady of Lyons" and "For Love of a Man," whilst he had also the film of the Mexican rebellion. This picture included a most interesting series of typical Mexican customs, daring feats of horsemanship by the Mexican cavalry, bull fighting, and so on. These items were in themselves sufficient to crowd the theatre for the continuous performance but Mr. Rayne had in addition a very strong local attraction in the shape of the Gaumont film showing the Church parade of the military and Territorials in Newcastle on Sunday, in celebration of St. George's Day, and the laying of the memorial wreaths on the Northumberland War Memorial to the Yeomen who fell in the South African Campaign. The soldiers who figured in the film were, on Thursday afternoon, present at the performance on Mr. Rayne's invitation, the company numbering about 500 men and officers. As the men entered the theatre a special film was taken for the management b Mr. Percy Longford, and this picture was on the screen in the remarkably smart time of threequarters of an hour from its being taken.

At the conclusion of the entertainment all the troops and the veterans were entertained to tea in the cosy Wedgewood Café, which forms part of the theatre building. Councillor Jackson expressed the thanks of the entire company to the management and to Mr. Rayne for the excellent entertainment that had been provided, and the officer commanding the troops, Captain Walford, Royal Field Artillery, joined in the expression of thanks. Such entertainments as that which had been provided, he remarked, not only gave great pleasure to the men, but they were a useful and valuable aid to recruiting. Mr. Barry Rayne briefly acknowledged the compliments paid him and the management of the theatre.

As was generally anticipated, "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" had a remarkable reception in Newcastle. It was shown by Messrs. Baker Brothers at the Gaiety Theatre, Nelson, for the week, and it was voted one of the best sensations that had been provided. Simultaneously with it being produced at the Gaiety, the film was also shown by Messrs. Black at the Palace Theatre, Sunderland Road, Gateshead.

Mr. George Black had a record week at the Grand Theatre, Byker, with the film "Give Us This Day" as the special attraction. Twice a night throughout the week large queues were to be seen at all entrances to the theatre, which was crowded in all parts. The picture in itself was one calculated to draw the people, but its attractiveness was enhanced by the services of Mr. James Clement Padden, M.A., B.Sc., a talented lecturer, who delivered an interesting discourse on the incidents portrayed in the film as they were projected on the screen. Mr. Padden was able to put much natural feeling into his lecture because of the wide experience he has had personally in the administration in the Midland Counties of the Poor Law system, with which the film "Give Us This Day——" deals. He had also made a previous big success as a lecturer in the cinematograph theatre with "The Victims of the Mormons." In addition to the big picture Mr. Black had engaged a strong variety company, and the entertainment was altogether one well worthy of the extensive patronage bestowed upon it.

Notwithstanding Mr. Black's success, however, it did not miltate against the attendances at the Picturedrome in Gibson Street, which is quite near to the Grand, where in the second half of the week Mr. George Besford showed that eminently successful film, "In the Hands of the London Crooks." Mr. Beswood always meets the wishes of his patrons with the best of thrillers, and in showing "In the Hands of LondonCrooks" he was only maintaining his reputation for putting the best before his audiences. There was no seating accommodation to spare when this production was on, and many were the congratulations showered upon the exhibitor for having secured it. Another very strong attraction at the Picturedrome was a very fine film of the opening of the bathing season at Whitley Bay, shown as a topical. This film was taken by Messrs. Henderson, Limited, of the North of England Film Bureau, Newcastle, to the order of the Imperial Film Service—namely, Messrs. Robert Scott and Fred W. Morrison. Those who have seen this film are enthusiastic in its praise and, being one of the best topical films that could be procured locally, it is sure to be in very great demand for the next few weeks.

"The Golden Beetle" and "The Grip of Circumstances" were the top-liners of Mr. J. Coverdale Bell at the Brighton Electric Theatre and also of Mr. Lindon Travers at the Olympia, and the intensity of the many exciting situations in both these plays made the audiences almost hold their breaths.

BALBOA FEATURE FILM.

After an absence of nearly two years, Mr. S. M. Bishop has returned from the States, and will be associated in a new company with Mr. Henry Pessers, of the King's Hall, Dover, the object of which is to handle as the leading feature the productions of the "Balboa" studios.

Samples of nearly twenty subjects, the product of the new studios at Long Beach, Cal., have been specially brought over by Mr. Bishop, these varying from 1,000 to 5,000 ft. in length. Messrs. Horkheimer Brothers, previous to entering the film business, were well-known theatrical producers, and we hear that the products of their huge studios are equal to the best class of films that have arrived from the States.

'HISTORY OF A PIERROT."

CELIO COMPANY'S DELIGHTFUL PRODUCTION.

The private performance of Beissier's "Histoire d'un Pierrot," at the London Pavilion last Thursday afternoon, provided one of the most delightful entertainments that has yet been offered to the picture-going public, and the close attention with which it was followed by a crowded audience, and the hearty and spontaneous applause which greeted the conclusion of each reel, testified to the genuine nature of its appeal.

In many respects we consider "The History of a Pierrot" may serve as a model of all that a cinematograph play should be. The story has interest, romance, and the most direct simplicity of treatment, rendering the action obvious and explicit without the necessity of a single explanatory sub-title, while the construction and arrangement of the scenes are so masterly that even the old justification of the sub-title, as a division between different episodes, is rendered nugatory, and its absence is only apparent from the relief experienced by the spectator. The sub-title is regarded by too many producers as an easy method of overcoming difficulties, by most as a necessary evil.

The two most important factors to the success of this delightful fantasy are the music and the service rendered by an unusually gifted company of players. Sig. Mario Costa's music is tuneful and melodious and so admirably descriptive that every action and incident is translated by the orchestra as it is illustrated by the actors, the result being a perfectly harmonious rendering more than compensating for the absence of dialogue. The importance of music as an accompaniment to the film is universally admitted, and this production clearly demonstrates the immense advantage gained by rehearsing a production with the music which is specially composed for its illustration.

It is a very simple story these players are given to interpret—the old story of Pierrot and Pierrette, Harlequin, and Columbine, or any of that closely related family of ardent lovers. Pierrette figures as a pretty little milliner, Louisette, very much in love with Pierrot, the boy who sings such charming love songs and thinks of little but doves and roses and moonlight and dancing. Pantaloon is the villain of the piece, Julot, not a very outrageous villain, for his villainy consists in wishing to marry pretty Louisette himself, and his unscrupulous methods don't go beyond tempting Pierrot to waste his money at the fair and flirt with pretty little laundrymaids and drink more wine than his poor little empty head will carry. We can hardly blame Julot for stealing a kiss from Louisette when Pierrot has run away with Fifine, though we quite approve of the action of our old friend, Scaramouch, who, in the guise of Pochinet, an old porter, comes to the rescue of the child in whom he takes such a fatherly interest and turns the villain out of doors. Pierrot wastes his substance, and comes forlornly back, but Louisette is very angry, and Pochinet cannot persuade her to forgive the prodigal. Fortunately, there is now another little Pierrot, the living image of his father, and his infantile efforts bring about the reconciliation which old Pochinet has striven so hard to achieve.

It is a charming story and charmingly presented. Whatever Pierrot's nationality now may be, he is of Italian ancestry, and his fellow-countrymen interpret his adventures with a daintiness and sympathy delightful to see. The Italian actor is an artiste to the tips of his fingers, and does not disdain the use of conventional gestures which a certain school of film actors has a tendency to regard as extravagant and unnatural. It is well to be natural on the film, but to be effective is essential. We have witnessed scenes between young couples when it has been necessary for a sub-title to explain whether the young man is making a declaration of love or receiving instructions regarding the fish he is to order on his way to the office. But there is no mistaking Pierrot when he goes on his knees and offers his heart to Louisette or Fifine, or any pretty girl he happens to meet; and Pochinet's lecture to the remorseful Pierrot on the error of his ways is an object-lesson in what can be conveyed by illuminative gesture and facial expression. Mdlle. Francesca Bertini plays Pierrot with exquisite grace and charm, and with a sense of delicate comedy and not a little pathos.

The charm of the piece, its music, and its acting is much enhanced by the beauty of the production. The picturesque costumes of the early nineteenth century appear in surroundings chosen with great artistic judgment, and made the most of by perfect photography. The country fair, the old-world square in which the laundrymaids improvise a dance, and the exterior of a church, are the most striking of many beautiful pictures. Mr. F. Bulkley Byng conducted an orchestra which brought out the full charm of the music and contributed greatly to the success of a thoroughly delightful entertainment. (Celio film. G. Serra.)

I spent a very pleasant evening last week in paying a long-deferred visit to the Star Picture House, Gravelly Hill, and found Mr. E. Russel Yeulett, late of the Palace, Leith, holding the managerial reins. An extensive and imposing exterior arrests one's attention, and the spacious archway of the entrance hall, surmounted on either side by artistic cupolas, gives a decided finish to its appearance. On passing through the entrance hall one is attracted by the neatness and simplicity of the appointments. On the right-hand side, one is conducted by a short flight of stairs into the lounge promenade which surmounts the body of the hall, and is artistically and comfortably furnished with mole-coloured upholstered tip-ups. A notable and original feature about this lounge is a delightful little café on the right-hand side, wherein some twelve dainty tables and comfortably upholstered lounge chairs allow patrons to combine the dual delights of coffee-imbibing and watching the pictures.

The total accommodation of the hall is 1,000, and the 3d., 4d., and 6d. seats, which are below the lounge balcony, are all composed of upholstered tip-ups conforming to the colour scheme with the mole upholstering and dark oak woodwork. The general scheme of colour offers a decided relief to the eye, and embraces red, white, and mole, the walls themselves being in dark red. There is an excellent rake of 1 in 10, and a splendid view of the screen is obtained from every point in the hall. There are six exits in all, which conduct one immediately to the street level, and the hall can be emptied of its full component of 1,000 patrons in a very few seconds.

The lighting system is arranged with considerable regard for soothing effect, and each wall is illuminated by four recessed grilles, which lend a pleasing effect in subdued ruby light. A similar method of illumination is observed in regard to the roof, wherein are also installed four ventilators worked by an electrically driven fan.

The hall is some 120 ft. long by 60 ft. broad, and there is a throw of between 113 and 117 ft. The screen itself is recessed into a darkened proscenium, which is attractively ornamented with plants and flowers, etc., etc. Bearing in mind the fact that in the future vaudeville turns may be introduced, every accommodation for artistes in the shape of dressing rooms, etc., is already provided. The operating box is very lofty and spacious, and is some 25 ft. long by 8 ft. wide, and well ventilated. A Powers No. 6 and a Kineto machine have been installed, and a clear and steady projection is obtained. There is a capable orchestra, comprising piano, violin, and 'cello, and the music promises to be a very attractive feature in this house.

Mr. Yeulett informed me that pro. tem. they are running continuous performances from 6.30 onwards, with Wednesday and Saturday matinées. During the latter part of last week a first-rate programme was presented, including "Branscombe's Fall," "The Prisoner of the Harem," and "The Misadventures of a Mighty Monarch." "David Garrick" is booked up for an early date, and the first part of this week "The Message to Headquarters" is the star picture.

Mr. D. G. Peterson is the chairman of the board of directors, Mr. E. Crowder was the builder and Mr. S. Smith the architect, whilst Messrs. Mallin and Co. were responsible for the decorative scheme.

A successful Trade show of Moss's Empires new exclusive, "The Midnight Wedding," was given on Friday last at the Scala Theatre, Smallbrook Street, when there was a good attenddance of exhibitors. Mr. Sydney Wright (Messrs. Moss's Birmingham representative) informed me that his bookings on this popular exclusive are very strong, and all vacant dates are filled until the end of June. Mr. Wright, to whom all communications in regard to Birmingham rights of "The Midnight Wedding" should be addressed at 11, Palmerston Road, Sparkbrook, is a Birmingham exhibitor of long standing, and well known as the controller and booker for a large circuit here.

The Springfield Picture Playhouse was opened on April 25th by Councillor Jephcott, who remarked that he, as a magistrate, was pleased with the manner in which the requirements of the licensing authorities had been carried out, and, furthermore, he considered that this new picture house was both a boon and an improvement to the neighbourhood.

The exterior of the house is attractively designed, and well illuminated by four powerful arc lamps, whilst an illuminated name panel occupies a prominent position at the front. The entrance hall, or foyer, is circular, with a pay-box in the centre, wherein are installed a couple of Perfecta machines. The walls are in black and white marble, with floor of similar material. Two spacious passages lead to the body of the hall, the left to the 3d. and 6d. seats, and the right to the raised balcony, price 9d. The hall itself is both lofty and well ventilated with a powerful electrically driven fan, and accommodates 800 in all. An aluminium screen gives an excellent picture, and a rake of 1 in 10 on the floor, in conjunction with the fact that the screen is well raised, provides an uninterrupted view of the screen from all parts of the house. The operating box is one of the largest in the town, measuring some 18 ft. long by 9 ft. wide, and containing a large circular window 5 ft. high. Two Kalee projectors are in use, and Mr. Matthews, who is in charge of this department, is securing excellent results with these machines. There are four exits, and a 10 ft. gangway surrounds the hall. The colour scheme is very effective, giving pink and crimson on the wall, with attractive white fibrous work, and smart "tip-ups" in blue. An excellent orchestra achieved an early popularity on the first night. There is a throw of 82 ft. upon a large screen 18 ft. by 15 ft. by 6 ft. The board consists of Messrs. George A. Parker, H. Monk, and Lewis W. Smith. The opening programme was supplied by Mr. Sheridan, of the International Film Company. Mr. Dewey is the manager.

MUSIC LICENSING AT OLDHAM.

A lengthy case of importance was heard at the Oldham Police Court on Monday last against Millar J. McVittie, who was summoned on seven charges of having on April 11th and six following days, permitted public music at his hall without having a music licence. A further charge was brought against him of having used inflammable films without a licence, while the operator was charged with having obstructed the entry of the police.

Mr. Garside (deputy town clerk) prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. Owen appeared for the defendant.

Mr. Garside said that under Section 227 of the Oldham Borough Improvement Act, 1865, no house could be used for public music, dancing, or entertainment of a like character without a licence. Mr. Garside read the section of the Act framed in the reign of George III., which was called the Disorderly Houses Act. There had been certain decisions on these Acts, but the point which their worships ought to consider was whether or not music was an integral part of the performance which had been carried on at that picture hall.

P.C. Mannion said he visited the Popin Picture Hall on the 11th ult. in the afternoon and saw pictures shown on the screen and heard a pianoforte being played. The music began as soon as a picture was thrown on the screen and concluded a few seconds before the picture finished. He went again in the evening and was ordered out after he had seen about four pictures. The music formed part of the entertainment. Witness said that the manager had issued orders that no plain clothes constables should be admitted to the hall.

Mr. Owen contended that the music was subsidiary to the pictures and was not essential to the show, and that, according to decisions of the appeal courts, no licence was therefore necessary for music. In many other towns, including London, licences were not required for music in cinematograph shows. He went on to refer to the judgments in the Appeal Court cases, and also to the other magistrates' decisions, and he dealt with the definition of the word subsidiary as laid down in Nuttall's Dictionary.

The Clerk pointed out that the defendant had applied to the magistrates for a music licence, which showed that he thought one was necessary.

W. J. Parkes, operator, said he had instructions with regard to the music, and one of them was that music was not to be played which had any connection with any picture on the screen. It was not to accompany the picture.

Defendant was then called. He said he gave written instructions to the pianist and he saw him personally. The music played was not an integral part of the performance. Witness added that he told the pianist that if he played any music which was within a thousand miles of any bearing on the picture he would be discharged immediately. He described the music as a "most atrocious discord."

The Chairman said the magistrates had carefully considered the case, and having regard to the evidence that had been given, they did not feel justified in convicting. The cases respecting music on Easter Monday were also dismissed, and then Mr. Garside said in view of that decision he would withdraw the other cases in regard to the charges of public music without licence.

The next case was a charge of having used inflammable films without a licence, but, on the application of the solicitor for the defendant, this case was adjourned sine die, as there is an action pending in the Chancery Court.

Another charge was brought against W. J. Parkes of having obstructed the entry of a police inspector who wished to see the operating room.

Defendant said the Inspector came after the show, when he (defendant) was in a hurry to catch the train.

A fine of £5 and costs was imposed, and Mr. McVittie undertook to pay it, although Parkes was not now in his employ.

A Girl Cinematographer at the Balkan War.

INTERVIEW WITH MISS JESSICA BORTHWICK.

Miss Jessica Borthwick, the English girl of twenty-two who returned in January last from the Balkans, where she had spent the whole of the previous year studying the war and taking cinematograph pictures thereof, is a very remarkable personality. Youthful in appearance and of rather slender build, she nevertheless gives one an immediate impression of great strength, both physical and mental—an impression which is confirmed when one listens to the story of her adventures—whilst her voice, beautiful, deep and like a resonant organ note, is vibrant with the enthusiasm and determination of one whose indomitable spirit will endure every rebuff and hardship in the achievement of a worthy end. Idealist, thinker, and practical woman of action, Miss Borthwick has a unique individuality, and the history of her life, short as it has been up to the present, is already a record such as few men of any age could match.

"I had two objects in going to the war," Miss Borthwick told us during the exceedingly interesting interview she was kind enough to give us last week in her South Kensington studio, which she had fitted up with projector and screen as a temporary picture theatre. "Firstly, curiosity pure and simple, and secondly the great interest the Balkans have for me through my father's (the late General Borthwick) connection therewith. In the eighties my father was employed by Bulgaria to reorganise and command the army in Eastern Rumelia, and all the country I went over last year he had been over before. His name, I found, was known everywhere, and the fact that I was "General Borthwick's daughter" helped me many times to overcome what might otherwise have proved insurmountable difficulties. Among the other spots holding memories of my father which I visited was the place where a famous brigand, Spanos, dwelt, living by loot and by taking people for ransom. (His practice was to send little bits of them to their relatives until such time as the latter forwarded a sufficient sum to justify his releasing them.) Spanos was a cripple, and one day my father, while he was searching for this notorious rascal, came upon the pony which the brigand used to ride upon, together with the ram which he employed as a decoy in stealing herds from the villagers. Confiscating both animals, my father shortly afterwards received a letter from Spanos, stating that he had watched him for years, and describing in detail different occasions on which he could have shot him. 'You have taken my food and my legs,' he concluded. 'If you give them back you may go free; otherwise I will surely kill you.' My father replied that he would

"I took out with me to the Balkans one small plate camera and one cinematograph camera, which was made for me by Mr. Arthur Newman, who taught me in three days how to use it. This cinematograph camera of Mr. Newman's lasted me the whole twelve months, in spite of the fact that it underwent terribly hard usage and received no repairs whatever except for my amateurish efforts to mend it with bits of wire. I was occasionally able to supplement my photographic outfit with cameras taken from the dead bodies of officers on the battlefield, but most of these I lost again. Rather a curious incident happened, by the way, in connection with the little plate camera I took out with me. Shortly after I arrived it was either mislaid or stolen, together with 200 plates. Four months later, while sitting in bivouac with some soldiers in quite another part of the country, I found it in the possession of a private, who stated that he had picked it up, and was keeping it in the hope of being able to sell it to a war correspondent. Needless to say, I promptly reclaimed it.

"The difficulties of taking cinematograph pictures on the battlefield, especially when quite alone and unaided by any assistant, are, as you can imagine, tremendous. The use of a tripod is a particular embarrassment. Things happen so quickly in time of war that, unless one can be ready with one's camera at a few seconds' notice, the episode one wishes to record will probably be over. During the Servian war in Macedonia my tripod was smashed by a shell, and although the camera was intact, the film which I was taking at the time got hopelessly jumbled up, and had to be cut away from the mechanism with which it had become entwined.

"Another great difficulty was the want of a dark room. One day, while taking films in the Rhodope Mountains, I came to a strange village of wooden huts inhabited by a nomadic race called Vlaques. Something went wrong with my camera, and I tried to make the people understand that I wanted some place which would serve as a dark room. It was impossible to get them to grasp what I meant, however, until eventually I found a man making rugs out of sheep's wool. After much persuasion, I induced him to cover me up with his rugs, and in this unusual and very stuffy "dark room" I managed to open my camera in safety. Having no film box with me at the moment, I wrapped the negative up in pieces of paper and stowed it away in my pocket, carrying it thus for fifteen days until I returned to Sofia. Occupied with other matters, I forgot the film, and handed my coat to a servant who, being of an inquisitive nature, unwrapped the negative, and finding it uninteresting, put it back in the pocket without the paper, afterwards hanging up the coat to air in the sun. Subsequently I developed the film—and found it one of the best I had!

"The want of a technical dictionary, combined with the natives' ignorance of photography, brought about several rather amusing situations. On one occasion, in Adrianople, I lost a screw from my tripod. There were shops of most other kinds, but no ironmonger's, and at last, in despair, I tried to explain to an officer what I wanted in dumb show, not knowing the word for "screw." Having followed my actions for some moments with apparent intelligence, he suddenly hailed a cab and bundled me hastily in. We drove and drove right across the city, until eventually we entered some massive gates and drew up—inside the prison! However, I turned the misconception to advantage by securing some excellent snapshots and having some very interesting talks with the prisoners. One convict—a German of considerable education—invited me to go and see him hanged the next morning, and gave me a souvenir. I saw two executions in that prison.

"During the cholera rage in Adrianople everything connected with that terrible disease was painted black. The carts in which the dead bodies were carried away were black, for example, as were the coffins in which cholera victims were buried. While the scourge was at its height I went down into the gipsy quarter to take a small film. The people in this part of the city had never seen a camera before, and when they saw me pointing my little black box at various objects they thought that I was operating some wonderful new instrument for combating the disease which was destroying them. Quickly surrounding me, they came and knelt upon the ground, kissing my feet and clothing, and begging with dreadful pathos that I should cure them. It was a task as sad as it was difficult to explain that their hopes were mistaken, and that I was impotent to help them.

"I brought back with me about 2,500 ft. of film and a large number of photographs. I should have had a great deal more had the Customs authorities not been so suspicious of me when I left the country. They refused to believe that nothing was visible on the undeveloped negatives I carried in my film boxes, and insisted on opening many of the latter, with the result, of course, that the pictures were ruined. In this way I lost many hundreds of feet of film and more than 250 plates. It was particularly annoying, in that I had sacrificed innumerable comforts and even necessities throughout the whole of the war in order that I might always have my cameras with me.

"What are my present and future plans? Well, in a few days' time I hope to start a month's engagement at the Polytechnic to lecture twice daily on the war. My lecture will be illustrated by my films and by lantern slides from my plates. I am also writing two books on the Balkan War."

"With regard to the future, I shall leave England in June next for the Arctic regions, where I want to start a colony for the cure of consumption and other diseases. This is the dream of my life. The great open spaces of the North are God's sanatorium, and I believe that, when once their possibilities are known, their value will be recognised. I have been in the Arctic regions before. Yes; I shall take two or three cameras with me, including Mr. Newman's wonderful new hand cinematograph camera. When shall I return? That I cannot say. Perhaps at the end of a year—perhaps never."

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

The programmes at the Kelvin, Belfast, bear tribute to the care taken by Mr. Pulling in selecting nothing but first-class films. A recent special was "The Mirror of Death," which drew hundreds of visitors while it was screened. "A Royal Romance" was equally well received. Other films included: "Hidden Fires," "The Actress," and "Tweedledum and the "Fox Hunt."

I paid a visit the other evening to Dublin's latest picture theatre—the Cosy Cinema, Parnell Street. I found it quite a comfortable little show, seating somewhere about 250 people. Moreover, it is exceptionally well ventilated for a theatre of its size, and although the streets of Dublin were sizzling in heat when I called, I found everything quite cool inside. Two Kamm machines are used in the operating box, which is in charge of the Brothers Moiselle. The films were up to date, and supplied by the General Film Supply, of Talbot Street, Dublin. They included such top-liners as "Satan's Castle," "The Wreck," and, on Friday and Saturday last, "Blind Fate." Mr. Manley acts as manager, and the company responsible for the show is a Dublin one, including several well-known people. Although the new theatre is a trifle near the Rotunda, yet on account of its being a continuous show I think it should do very well indeed.

Writing of the Rotunda reminds me that Mr. Jameson made good business with "Thor, Lord of the Jungle" and 'The Master Crook." Owing to numerous requests "The Messiah" was also presented for two days, but only at the first house and the matinée. A really good comic was "Polidor and the Lions."

"The Flame in the Ashes" was one of the best of the programme of films shown at the Crumlin Picture Theatre, Belfast. More screen stories were "Hard Cash," "The Gusher," an extremely funny Keystone effort, and "Broncho Billy's Oath." Good houses were the rule throughout the week.

I had the good fortune a few days ago to have a chat with Mr. Benny Cann, the camera man recently captured by Mr. Norman Whitten for the General Film Supply, of Talbot Street, Dublin. Mr. Cann is exceedingly interesting to talk with, and has been through no less than three wars, including the late Balkan War. Thus it cannot be gainsaid that he has plenty of experience, and as Mr. Cann himself says, when he sets out to get a picture—he gets it at all costs. I was right in my assumption that the film of the "Curragh" Races" was taken by Mr. Cann, and I can only repeat what I said regarding it being one of the best topicals I have ever seen of a race meeting. I extend to Mr. Cann a hearty welcome during his stay in Dublin, which I hope may be of long duration.

Not having been at the Dorset for some little time I called there the other evening. I found it transformed in many ways, and greatly improved. Luxurious tip-up seats in red velvet occupy the lower part of the hall, while the balcony is seated with tip-ups in leather—a great improvement on the old forms. To stand in front of the orchestra, and look back at the vast housewith all its glimmering crimson lights is something to marvel at—more especially when one remembers that this building was once a church. Principal films have been "The Haunted Bride," "The Master Crook," and "Eileen of Erin." The comedy side was also well represented, such films as "Speed Kings," "The Hoodoo Umbrella" and "A Widow's Wiles" being on the programme.

At the Princess Cinema, in Rathmines, Mr. I. I. Bradlaw has been featuring "Napoleon," and it is needless on my part to say that crowded houses were the result. "Punchestown Races" were also featured each evening, in addition to the usual programme of up-to-date subjects.

The Abercorn Hall, Harcourt Road, a theatre which I have not mentioned for a considerable period, has been featuring "The Fruits of Vengeance" and "Trapped in a Forest Fire," all last week. "The Death Weight" was another exceptionally good film, and as the rest of the programme was well up to the mark and screened in first-class style, business was brisk.

Mr. Fred Stewart recently featured at the Panoptican, High Street, Belfast, the three-part film, "Primitive Man."—At the Alhambra, Mr. Will White showed the sixth series of the Sherlock Holmes films, "TheMystery of the Stolen Papers." Numerous other films, backed up by variety turns, were on the bill of fare provided.—The Clonard Picture House, in the Falls Road, had also a "top-hole" programme. "The Hour and the Man" was singled out for special praise. The management also secured the exclusive rights of the film featuring Regina Badet, "The White Lie." A good Western drama was "Big Bob Waits."

ALLEGED THEFT OF FILM TITLES.

At the West Ham Police Court on Thursday, before Mr. R. A. Gillespie, Robert Alexander Emerson, of 2, Warwick Road, Stratford, and Henry Harding, of 45, Kitchener Road, Forest Gate, cinematograph operators, were charged on remand with stealing between September 15, 1913, and April 28, 1914, a number of titles of cinematograph films from the Queen's Cinema, Romford Road, Forest Gate, the property of the Globe Film Company, Limited, of Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

Mr. W. Bygott appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. W. Sanderson defended Emerson.

In his opening statement, Mr. Bygott said that the Globe Film Company had been supplying the Queen's Cinema with films since it had been opened in July last. Some film titles had come into the hands of Mr. Squier, managing director of the Globe Film Company, who found that the titles belonged to films which had recently been supplied to the Queen's cinema, and as a result of inquiries, the two prisoners had been arrested.

James Charles Squier, managing director of the Globe Film Company, said that since the opening in July last his firm had supplied the programme of the Queen's Cinema, Forest Gate. Each title of the films would measure about 20 ft., and if a title was cut off, or even a portion, it was detrimental to the film, especially as the censor's certificate followed the name of the film. He had received complaints and in consequence inquiries were made and a list of cinematograph titles was produced to him. He examined the list and found the titles of many recent films, and he gave instructions for twelve of the titles to be obtained. In consequence of an interview with Captain Gane, witness gave information to the police, and afterwards charged the prisoners.

In reply to Mr. Bygott, the witness said that the average life of a film was three months, and the twelve titles produced were in good condition.

The evidence of the arrest given by Det.-Sergt. Hubbard at the last hearing was read over.

In reply to Mr. Sanderson, the Sergeant added that there was no attempt at concealment on the part of Emerson.

Alfred Charles Leslie Keith, manager of the Globe Film Company, said that he had examined the twelve titles in question and he knew that the films were supplied to the Queen's Cinema, Forest Gate.

A witnesss having deposed as to the manner in which the list and the titles were obtained and handed to Mr. Squier, and that subsequently he received a letter asking for payment.

Alfred Gane, manager of the Queen's Cinema, Forest Gate, said that Emerson and Harding were employed there—Emerson as operator, and Harding as assistant. He had found them both good workmen. Emerson had his holiday on a Sunday and the youth on one day in the week. Dealing with the titles in question, the witness said that the films came from the Globe Film Company. About April 20th witness had a conversation with Mr. Squier, and later showed the documents to Emerson. The latter said "I take the sole responsibility," and witness pointed out that the titles of the films were exhibited on a Sunday when he was not there and it appeared that Harding had something to do with it. He replied "The boy has acted entirely under my instructions."

In answer to Mr. Sanderson, the witness said Emerson had borne an excellent character. He did not try to excuse himself when witness spoke to him and he at once took all responsibility.

Emerson went into the witness box and said that he got the titles produced from the end of the films at the Queen's Cinema. The films were received and spooled up, in the order of the programme, which were given by the manager. Whilst spooling up films, he used to receive some which had the end of the title damaged. The machines he was in charge of would not take old stuff at all, so he cut off the damaged portion and put it on one side. Sometimes in a hurry in cutting off the damaged portion he cut off a part of the good. He had no idea of stealing and did not think he was doing wrong. A number of operators took home parts of damaged films and used them as fire-lighters. Continuing, Emerson said that the films in question were cut off by him, because in the Globe Films there were 18 or 20 ft. of title. As it was necessary to have 3 or 4 ft. of title he cut the pieces off.

Mr. Bygott: Why did you take them home?

Emerson: I took them off for a purpose. He added that he thought he was entitled to do what he did.

Harding pleaded that he acted under the direction of Emerson and he was discharged.

With regard to Emerson, Mr. Gillespie said the explanation given was unsatisfactory, but he had borne a good character and would be given the option of a fine. He must pay £5 and costs.

JOTTINGS FROM ULSTER.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The difficulties which had arisen in connection with the Ulster Picture Theatre Company's site for a cinema in Corn Market, Belfast, have been surmounted, or practically so, and workmen are now busily engaged in gutting the premises and generally making way for the builders. Two cafés—one on the balcony—will be a feature of the new house, which will, in all probability, be in readiness early in the autumn.

It is rumoured very freely in Belfast that a furniture store on the dock side of High Street is shortly to be converted into a picture house for the purpose of catering for that large body of patrons who showered their money so extensively upon the now defunct St. George's Hall. There is some truth in the rumour, too, and the premises would require but little alteration. Whether the site is rather far down High Street is, however, a matter of much speculation amongst those in the know. It is of interest to recall that the Panopticon, High Street, Belfast, within a few doors of the suggested cinema, was formerly a furniture warehouse.

Record business was reported by Mr. W. J. Dunseith, at the Palace, Bangor, during the run of that famous Irish racing drama, "The Filly." Dundalk racecourse—shown in the picture—is well-known by Northerners, so additional interest was thereby lent to the piece.

The Ulster Volunteers received a benefit performance from Mr. W. A. Salmond, of the Bangor Picture House, a one-reel film of the North Down contingents of the force forming the chief attraction at the hall. It is said that well over £50 was realised on the day—the prices being 2s., 1s. and 6d.

The Picture House, Lisburn, has acquired the adjoining premises, and builders are busily engaged in extending the premises. The work is being done with such precision that closing for a couple of days—in order to remove the centre wall—is all that will be necessary.

The Lisburn Palace is now being run on "continuous" lines with a change of programme three times a week. Messrs. Gaumont's Dublin branch are supplying the pictures.

Bankruptcy.

The adjourned public examination of William Arthur Beer, picture hall manager, 19, Carlton Terrace, Spennymoor, Durham, was held at the Court House, Old Elvet, Durham, when the liabilities were put as £736, to meet which there were no assets. The failure was attribuaed to bad trade and transactions with money-lenders. Debter stated that his household expenses amounted to about £300, and he had lost £200 in business, £50 in bad debts, £100 in betting, and £88 in moneylenders' charges. The case was adjourned for an amended deficiency account.

Mr. Registrar Cave held a sitting at the Court House, Pilgrim Street, Birkenhead, on April 29th, for the public examination of James Sheldon Haynes, company promoter and manager of a public company, 56A and 56B, Drury Buildings; 21, Water Street, Liverpool, on accounts showing a deficiency of £1,554. Replying to Mr. Britten, assistant Official Receiver, the debter said he had not been engaged in any other business except his company work during the six years preceding the receiving order, with the exception of running a picture house for a few months at Buckley, in Flintshire. He sold that house to a company for £600 in cash. He kept no books of accounts while there. The £600 he had paid away but could not produce any receipts. This was not his first failure, as he had previously failed in the Birkenhead Court in June, 1910. On that occasion he returned his liabilties at £1,344, but claims were made amounting to £2,515, and he showed no assets. He applied for his discharge in the following November and it was granted subject to his consenting to judgment for £100, which was paid from money he earned from commissions. A dividend of 1s. 0¾d. in the £ was paid. After obtaining his discharge he was engaged for some time in agency work and the sale of Canadian lands. He also went into company promoting. The debtor was questioned about picture houses which he had floated at Mold and Holywell, and he partly attributed his present failure to delay in the flotation of the North Wales Picture Houses, Limited, as the company was called. An adjournment was ordered for the debtor to file certain accounts.

THE CASTLE CINEMA CARDIFF.

Situated in Castle Street, right opposite the fine old Norman castle, is to be found Cardiff's latest cinema—appropriately named the Castle. The elevation to Castle Street is imposing, the architecture being carried out in classic style. Extending from the entrance hall over the footway is a large glass verandah of pleasing design, which at night is brilliantly illuminated. From the entrance hall, which is very commodious and contains always a neat display of pictorial advertising matter, one obtains admission to the luxuriant vestibule on either side of the pay-box. Entering the ground floor, one finds the classic style of architecture characterising the front carried into execution here, the colour scheme being in cream and gold. Seating accommodation is provided for 650, while upstairs are to be found a further 250 tip-ups. The lighting is on the semi-indirect principle, and a dimmer switch graduates the change from darkness to light. Heating is effected by means of hot water radiators, installed by Messrs. Hamptons, and efficient means for ventilation are provided by three of Rowell's exhaust fans which have been placed in the roof.

MR. W. REYNOLDS-BENJAMIN.

A talented orchestra of five performers renders suitable selections to the pictures, which are excellently projected by two Pathé projectors. The manager, Mr. W. Reynolds-Benjamin, is well-known to Cardiffians, and is very popular here, this being the third picture theatre he has opened in the Welsh Metropolis in addition to which he was manager at the Theatre Royal. Mr. Benjamin has most interesting recollections of the early days of cinematography. He has now opened close upon thirty halls, surely a record for one man

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

Considering that it was the first week after the holidays and such wonderfully summerlike weather, the business done at the various halls was exceptionally good last week.

Strong efforts are to be made, Mr. Thomas H. Johnson, the managing director of the Roker Company, tells me to have the new hall in Roker Avenue open about the end of June. Steel is, however, slow in delivery, and all depends upon that. At the Villiers Theatre, of which he is also director, the "Redemption of Steve Hading" and "Love the Victor" were the premier items in programmes that, despite the summery weather, kept up the attendances to holiday ratio.

It was rather a surprise to me to find so goodly an assemblage in the Theatre de Luxe the other afternoon, for the weather was truly glorious outside, and I had just been wondering whether the managers of the "continuous" shows in the town would not be putting their heads together and saying "Let's close a day like this, and get down to Roker." "The Eleventh Commandment" was Mr. Fred J. Hudspeth's star film, while "The Champion" was especially appreciated, and the topicals went exceedingly well. Later in the week, "Officer John Donovan" was in the ascendant. Mr. Harry Pullan is, I should add, pulling the orchestra together into truly fine form. By the bye, Mr. Hudspeth is nursing a few surprise packets for his patron friends.

"The Golden Beetle" was Messrs. Hamilton's star line at the Palace Theatre, where the variety element is always, like the films, of tip-top quality.

Though now having to meet with much near opposition, the Pavilion, in Sans Street, still manages to more than hold its own, thanks to the way Mr. Frederick W. Hunter gets his programmes together. He runs two full lists every week, with an extra or two thrown in on Saturday night. "Grandad" went splendidly there last week, whilst the title alone of "The Burning Rivet" made a naturally strong appeal amongst the shipyard men.

For the sole reason that the programme is always entertainment in the real sense of the word, Mr. F. Sayer is finding the old Avenue Theatre quite a happy place to rule in. Last week this popular manager had "The Cry of the Blood" as his leading film until Thursday, when "In the Wilds of Africa" took up that position. He tells me that he has just booked "The World, the Flesh and the Devil."

At the Gaiety, Mr. H. Hinton had "A Fiend and His Friends," and made money with it.

When I did manage to find a seat in the High Street West Picture House I was well rewarded, for "Spartacus" was the pièce de résistance and most worthily so. Mr. McColl had flooded the better part of the town with striking posters, and most of the better class residents received a finely illustrated booklet with their morning post, and the money was well spent, it came back tenfold. Beautiful music has always been a feature of the entertainment here, and Herr Franz Csarojacz excelled all his previous local efforts in arranging and compiling special music to harmonise with the great series of moving pictures that depicted the story of Spartacus. That this music received adequate interpretation from Mr. H. Jennings' orchestra goes without saying. Last year the Sunderland team was in the English Cup Final, and visitors to the Picture House found an effective film of this year's cup final on the programme—a picture that went, as they say locally, "extra."

Mr. Cecil Webb has become the lecturer at the Central, where "The Last Encampment," "The Scapegrace" and "The Toils of Deception" were shown last week. Mr. J. E. Richardson also ran these films at his Star Hall "across the water."

Great business was done at the South Shields Picture House with "The Duke's Talisman" and "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," the latter being shown from the Thursday afternoon.

"Black's on the Bridge" has always meant something good, and it certainly did last week, for "Fighters of the Plains" and "Officer John Donovan" were compelling top lines.

From the way some people talk you would think that until the cinema came every little boy and girl the whole country over was bathed and a-bed by 7 o'clock at nights. Nowadays if a child looks dull the thing is to blame the "pictures." Educationalists are the most prone to affix the responsibility upon some one else's shoulders, but a lady medical officer now adds her quota. She has, she says, frequently noticed the dull and heavy appearance of the children in the mornings, a result due largely to insufficient sleep. "It is possible," this lady doctor ventures to think, "that picture houses have something to answer for in this regard, not only by keeping children out of bed, but also by inhibiting sleep through excitement. For this reason alone it might" she thinks, "be advisable to prohibit the attendance of children of school age at cinematograph shows after 6.30 p.m."

Finding, these fine nights, people from Sunderland dropping into the Grand at Ryhope, whilst out on their country walks, Mr. T. Richardson is now regularly displaying his posters about the town. He had "As the Sparks Fly Upward" and "In the Hands of London Crooks" at the head of his programmes last week.

BRONCHO FEATURES

NOVELTY in Plot and Staging is the outstanding quality of every Broncho Film. You want something fresh in each programme. These two subjects will supply it in full measure.

A ROMANCE OF SUNSHINE ALLEY.

A romance of humble life. The fighting boot-black is tamed by the factory girl he rescues from a band of "toughs." He proves himself a real hero, and the romance is brought to a happy conclusion with the aid of a sport loving judge. A feature strong in both the dramatic and comedy elements and featuring an extremely realistic glove fight.

Released Monday, June 1st. Approx. length 1,000 feet.

A ROMANCE OF THE SEA

This is a subject which will delight every lover of adventure. There is a search for hidden treasure, conflicts with pirates and all the other elements that go to make a rousing film, and both the settings and incidents are quite out of the ordinary.

Released Monday, June 15th. Approx. length 2,060 feet.

OLYMPIA, 1914.

AN INTERESTING CONVERSATION.

"Hullo, Brown."
"Hullo, Old Boy. How are you?"
"Oh! first rate."
"You look it. What's the smile for—spotted a winner?"
"No! I have just booked my space for Olympia, 1914."
"What, four months ahead?"
"Yes, sure. You know the old saying—'The early bird gets the worm'—otherwise the pick of the stands?"
"Oh! I see; you want to be a top-liner, do you?
"Of course! If I go in for advertising I go in for it; no half measures for me."
"Yes, old Chap, that's alright, but it costs such a fearful lot."
"Yes, but if you've got the goods, surely they're worth advertising, and after all, a show of the actual goods is the most effective follow-up of an advertisement in the Trade papers?"
"Yes, perhaps. But is an Exhibition the best means of advertising?"
"Well, all I know is that last year I had a small stand and was so satisfied with results, that I am doubling the size of it this year."
"If you only begin to think now, you'll probably get left. My tip to you as one friend to another is—

DO IT NOW.

"You know the office—THE CINEMATOGRAPH EXHIBITIONS, Ltd., 22/24, Gt. Portland Street, W.?"

"Yes, thanks. I'll take your advice and go right along."

AND HE DID.—WHAT ABOUT YOU?

RELIANCE FEATURES

merit your careful consideration EVERY WEEK. The most rapidly improving films in the world, and including in each programme dramas of uncommon strength of incident and novelty of plot.

GIOVANNI'S GRATITUDE.

A cleverly constructed story in which the chief parts are played by the superintendent of large building works and a young Italian newsboy whom he befriends. Two discharged workmen plot to revenge themselves on the superintendent, but the boy foils every attempt. The interest is maintained at a high pitch all through the subject and the concluding scene, in which the boy saves his friend's home from destruction, is exceptionally strong.

Released Monday, June 1st. Approx. length 1,966 ft.

Saved from the Harem

A Sensational & Thrilling Drama.

LIEUTENANT FEARLESS says farewell to his sweetheart, Marguerite, and sets out upon a long cruise. Shortly after her lover's departure her beauty attracts the attention of Ben Ali, an Oriental, who is spending a holiday in Europe. Under the pretence of offering her a lucrative theatrical engagement he lures her to Genoa, where she is kidnapped by his hirelings and taken to his harem. Ben Ali has ill-treated his favourite wife, Fatima, and she seeks to avenge herself by assisting Marguerite to escape. The unfortunate girl, however, only succeeds in reaching the sea-shore. There she is overtaken and borne back to captivity. Whilst she is struggling to escape from her captors she is seen by the look-out man on a passing warship. The vessel proves to be none other than the one on which Lieut. Fearless is sailing. Ever ready to champion the cause of the fair sex, the "lads in blue" are soon swarming over the hills and demanding admittance to Ben Ali's castle. After a fierce fight they force an entrance, and then Lieut. Fearless finds he has rescued the girl of his heart. Ben Ali seeks to escape, but Fatima, maddened by his cruelty, ends his villainous career by slaying him.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

At the Theatre Elite a delightful film was submitted showing Mademoiselle E W. Goltzer, the première danseuse of the Grand Imperial Theatre, Moscow, in the Bacchanalian dance from "Samson and Delilah," and it afforded much enjoyment and was decidedly an uncommon subject. "Beauty Unadorned" was original, while two specially good dramas were "The Boob's Dream Girl" and "A Game of Cards." Mr. Rundle in mid-week screened some extra fine films, one in particular was "At the Hour of Dawn," a story of the Dark Ages submitted in colour. It received a hearty ovation. Two very interesting and at the same time edifyingg films were those depicting "Walrus Hunting in the Arctic Ocean" and "The Royal Visit to Paris."

"The Escape of Jim Dolan" was the "star" subject at the Belgrave Electric. Travel lovers had a feast of charming scenery in "Picturesque Greece," and drama and comedy were well represented by "The Actress," "The Bugle Call," "Thou Shalt Not Rubber" and "Baldy Belmont Wants a Wife." "The Last Days of Pompeii" figured in the programme during the second half of the week, and this fine production attracted large audiences.

At the de Luxe, Mr. Knowles enjoyed large patronage, and his entertainment thoroughly merited it. "A Duel in the Dark" left a deep impression, and "A Victim of Deceit" was also well received. Miss Anette Kellerman was another splendid film. In mid-week "The Scent of the Bulb" occupied premier position on the bill. "Annie Laurie" and "The Message of the Sundial" were much appreciated. Mr. Knowles is presenting the great boxing contest between Wells and Blake, commencing on the 11th.

At the Cinedrome, Ebrington Street, the programme was well up to the average standard and business was likewise good. "The Thieves and the Cross" proved to be a delightful drama of love and devotion, and "The Vampire" contained some startling episodes. By special request that pathetic film, "I Hear Her Calling Me" was again shown, and the production was rendered additionally interesting by the rendition of the song of the same title by Mr. Bert Lane. There were several other good films, including "Jerusalem and the Holy Land."

I learn that "Sixty Years a Queen" is coming to the Guildhall, Plymouth, shortly.

FOR U.K. AND COLONIES.

We are told that the United Kingdom Films, Limited, have just acquired from Messrs. Davison's Agency, the exclusive rights for the United Kingdom and the Colonies of the fine Cosmograph historical drama, "The Princes in the Tower." The success of the firm with "A Message from Mars" will still be fresh in the minds of many of our readers, and they certainly appear to have secured in the above drama a very worthy addition to their list, both from production and quality points of view.

OLDHAM NEWS & NOTES.

The Kings had a fine subject a fortnight ago in "Cinema College," which was ably described by Mr. J. T. Taylor. In a conversation with Mr. Field, he stated that people did not seem to want educational films after a hard day's work. They prefer a good drama or comedy, something that will take away the thoughts of work. The past week was entirely different and audiences were appreciably larger, with a bill including Pathé's latest big feature, "In Mid-Atlantic," "I Hear Her Calling Me," "Sense of Humour" and "The Milkman's Revenge."

The films at the Electraceum were of a high order and were received with entire approval. "A Daughter of Satan," "The Husband's Mistake," "The Three Gamblers," "Why I am Here," and others made up excellent programmes.

At the Empire patrons were well provided for, the films being very enjoyable. "Treasures on Earth," "Stage Door Flirtation," "A Bad Game," "How Old are You," were all good subjects. During the last week "Officer John Donovan," "The Champion," and others made up an excellent programme.

The Star and the Osborne could not have screened better programmes. "Flames of Vengeance" had a great reception, it being a fine dramatic subject. "In the Wilds of Africa" was another fine top-liner, and during the latter part of the week "The Pride of the Circus" received a fine welcome, as did "His Wife's Child."

The Hipp continues to give good programmes, the last fortnight being no exception.—Mr. Will Carr, at the Premier, has screened some fine subjects.—Mr. Watson, at the Palladium, has dropped the continuous show for a time. In a conversation with him I gleaned the reason is owing to his having booked subjects which are too long for a continuous show. "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil" took particularly well.

The Coliseum screened a splendid Keystone winner in "A Healthy Neighbourhood." "Treasures on Earth" was a fine dramatic subject. Another excellent Keystone was "A Muddy Romance."

Brown's also had excellent programmes. "The Cast of the Die," "Convict's Story," "The Story of David Greig" and "Shadow of Guilt" fully satisfying good audiences.—At the Popular, Mr. Schofield with his changes thrice weekly, reported good business.

AN ARTISTE OF DISTINCTION.

The Keystone Film Company announce still another addition—a performer who has already made a big reputation in the person of Miss Marie Dressler, an artiste who is immensely popular with American theatre-goers. Mr. Mack Sennett, managing director of Keystone's, is personally directing the films in which Miss Dressler appears. They will be features of three or four reels and production has been going on for some time.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

EDINBURGH.

The many halls in the capital, particularly those in the centre of the city, have been reaping the benefit of the thousands of holiday-makers who make an annual pilgrimage to "Auld Reekie," and who have been enticed inside by the attractive "bills-of-fare" displayed outside. The Kinetophone speaking pictures continue to be an attraction at the Princess Cinema, and as Mr. R. C. Buchanan backs these up with top-notch features, the attendances have been satisfactory. "Queen Bess" claimed honours in the first three days, and for the latter half "Monte Cristo" was the leading feature.

At the Palace, dependable programmes are always the feature. Suzanne Grandais in "The Air Torpedo" was the particular star for the first half, and the visitors at the end of the week were privileged to witness "The Catch of the Season" and "By Unseen Hands."

"Spartacus," which proved so successful in Glasgow, was the feature for the week at the New Picture House. The other items in the programme included "The Test of True Love," "The Janitor's Flirtation," "A Bad Game," and an interest and topical pictures.

The popular Nicolson Street house provides excellent fare, and no matter what part of the week was selected for a visit, patrons went away more than pleased. "The Engineer's Revenge," "The Harvest of Sin," "By the Sad Sea Waves," and "The Cast of the Die" were the stars at the Cinema, and attractive they proved to be.

At La Scala, "The Expert's Secret" and "The Frail Vessel" were fine dramas, while comedy was well represented in "His Dark Scheme" and "The Simple Life," and the combination made a programme which filled the house

The old-established Operetta House, where I can remember having seen animated pictures almost fifteen years ago, is still going strong. "The Curse of the Golden Land" and "The Wells-Blake Fight," with plenty of comedies made an ideal programme, and vacant seats were hard to find. I should imagine the Operetta House can claim to be the oldest established picture hall in the city.

The Tron Picture Palace is one of Edina's favourite halls, and good entertainment is always to be found here. This week "Beauty Unadorned" and one of the "Fantomas" series is attracting crowded houses.

Patrons of the Palladium were recently privileged to witnesss the screening of "Hamlet," with Sir J. Forbes-Rebertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott in the leading parts. The notable production was a most successful draw. "A Leader of Men" was shown in the latter half of the week.

Mr. Gus Gillies, at Tollcross Cinema, never fails to have something special for his supporters. "The Thumb Print," "Sunlight" and "From Out the Flood" were among recent big screenings. This week a star variety programme, with a judicious selection of the best pictures is promised.

"The Lure of Gold" drew crowds to the Coliseum. This, however, was only one item on a strong programme, for included on the bill were "Lieut. Daring and the Aerial Scout," "Against Desperate Odds," and "Under the Black Flag."

Although at Elm Row Picture House varieties are becoming a strong point, the attractiveness of the pictures does not diminish. "The Silver Lining" proved a very excellent drama, and comedy in plenty was found in "A Quiet Little Wedding." Business here continues to be very good.

PROVINCIAL NEWS.

The reply of a well-known renter to the question, "How's trade in the provinces?" was: "Well, we're not cutting down our buying yet." This is fairly indicative of the state of the industry at this critical time of the year. The renter in question draws his clients from a very wide area in the north, and his reply is corroborated by exhibitors as far apart as Peebles and Buckie. Trade still continues good, and the exhibitor is gradually coming round to the opinion that it is not a question of good weather and bad, but that if good programmes are submitted all the time, the business will be done.

I have another excellent report from the Star, Aberdeen, of which the managing director is Mr. B. Hedgley Gates, and the acting manager Mr. H. Holden. The crowded houses (twice nightly) which are a feature at the Star, justify the claim that this house is one of the most popular in the Granite City. A typical week's programme is before me, and from it I cull the following: "A Tragedy of the Clouds," "The Girl at the Lunch Counter," "And an Angel Came" and "Humanity." Every picture—drama or comedy—is "spoken to" by Mr. and Mrs. Gates, both renowned elocutionists. The musical accompaniments are provided by a symphonola, which is manipulated by Mr. Wm. Gordon. The hall is one of the finest in the country, being fitted with tip-ups throughout, and having pit, amphitheatre, balcony and stalls.

In Dundee I found that the managers of most of the halls are still very well pleased with the business being done. The holidays and good weather have certainly had a little effect on the houses, but compared with previous years 1914 is not behind. The programmes submitted at the principal halls are still on the lines which prevailed when I last wrote of Dundee—first runs and the best of exclusives.

The Prestwick (Ayr) Picture House is having a continued run of pleasing business, and the proprietor, Mr. William Alexander, is deserving of success. The programme included "When the Earth Trembled" and a fine variety of comedies. At every performance a selection of singing pictures is introduced. Mr. Alexander would be glad if renters would add his name to their mailing lists.

At the Cosy Corner, Dunoon, the holiday season has fairly commenced, and Mr. Dick Sutherd is keeping up his reputation by presenting a star programme.

At Renton the picture lovers are being well catered for at the Public Hall. Mr. Glass's programmes are always sure draws, and with "The Fall of Troy" and "Daniel" good business is being done this week.

"Antony and Cleopatra," which filled the De Luxe, Glasgow, and has been rebooked for the same house, is this week being screened at the Palace, Kilmarnock, where, on account of the length of this production, variety turns are being given a rest for the week, the patrons having an all-picture programme for a change. In addition, a nicely balanced selection of other new dramas and comedies is also being submitted.

At Renfrew, Mr. A. M. Morrison, the manager of the Town Hall Pictures, has for his star subjects "The God of the Sun" and "The Lieutenant's Last Fight."—Mr. Duncan Wilson, of the Victoria Hall, Kilsyth, always has a good programme, and though this week variety occupies a goodly portion of the bill, pictures of excellent variety play a not unimportant part.

At Paisley the boom still holds good, and on a visit at the beginning of the week I found that all the houses were doing very well indeed. At the Picture Theatre (Mr. Linhay manager) the star for the week was "The British Navy." The attendances at the "P.T.," which is the only hall in the town running a continuous show from 2.30 till 10.30, are increasing weekly. Future bookings include the W. W. Jacobs series (exclusive), "The Golden Beetle," and "The Murdock Trial."—On visiting St. George's Hall, I found myself in the atmosphere of the Wild West. The picture for the week was the great Buffalo Bill show film, and for the occasion the attendants were attired in the costumes of the "wild and woolly." Mr. Vivian, who is admitted to be a "double" of the redoubtable scout, also donned the costume, and delivered an interesting explanatory lecture while the picture was being shown. The innovation was a great success, and drew crowded houses every evening.—At both of the Bostock houses, the Hippodrome and the Rink, good houses were being entertained. At the former, where varieties fill a good part of the bill, the chief picture was "Captain Ellesmere, V.C.," and, needless to say, it was a great attraction.—At the Rink, Mr. Galbraith had an ideal programme to put before his patrons, the tit-bits being "The Antique Brooch," "The Ring and the Rajah," "Rogues' Gallery," and "The Uprising of Ann."—At the Royal Animated Picture Hall, where Mr. Kirkpatrick has the pleasure of entertaining a large circle of regular patrons, good fare was being provided. Pride of place in the week's programme was given to "Daniel," while the supporting features were "The Mysterious Way," "On the Great Steel Beam," and "Prince Charlie and Lochiel's Country," the latter a scenic showing the finest beauty spots in Scotland.—At the O.K. Picture Hall the programme submitted by Mr. Jim Clarke was sufficiently good, and as it was backed up by an amateur carnival and competition, the hall was well filled every evening.—The Western, Paisley, has closed down for a season, and will re-open again in the autumn.

Some New Majestic Films.

The weekly programme of the New Majestic Company, comprising films bearing the well-known and popular brands of the Reliance, Majestic, and Apollo companies, is always one of special interest by reason of its great variety and the all-round excellence of production, acting, and photography. The present week's issue is a good sample of the regular output, and if we must give the first place to our old friend, O'Brien, on this occasion, it is merely in recognition of the pleasure of former acquaintance.

"One-Round O'Brien" has made his reputation before this, and has already firmly established himself as a popular favourite, but he has never had a better opportunity for the exploitation of his very peculiar talents than in this film, which shows his reappearance in the ring in circumstances as original as they are mirth-provoking. O'Brien has been having rather a bad time since we last met him, and being anxious and willing to do anything to reinstate himself in popular favour, he fortunately comes upon the advertisement of a hypnotist whose chief business, it would appear, is to score off O'Brien for the edification of the picture-going public. O'Brien conceives the idea that the art of hypnotism may be turned to profit in the prize ring, and takes a course of lessons with such success that he is soon able to prove his aptitude by hypnotising his Professor and regaining the fee paid in advance. After this his professional career is a series of triumphs, achieved under conditions which we can only regret are unlikely to be adopted at the National Sporting Club, for however little they may contribute towards the noble art of self-defence, they will certainly do much to add to the gaiety of a sporting nation. O'Brien's triumph, however, is short-lived, for the Professor sees how money can be made in the ring, and using his powers over pugilists and patrons as well, departs from the scene a wiser and very much wealthier man. The whole thing is conceived and carried out in the wildest spirit of burlesque, and O'Brien's performance will evoke hearty laughter wherever it is seen.

One could hardly have a more striking contrast to this irresponsible farce than the powerful one-act drama, "The Clerk." John Grey is in the employment of a banker who has accumulated wealth by very questionable methods, and is a man of so little strength of mind that he finds himself involved in business dealings which will not bear strict investigation. The romance of his life starts when a pretty girl, Beatrice Hall, is engaged as stenographer. Grey indulges in romantic day-dreams, but the banker himself is attracted by the girl's beauty, and Grey has to stand aside and see his dreams dispelled. Two years pass; the banker neglects his wife, and his business declining through his own dissipation, he is involved in financial and domestic calamity. Grey realises too late that his own lack of moral courage has ruined his chance of happiness, and his last effort is to repair to some small extent the business losses to which he was an accessory. It is a strong drama, forcibly told, and the part of the clerk gives Mr. William Nigh scope for a character study of considerable power.

Another strong drama, with a welcome touch of comedy, is "The Idler," the story of a wealthy young leader of society, who is rejected by a girl who really loves him, on account of his idle and useless existence. He meets with an accident which deprives him of his memory, and after going through many vicissitudes he is induced to take part in a burglary. He and his associates are surprised by the girl he loved, and though not aware of her identity, he saves her from the violence of his companion, receiving an injury which necessitates his removal to a hospital. An operation restores his memory, and his courage meets with its due reward from the girl, who has succeeded in averting suspicion of his complicity in the attempted burglary. It is a story which imposes some strain on one's credulity, but is made up of effective situations and pleasing sentiment, and is excellently played.

"A Ticket to Red Horse Gulch" treats of the adventures of a telephone linesman in the Far West, who makes use of a railroad ticket which he finds by accident. It leads him to a pretty girl and a very handsome fortune, secured by his expert knowledge and his pluck and resource. It is a fine, breezy story of the kind which will always maintain its popularity.

"Tricked by a Photo," showing the triumph of an ingenious—and not very scrupulous—detective, and a most amusing farce, "A Warm Welcome," in which we are shown the adventures of an eccentric millionaire who is confused with a hobo blacklisted by the police, make up a programme which in point of variety, interest of plot, production and photography compares favourably with any to be seen in London.

HELP IN TROUBLE.

FOR PROPRIETORS, MANAGERS, AND OPERATORS.

A few weeks since a correspondent in these columns complained of projector carbon trouble, and some advice was given on the subject. The complaint was of the falling away of the negative carbon, which, it was pointed out, is most certain to happen when ordinary carbons are overloaded.

Since then we have had brought to our notice a new carbon, a product, we are interested to note, that is entirely of British manufacture. It is claimed, in fact, that the "Kinarko," the carbon in question, is the only carbon made in this country, and that it will defy all attempts of crumbling through overloading.

A few pairs of "Kinarko" carbons were submitted to us for test, and a very excellent and steady light was obtained by their aid. In spite of the fact that the negative carbon is a much more diminutive article than the ordinary carbon to which one is accustomed, no spluttering or unsteadiness took place. Increase of current above the normal rating, although, of course, causing a more rapid burning away, did not affect the general stability of the carbon.

"Kinarko" carbons seem to possess a number of interesting features, and we understand that they can be obtained from any of the cinematograph accessory houses.

"F.P.M." is handling a gas engine generator plant, and experiences certain troubles on which he requires enlightenment. He writes: "The engine has electric ignition, and the sparking plug gives a great deal of trouble. The asbestos washer continually blows out, and the engine has to be shut down for a new washer to be fitted. I frequently have great difficulty in starting the engine, and I notice if I remove the plug there is a lot of moisture on the contacts. The speed of the engine is supposed to be 250 revolutions per minute, but I find that the half-time shaft turns at only 113 revolutions to the minute, instead of, as I take it, 125 revolutions. Does this not affect the power developed? I certainly cannot get more load out of the engine. The dynamo is supposed to give 150 amperes at 70 volts, but I find that over 120 amperes has accompanied with it a decrease in pressure."

We take it that the engine is of the ordinary slow-speed horizontal type, and that the ignition consists of a low-tension magneto and a mechanically operated make-and-break sparking plug. The operating spindle is no doubt carried in a porcelain bush on the innermost side. The bush is sometimes ground in. At other times, unfortunately, it is not. In such circumstances it is only at the most a matter of hours before the asbestos washer making the joint blows through. The first thing to see, then, is that the bush is in fact the fit it should be. Next one must consider the washer. In a case that recently came before our notice in which washer blowing was the one "fly in the ointment" in the gas engine running, the trouble was traced, not to any fault in the construction, but, by the neglect on the part of the attendant to a little detail upon which much of the success of the washer's life depends. The washer is of larger diameter than the face of the metal against it, and if the washer be left untrimmed it is not long before fraying of the edges takes place. This, particularly when the engine is working well up to its full load, causes preignition through the frayed edges reaching a state of incandescence. In the circumstances but a short time will elapse before the joint is blown out and a delay in the running occurs. It should always be remembered, when inserting a new washer, to trim off the edges, using a sharp penknife for the purpose, so that the washer is of the circumference of the metal. Washer trouble in such conditions would be practically non-existent.

Regarding the collection of moisture on the sparking plug terminals, this would certainly in itself be enough to prevent easy starting. The moisture is due most probably to condensation and not to any direct leakage of water from the jacket. When an engine has finished its run the plug should be removed by unscrewing the two nuts holding the outer flange, and it should be kept in a warm place until next required. A plug should always, when inserting before starting, be well wiped to remove any trace of moisture, and the contacts should be cleaned with a little emery paper. It should be seen also that there is no sluggishness of the moving spindle. It is very advisable with this type of magneto ignition to hold an additional sparking plug in reserve. When the engine is running this should be laid near, say, the exhaust pipe, to keep the plug warm. In the event of any plug trouble ensuing, it is then but a matter of moments to change over the plugs. Another factor affecting the life of the asbestos washer is the timing of the firing point. If the firing be too early—that is, if the ignition be advanced too much—the washer will soon blow by.

Regarding the speed of the engine, 226 r.p.m., which is your crank-shaft speed, certainly indicates that something is wrong with the engine. Probably it is a small matter—the governor being incorrectly set. We would recommend you to screw down the nuts at the top of the centrifugal governor. This will compress the spring against which the governor weights work, and so cause a speeding-up of the engine.

The power developed by any given engine is proportional to its speed. The fact that your engine is running much below its rated revolutions would account for the dynamo not maintaining its full pressure at the full load amperage. With the speeding-up of the engine—the half-time shaft should revolve at 125 r.p.m.—we think you will find that the dynamo will give out its full load without difficulty.

TRAWLINGS FROM GRIMSBY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A novel competition had been introduced by the new management of the Gaiety, Wintringham Road. Mr. Alfred Blackman, late manager of St. George's Hall Cinema, Hull, and the Picture Playhouse, Hull, who is in charge for the Kinema (Grimsby), Limited, has, in answer to numerous requests to bring the hall into line with other cinemas by removing the higher-priced seats at the back of the hall, submitted the matter to a referendum, and a voting paper, on which the patron is also asked to estimate the number who would be in favour of the course for which he or she voted, is issued to each visitor. A six months' season ticket will be presented to the lady or gentleman who correctly gauges the result of a vote and at the same time most nearly estimates the actual majority, and a three months' and a one month's ticket to the two next nearest. Considerable interest is aroused in the competition, but at the time of writing I have not heard the result. "Chelsea 7750" and "An Hour Before Dawn" have been amongst recent attractions at the Gaiety.

Owing to the by-election which is being fought strenuously in the borough cinemas in the district have been much in demand for purposes of public meetings. The Tivoli, a large hall, which was formerly a variety theatre, was utilised on Friday of last week and on Monday of this in this way. "The Open Door," "Eileen of Erin," "The Golden Beetle," "Lost Treasure," "Honesty" and "Satan," which was shown for three days, have been included in recent successes. An excellent arrangement for cold, damp nights especially, is that early door patrons to the circle and stalls for the second house are allowed to take up their positions in a large room adjoining the circle and the stall entrance.

The impressive funeral of the late Sir George Doughty, M.P. for Grimsby, was seized upon by the management of the Cleethorpes Empire to secure a good picture, taken by their own staff. Other notable films lately have been "A Soldier's Honour," "The Black Gang," "The Cup Final Mystery" and "A Face from the Past."

Announcing a Western star attraction Mr. Martin, of the Paragon, had one of his attendants out in the town in cowboy dress. The result was an effective advertisement. Some good pictures have filled the bill here, amongst them "Bridge of Shadows," "Kid Lewis and Paul Til Fight," "Heart of a Heathen," "Prisoner of the Harem" and "The Tango."

Mr. Higgins, of the Strand and Lyric, is also on the look-out for topical local scenes and often includes them in his programmes. The films shown at these halls recently have included "The Antique Brooch," "Because of a Hat," "Ben Bolt," "The Witness of the Will" and "Fatal Wedding."

At the Royal, Cleethorpes (Messrs. Higgins and Littlewood's other cinema) have been screened "The Shadows of a Great City," "The Black Maria," "The Golden Pathway," "A Night at the Inn" and "Love's Sunset," while at the Playhouse, Grimsby, "A King's Romance," "The Master Crook Outwitted," "The Italian Navy of To-day," "Double Dealings" and "Address Unknown" have been shown.

THANET TOPLINES.

For the time of the year there are numerous visitors to this part of the coast and business is remarkably good. Mr. C. W. Stanley is ever on the alert to supply the latest and patrons have been well pleased with "The Great Python Robbery," "Explosive D" and "Salvage of the Third Floor Back."—At the Clifton Cinema, Mr. C. W. Ellis supplied a programme of exceptional variety. "The Cup Final" sustained interest for the full week. "A Dangerous Woman" and "After Many Years" were the chief features.—"The Scapegrace," "Child of a Smuggler" and "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" topped the bill at the Lounge, Cliftonville, and were the cause of good houses.—The Town Hall Cinema, Westgate, screened "Sons of the Sea" and "Black 13."—Mr. F. Fumagalli has done well with "The Harper Mystery" and "False Rubies" at the Cinema, Broadstairs. "Terry's Mother-in-Law" was the star comedy.—The chief picture at Ramsgate was "The Hundred Days," secured by Mr. Reg. V. Crow for the King's Theatre. The realistic effects combined with the orchestra, directed by Mr. Will D. Coleman, greatly helped towards the success.—Mr. Bert Parker is filling the Queen's to its fullest capacity. "The Dare Devil" and "Beauty in the Sea Shell" were highly appreciated. "The Elusive Kiss" and Harry Lauder and Neil Kenyon in "Golfing," were the principal comedy items.—"Highland Romance" and "Death Stone of India" were well received at Shanly's.—Mr. George Claringbold is sustaining the interest of patrons with the series "Who Will Marry Mary?" at the Empire, Sandwich. This hall is becoming very popular with those connected with the adjoining golf links.

NOTTINGHAM & DISTRICT NOTES.

Mrs. L. Wright, manageress of Hibberts Pictures, Nottingham, is to be congratulated upon the enterprising and up-to-date manner in which she conducts this popular house, and the high reputation Hibberts gained under Mr. Smith Lord (whom Mrs. Wright succeeded) is being fully maintained. Trade shows are held weekly here, as well as at the Regent's Hall, and I understand they have proved very successful. "A Hundred Years Ago," "When Dreams Come True," "Dare-Devil Mountaineer," and "The Little Peacemaker," were popular items last week.

I paid a visit recently to the Globe, Trent Bridge, and once again found a large number awaiting admittance. Mr. Sidney Gunn kindly piloted me through the crowd, and showed me a house that would gladden the heart of any manager. Both the commodious gallery and ground floor were packed with an obviously delighted audience. The programme was a delightfully varied one, two films of great merit being "The Antique Brooch" and "Thor, Lord of the Jungle." Mr. Gunn's latest successes have been "Master Crook Outwitted," "Conscience and the Temptress," "For Love of a Man" and "The Elusive Diamond."

At a meeting of the Basford Rural District Council a letter was read from the Notts County Council on the subject of picture palaces and the safety of the public, inviting the co-operation of local authorities in ensuring that every precaution is taken. It was stated the County Council did not seem to have any voice in the matter until buildings were erected and ready to be licensed, and it was inferred that local authorities should make suggestions as to proper exits, etc., as required by the Home Secretary's regulations. It appears this question arose in connection with a local picture palace, the plans of which were passed by the local authority, but when the cinema licence was applied for the police objected to some of the entrances. The opinion was expressed that it was unfortunate that the plans were not seen by the police before the buildings were erected, much inconvenience and expense being thereby saved.

Mr. Frederick D. Smith has taken over the management of the Scala, and is handling the business at this up-to-date and popular house in a very progressive manner. Kinoplastikon is being installed here, and Mr. Smith very kindly invited me into some of the mysteries of this wonderful apparatus when I called the other evening. Many difficulties have, of course, had to be surmounted in installing this new invention, but in the course of a week or so Mr. Smith hopes to place before his patrons the most perfect exhibition yet seen.

The "villagers" of Beeston have always quite an admirable programme provided for them at their charming little picture house, the New Palladium. A great draw last week was the Cup Final, well backed up by "The Trail of the Lost Chord," "The Test" and Keystone and Vitagraph comics.—At the Haydon Road Kinema, Sherwood, "Moths" met with much success last week.

Picture-lovers of Worksop are being well catered for by the management of the various up-to-date houses. Mr. A. J. Ashley followed the success of "The Curse of Greed" and "Fighters of the Plains" last week-end with "By the Cross." "The Four Million Pound Dowry" is the exclusive this week-end.—Mr. Andrew has changed the name of the Town Hall Cinema to the Worksop Art Gallery. A fine reception was accorded "The Wastrel" last week, and "Dr. Nicholson and the Blue Diamond" heads the bill this week.

THE SOUTHAMPTON SHOWS.

Competition is exceedingly keen in the Shirley district at the present time, and the result is that the residents in that locality are able to take their choice of the very best class of pictures. At Mr. Lewis's comfortable little hall, the Shirley Cinema, "The Wrecker of Lives" brought good business at the beginning of the week, and on Thursday "The Empty Cot" was equally successful. "The Last Days of Pompeii" was screened on Monday, and "East Lynne" commences a three-day's run to-day (Thursday). Mr. Lewis informed me that he has exclusives booked up to the end of June. The Shirley Cinema, by the way, is fitted with a double roof, and electric fans have been installed in each corner of the hall.

Some big films have also been booked at the Shirley Electric, of which Mr. Massey is the manager. "The Circus Girl's Romance" was the attraction during the week-end, and "The Golden Beetle" was shown on Sunday. "Antony and Cleopatra" has been boomed during the present week, and it will be followed up by a leading exclusive, "The World, the Flesh," and the Devil."

Mr. W. Buck has been running only one house a night at the Atherley Theatre this week. He secured exclusive rights of "Germinal," and has been crowded out each night. During the week-end he screened "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale," another of the Sherlock Holmes series, and is likely to score again with "Moths."

When I looked in at the Portswood Palladium last week Mr. Urquhart, the manager, told me that Messrs. Bacon and Hood had placed a contract for the installation of a special multi-bladed electric fan. The films shown are of a high-class character. "The Convent Gate" was screened during the week-end, "Branscombe's Pal" filled the hall on Sunday, and "Tannhauser," with specially selected music at each performance, was submitted on Monday. "A Tragedy of the Clouds" commences to-day (Thursday), and among other good things booked are "David Copperfield" (next Monday), and W. W. Jacobs' fine comedy, "Lawyer Quince."

Special summer prices of 2d., 4d. and 6d. were inaugurated at the Scala on Sunday, and children accompanied by adults will be admitted to the stalls half price. The two leading films this week were "The Dock Catastrophe" and "The Circus Girl's Romance."—At the Carlton, Mr. Appley reports good houses for "Napoleon" during the week-end.—Mr. Kuntze screened "In Mid-Atlantic" at the Scala last week, and has two great attractions for next week in "The Curse of Greed" and "The Midnight Wedding."

Congratulations to Mr. Percy G. Lambert on becoming the happy father of a baby girl. Mr. Lambert is the manager of the Southampton Picture Palace, East Street, and is very popular with the patrons of the hall. "The Lure of Gold" and "The Iron Man" were submitted to delighted audiences last week, and at Sunday evening's show "The Street Singer" was a much appreciated film. "The Sheriff and the Rustler" formed the leading feature on Monday, and "Shylock" is another attraction.

Mr. Lang has never yet had to complain of bad business at the Kingsland, "House Full" being a standing motto. George Gray, of "Fighting Parson" fame, in "The Road to Ruin," drew big crowds last week. "The Fatal Likeness" was the star picture on Monday, and "The Gambler's Wife" is billed for to-day.

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

For the past few months I seem to have been repeatedly recording the floating of new picture palace companies in Hull, and yet there are still more to come. Already we have about thirty cinemas, and despite this there are now about ten more either being built or sites having been decided on and the plans deposited at the Guildhall. It was only last week that I recorded the new Beverley Road project, and information has reached me this week to the effect that there is every likelihood of a cinema for the Prince's Avenue district, which, so far, is ground yet untouched by entertainment of any kind. If the proposal bears fruit, as it certainly should, I hope to have more to say of it in later notes. Plans for two or three places have been passed this week. It is interesting to note that the proposed Western Picture Palace, opposite the West Park, Anlaby Road, is going forward, and it is hoped that the plans will be approved this week, in order that an early start might be made. The new Holderness Road scheme also looks promising.

Another of Hull's oldest music-halls, the Empire, is now being demolished and will be replaced by a magnificent picture palace. This is the second music-hall which has had to give place to the latest form of entertainment, the other being the Hippodrome or Alhambra. The cinema which will take the place of the old Empire will be the Majestic Picture Hall, a short description of the plans of which was given in a recent issue. Suffice it to say now, therefore, that with Mr. William Morton, the city's entertainment father at its head, the Majestic is assured of success, and its novel features will commend it to the public. The prospectus was only issued last week, and no sooner was it placed in the hands of those who proved to be ready investors than Mr. Morton had the "destructors" at work pulling brick from brick. The new company will embrace the Prince's Hall, one of Mr. Morton's most successful cinemas, and the two will be run in conjunction with each other. I understand every effort will be made to have the Majestic opened for the coming autumn.

I spent a short time at Messrs. Ruffells Hull cinema, the Picture Playhouse, Porter Street, last week, when the impressive picture, "Thieves and the Cross," was on the screen. It was greatly appreciated, and the musical accompaniment was good, the orchestra and the Mustel organ being employed with admirable effect. Several other good dramas and humorous pictures were included in the list. For the latter part of the week Cines feature "The Golden Beetle," was the attraction. Manager Jack Raymond has settled down to his new duties, and without doubt will keep up the excellent reputation the Playhouse has already earned.

Mr. Tom Bogue of the Princes Hall, George Street, tells me that the Saturday afternoon educational matinees, instituted a few weeks ago, have been a great success. When I called on Saturday, the instructive part of the programme included "The Hedgehog," "The Heron," "Sensitive Plants," "The Lion," "Trout Breeding," "Electric Sparks," "In the Land of Turks," "Building an Aeroplane," "Jacks" and "Soldiers." These educational films are in addition to the ordinary programmes, and are obtained through Messrs. Pathé Frères. The management have made special terms for schools, who have not been slow to take this fine opportunity of instruction through the cinema, and an endeavour is made to secure a film on any particular subject asked for. Mr. Bogue is also showing the series of pictures embracing "Seven Months' Big Game Hunting," and they are proving a splendid attraction. "A Romance of Old Brittany" has been shown this week, and amongst the exclusive attractions for the next few weeks the following have been booked:—"The Old Curiosity Shop" (full week), "The Curse of War," "The Master Criminal," "Traitors to the King" and "Le Chevalier du Maison Rouge."

Although the Kinema, Anlaby Road has always been noted for the clearness of its pictures, they are now better than ever. Mr. E. Chapman, the manager of this fine cinema, has obtained a screen, which is the only one of its kind in the district, and I understand there are very few in the country. It is an English patent, and quite different from either the canvas or metal screens. Mr. Chapman is delighted with it, and what is more he tells me his patrons are also. The Kinema Orchestra still maintains its seven players, and music and pictures combined form an admirable programme. "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," was shown to big houses last week, and this week's success has been "The Shadow." Singing pictures are popular.

The Eureka, Dairycoates, had a special attraction last week in "Give Us This Day," which Mr. Firth obtained exclusively. Extensively advertised as the greatest dramatic picture of the year, the film has been a great success, and it has been difficult to find vacant seats, despite the fact that the seating capacity has been greatly increased.

I notice the Hull exhibitors have gone strongly in for the newly released film, "The Murdoch Trial," featuring Miss Florence Turner, who recently scored a great triumph on her personal visit. The film is being shown at several cinemas this week, and there is a big rush to see it. Amongst these places are the Circus, the de Luxe, and the Picturedrome.

Mr. Simonite, of the Coliseum, has given an "all Lubin programme" for one night only, and this was equally successful as have been the special Vitagraph and Selig programmes. The Coliseum has also had "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for one night, as well as other notable subjects, including the lengthy comedy, "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake," and the drama, "Jean Valjean, the Outcast," taken from Victor Hugo's famous book.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

Robin Hood and Maid Marian.

It is a difficult thing, especially for an American company, to make an historical film play which is at once interesting, dramatic, picturesque, and moderately true to the original events, and for their excellent and workmanlike version of the story of Robin Hood and Maid Marian, which contains all these qualities, the Thanhouser Company deserve much praise. They have treated their subject on popular lines throughout, and there can be little question but that the resulting film will enjoy the greatest success wherever it is shown.

The history of that noble Socialist, Robin, Earl of Huntingdon, is justly famous, and although it has been handled many times before by poet, dramatist, novelist, and even film-maker. it always bears repetition. The Thanhouser Company's version, although in some respects unconventional, is clear, picturesque, and thoroughly effective, and as we have said, it is certain to prove highly acceptable to the average audience. It is in four parts, each of which is almost complete in itself, dealing, as it does, with a different episode in the life of the robber earl, of whose career the film as a whole gives so vivid and largely comprehensive a record. One could have wished that the love story of Robin and Maid Marian had been treated in somewhat fuller detail—and what a delightful picture could be made of this charming tale on the lines of Tennyson's "Foresters," wherein it is so admirably handled—but seeing that certain omissions and alterations were doubtless inevitable, it would be difficult to desire a better version than that which the Thanhouser Company have given to us.

The film opens with the outlawry of Robin Hood by Prince John, and shows how he inaugurated a kingdom of his own in the sheltering depths of Sherwood Forest. Incidentally, moreover, we are given some very lively and effective battle scenes. Then comes the romantic history of Allan-a-Dale and the abduction of his future bride by Robin's merry men from under the very nose of the ugly old rival whom she is being forced to marry. Next we are treated to a display of skill and daring on the part of Robin, and are shown how he is taken prisoner by the Sheriff of Nottingham, who figures throughout as the villain of the piece. Finally, after Robin has been rescued and the Sheriff incarcerated in his place, we see the visit in disguise of of King Richar Cœur de Lion to the Earl's sylvan stronghold, together with the very gratifying results thereof.

The film is acted by everyone concerned with that joyous vigour and unaffected abandon so necessary in any presentation of such a subject. Except in one or two trifling details, the costumes and properties are entirely satisfactory, very picturesque, and very lavish. Since the story is set for the most part in the open air, the scenery has the utmost natural charm and beauty, whilst the few interiors introduced are notable for their solidity and finish. Mr. William Russell is the Robin Hood, Miss Gerda Holmes the Maid Marian, Miss Mignon Anderson the very charming Helen, Mr. John Dillon the Sheriff of Nottingham, and Mr. Ernest Redding the lusty and wholly delightful Friar Tuck, of whom we should have been well pleased to see a good deal more. The photographic quality of the film is quite perfect, but one would have liked some of the scenes stained a warmer tone, rather than left in cold black and white. The lack of colour in a spectacular historical film such as the present is always a little difficult to forget, and the Continental method of staining such pictures helps to compensate one for what is, of course, an inevitable loss in monochrome photography.

There is very little need to recommend "Robin Hood and the Maid Marian" to the notice of exhibitors. It is a film made by a firm which thoroughly understands its public, and which, apart from its modern productions, has never done a better piece of work. All over the country this most creditable picture should meet with the warmest receptions. (Thanhouser Big Production. In four parts.)

Absinthe.

The author of this film has contrived a very effective, if somewhat conventional, drama, which gains interest from some picturesque scenes in and about Paris, and provides parts in which Miss Leah Baird and Mr. King Baggot have exceptional opportunities for the display of those talents which have deservedly placed them in the front rank of cinematograph artistes.

Though the film can hardly be accepted as a convincing picture of the insidious influence of the absinthe habit, it has strong claims to popular approval on its merits as a picturesque melodrama. The hero, Jean Dumas, a young artist, is tempted to rob his father—not, surely, because he has tasted absinthe for the first time, but because he is bewitched by a beautiful and thoroughly unscrupulous laundry girl. His infatuation leads him into a life of dissipation with the woman he has married, which lasts till his money is squandered, and she deserts him for the first man who is ready to supply her with the luxuries she craves.

Jean's demoralisation is rapid, and joining a gang of apaches, he is called upon to play the part of a cabdriver in an attempt to rob a lady of her jewels. He recognises the woman as his faithless wife, and mad with drink and rage he strangles her after a terrible struggle in the carriage. After a horrible period of delirium, he returns home to seek comfort and assistance from his parents, and makes a final effort to reinstate himself by joining a regiment of volunteers ordered on active service.

Mr. King Baggot invests the character in the earlier stages of the play with great personal charm, and later gives a performance which shows keen observation and considerable power. We are credibly informed that such was Mr. Baggot's conscientious study of the character that he became "a creature of the habit for the period of the play," and sustained a lacerated lip and the loss of a tooth during his realistic struggles. Mr. Baggot may be congratulated on the fact that his exertions terminate with the initial production, for there is little doubt that this intensely interesting drama, with its picturesque setting and powerful story, will appeal to the public for some considerable time. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company. Four reels.)

Winky Learns a Lesson in Honesty.

This excellent little comic introduces us to the art of a new film comedian, Mr. Switz, who creates therein the character of "Winky," a joyously funny personage who should rapidly make for himself a prominent place amongst the various well-known humorous figures of the screen. Winky is thoroughly and essentially British, and so is the class of humour which he so liberally dispenses. He is eminently well suited, therefore, to entertain British audiences, who are so often compelled to content themselves with rather unsympathetic foreign humour, through lack of sufficient native talent. In this his first adventure to be recorded by the camera, Winky suffers many amusing agonies as the result of stealing his master's wine. The latter gentleman, having discovered his servant's unfortunate weakness, quietly places poison labels upon his bottles, and then forces a fantastic and painful cure upon the unhappy Winky, who naturally imagines that his theft has inadvertently led him to commit suicide. It is quite an ingenious little story, and it is cleverly worked out. "Winky Learns a Lesson in Honesty" is worth seeing. (Bamforth film. Yorkshire Sales Agency. Released June 15th.)

Kill That Fly!

This, the second Winky comic to appear, is perhaps even better than the first, albeit its humour is of a rather broader nature. It is an amusing trifle cleverly thought out, cleverly produced, and cleverly acted, with many novel touches. Avowedly a work of the "knockabout" order, it contains no particular plot, but relies mainly upon its numerous humorously conceived situations and the excellent fooling of Winky for success. Its fun is straightforward and lusty, and it quite makes up in force what it may lack in subtlety. A firm which can produce so workmanlike a picture in its second effort must be watched with interest, for it should be capable of still bigger things in the future when handling more ambitious subjects. (Bamforth film. Yorkshire Sales Agency. Released June 18th.)

The Masked Amazon.

Though there is no striking originality in this story of a wife's devotion in clearing her husband from a charge of treason, the Celio Company has made an interesting drama out of familiar material, while the acting and the accessories of mounting and photography combine in making a work of art of a very high standard. Count Albert Ferrara, a young cavalry officer, is robbed of important papers by an "international" spy, Steroski, who poses as the manager of a large circus.

demned to a term of imprisonment, and his wife, the Countess Francesca, devotes herself to proving his innocence. She gains a clue which leads her to suspect Steroski, and in order to secure his confidence poses as a circus rider, and as the "Masked Amazon" makes an extraordinary success. She lures Steroski into a confession of his guilt, but he follows her to regain the proofs, and an exciting chase between his motor-car and the train in which she travels ends in the Countess being arrested at the frontier and Steroski gaining a temporary triumph. The servant of the Countess discovers a letter which proves of vital importance, and with its aid the Count is cleared of any suspicion of dishonesty and his sentence is annulled.

The mounting is most elaborate, and several scenes in the circus ring are picturesque and likely to prove highly popular. The acting is excellent throughout, Mdlle. Bertini, who recently made a success in "The History of a Pierrot," giving a fine performance and looking strikingly handsome as the Countess. (London Independent Film Company. Exclusive. Four reels.)

The Dream Woman.

This unusual picture, which is an adaptation of a short story by Wilkie Collins, the famous maker of hair-raising romances, may be most aptly described as a "mystery film." The spectator, that is to say, is left at the conclusion in considerable doubt as to whether the events which he has seen are supposed really to have happened in actuality, or whether they are but figments of a dream. The problem, it should be pointed out, is quite intentional.

The idea, although not wholly novel, is an exceedingly interesting one, and the film, in consequence, should be responsible for much gratifying speculation amongst those who see it. The chief fault of the film lies in the fact that it is at present rather difficult to follow the story. We are not ourselves familiar with the original, but we imagine that, however obscure or involved it may be, it would have been possible to extract from it a more cleanly cut tale for the purposes of the cinematograph. As it is, the adaptor seems to have relied upon a very great number of exceedingly long subtitles, containing quotations from the original text rather than upon a rearrangement or amplification of the action, which latter methods are, of course, the correct ones to adopt in translating a written story into pictures. In spite of its choppiness and obscurity as a story and its rather wearisome sub-titles, however, it cannot be denied that "The Dream Woman" is a powerful and striking film. If the sub-titles were taken out completely and the story recited or read during the progress of the film on the screen, as has been done with several other similar works, we fancy that it would make a particularly successful entertainment. Even as it is, however, it is an unusual film, and despite certain faults, it is quite worth seeing. (Blaché film. R. Prieur and Co., Limited.)

The Princes in the Tower.

The Cosmograph Company has produced a very effective and beautifully mounted drama from a scenario by M. Paul D'Ivoi, who, with somewhat unaccountable modesty, has shared the credit of authorship with Shakespeare, though the film has no more in common with Shakespeare's play than the ever-popular drama "Jane Shore." M. D'Ivoi has written a very strong and well-constructed drama, showing how the Duke of Gloucester schemes to gain possession of the crown of England. Edward IV. has recovered from a serious illness, and Gloucester, impatient of delay, brings about his death in a manner which is dramatically effective, though hardly encompassed with the subtlety which one associates with the character as depicted by Shakespeare. His two little nephews, Edward and Richard, then stand between him and the throne, and the endeavours of the Queen and of the Duke of Buckingham to save them from Richard's fiendish designs make a drama full of interest and effective situations, mounted in a most sumptuous and artistic manner, and composed of pictures of extreme beauty. The author has freely availed himself of artistic licence, the battle of Bosworth taking place in the streets of the city, while Richard's death takes place in the Queen's Palace at the hands of the Duke of Buckingham. Great care has been exercised in the choice of architectural setting, and the scenes outside the Tower of London and in the sanctuary of Westminster Abbey are appropriate and effective, besides being beautiful examples of photography. An effective tableau introduces the two little Princes posed after a picture by a great artist of the nineteenth century, though a reproduction of the same picture over the chimney-piece in the Queen's private apartments shows a somewhat premature appreciation of the artist's genius.

The acting is on a high level, a particularly fine study being given of Richard III. on the lines indicated in Shakespeare's play, and another effective performance is given of Sir James Tyrrell —deprived, in Gallic fashion, of his Christian name. It is an interesting drama, and a very beautiful production. (Cosmograph film. United Kingdom Film Company, Limited. Exclusive. Three reels.)

Universal City.

A particularly interesting film is being exhibited by the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited, showing the equipment and organisation of Universal City, Holywood, California, the source of supply of so many important pictures. The property comprises 600 acres of variegated country, some of it of such an elevation that snow lies on the hills for six months in the year. We are shown complete towns of wooden buildings which can be taken to pieces and rebuilt as may be required. There is a colony of African huts and Indian adobe dwellings, while the permanent buildings include a hospital, with a large staff of doctors and nurses—no doubt a very necessary adjunct in the adventurous life of the film actor. Vast corrals are required for the horses and oxen, while a spacious zoo contains £10,000 worth of wild animals.

The stag is said to be the largest in the world affording accommodation for sixteen companies at the same time. Some interesting pictures are given of the internal working of the studios, with the directors, Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Alan Dwan, and many of the leading members of the company at rehearsal, including Mr. Warren Kerrigan, Miss Pauline Bush, and many others.

It is a subject which must appeal to all who take an interest in the moving picture, and will open the eyes of many who do not yet realise the vast organisation necessary to the production of important films. (The Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited.)

The Drudge.

This powerful drama has an interesting story which rivets the attention from start to finish, giving a realistic picture of life in a small American country town, and affording fine scope for acting, which is taken full advantage of by a well-balanced company of established Vitagraph favourites. It shows how Anna Louise, the teacher in the village school, is induced to give up her lover, Dick Mason, and marry a widower, Thurley Briggs, who represents to her that Mason has deserted her. Her married life turns out to be miserably unhappy, her position being far worse than that of a servant on her husband's farm, and on the return of her lover she is persuaded to go away with him. When ready for flight she finds it impossible to forsake her little crippled child, and sacrificing her own chance of happiness, she determines to live her wretched life as best she may for the child's sake. A fatal accident to her husband suggests that her self-sacrifice will not be in vain, and that happier days are in store.

Miss Dorothy Kelly gives a sympathetic study of the unhappy Anna, and Mr. William Humphrey is powerful and convincing as Briggs, while Bobby Connelly as the little lame child gives a remarkably intelligent and natural performance.

There are some beautiful outdoor scenes in the earlier part of the film in which the young lovers find an ideal background for their meetings, and the pictures of farm life are full of interest. The quality of the photography is superb, and the effects of light and shade add interest to a well-constructed drama. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released June 18th. Length 1,954 ft.)

The Message in the Rose.

This is an exceedingly picturesque drama by Mr. Bannister Merwin, in which a romance of humble life in New York is ingeniously combined with more strenuous scenes taking place amidst Italian surroundings.

Mary, the florist's daughter, is unduly severe, or Joe, his assistant, is unusually diffident, for when she demands how he dare take the liberty of kissing her, he promptly resigns his situation and goes home in despair. Unaware of his unalterable determination, Mary writes a loving little message and places it in the centre of a rose in her father's greenhouse. Unfortunately, Joe does not return, and in the course of the day the rose is sold with others to a chance customer. It goes through many hands, including those of old Giovanna, an Italian woman, who has long left her native land. The sight of the rose brings back memories of her youth, and a dramatic picture of the love, jealousy, and tragedy which led to her exile is unfolded before us. These scenes are very beautiful and intensely dramatic, the suggestion of the local atmosphere and colour being admirably expressed, and the action being intensely dramatic.

Miss Mabel Trunelle gives a beautiful rendering of the passionate Italian beauty, and the change from the old woman in the streets of New York is strikingly effective. It is a film with considerable originality, and perfectly produced. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released June 18th. Length 1,030 ft.)

The Tragedy of Basil Grieve.

Thanks in great measure to the high artistic ideals and the skilful performances of the Hepworth Company, one never nowadays hears the once frequent accusation against British film manufacturers that their pictures are badly constructed, cheaply produced, and generally inferior to the pictures made by foreigners. Not only, moreover, have British manufacturers equalled, and sometimes outstripped, the foreigners where general technical excellence is concerned. In many cases, and especially in that of Messrs. Hepworth, their films have acquired that distinct individual note which the late Professor von Herkomer once declared to be so essential in really fine picture plays. The "Hepworth touch" in a film, apart from the necessarily varying considerations of plot, setting and acting, is a guarantee of that distinguished excellence of finish which has marked this firm's productions for so long, and which has caused them to rank so high in point of artistry as well as of popularity.

"The Tragedy of Basil Grieve" is a good example of the Hepworth Company's most successful and most characteristic work. It is a story of English life, set amidst typically English scenes, and played by thoroughly English artistes; and although the events with which it deals are unusual and even, in some respects, improbable, the whole spirit of the film is so essentially and completely English that the story has a realism which is so acute as to be sometimes almost overwhelming. The plot of the play tells how an ambitious woman marries a young author for his name and his money, and then subsequently murders him in order to be free to wed another richer man whom she likes better. A clumsy criminal, her guilt is quickly discovered, and while flying from justice she meets with a fatal accident and dies. The probability of the story is lessened by that very realism which makes it, in all other respects, so convincing. The people of the play, that is to say, are so entirely normal, middle-class folk, depicted with infinite care for absolute naturalness even in trifling details, that it becomes difficult to believe in their actions when they behave in the conventional manner of personages in an artificial stage drama. Whether this is a fault or a virtue in the film, however, it is difficult to say.

For the rest, "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve" is a most admirably devised entertainment which should impress strongly all who see it. The plot, as we have said, has its weaknesses—and it would surely have been possible to invent a better way of bringing the murderess to book than by making her so careless as to leave an obviously damning proof of her guilt lying for anyone to discover when she might readily have destroyed it—but it is powerful, effective and largely original. The acting is too perfectly natural to be characterised by any great subtlety or finesse, but everyone does well throughout the long cast, which includes Mr. Stewart Rome, who is inclined to be rather monotonous in his gestures and facial expression; Miss Violet Hopson, who is excellent as the wicked wife; Mr. Harry Gilbey, Mr. Cyril Morton, and Mrs. Marie de Solla. The wonderfully built studio settings are a notable feature of the play, being equal, as regards detail, lavishness and solidity, to any that one has seen, and the photography of the film is of that perfection which cannot be surpassed. Altogether, we consider that "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve" should meet with the utmost success. (Hepworth film. Length 3,250 ft.)

The Dream Woman

PRODUCED BY BLACHE FEATURES, INC.

THIS story by Wilkie Collins is a study in the psychology of fear, and deals with the strange and magnetic influence of mental suggestion; the power for good or evil that every man has in the exercise of his own mind and the evil that comes of allowing the mind to become the slave of a single idea. It is left to the reader to decide whether the events related really occurred or whether all the persons connected with the story were not influenced by the magnetism of the dream to the extent of suggesting mentally to each other the various occurrences so that perhaps in reality nothing occurred except the dream.

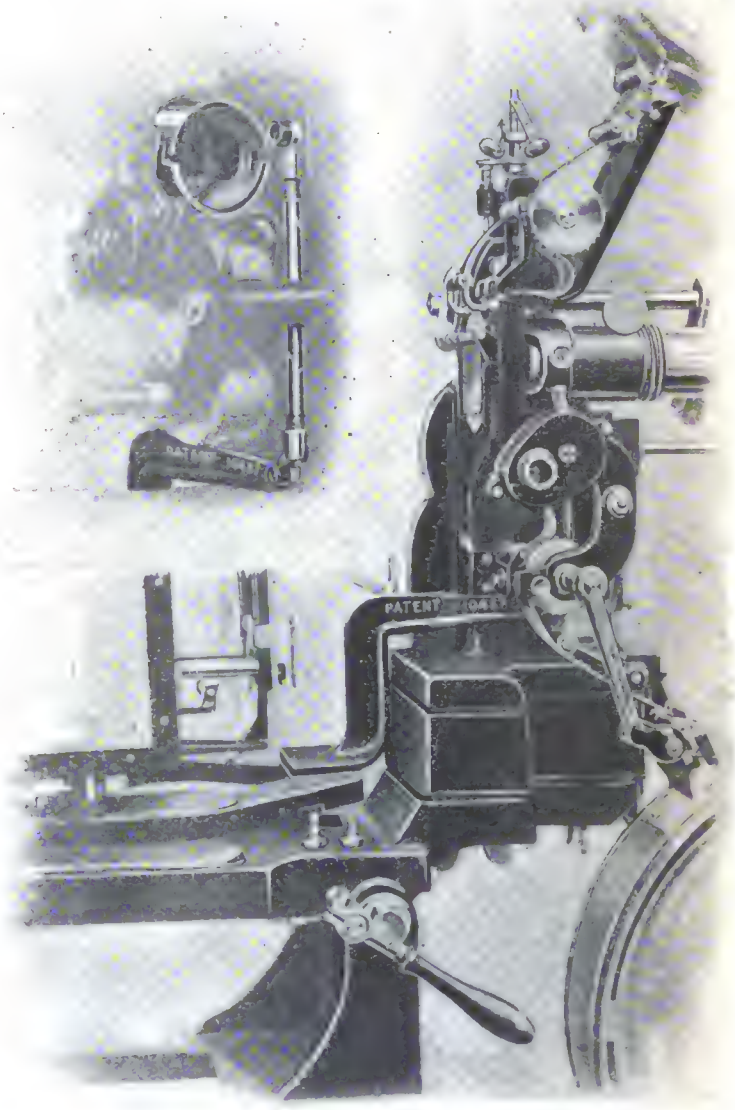
BRITISH FILMS IN CANADA.

In a particularly interesting leading article which appeared in The Times the other day, pointing to certain conditions the prevalence of which, if they became permanent, could only lead to a steady drift of Canadian thought away from the Mother Country, emphasis was laid on the fact that the picture palaces in that country "are supplied with films manufactured in the United States, presenting American themes glorifying the Stars and Stripes, while English films were conspicuous by their absence."

It is, of course, by no means the first time that this charge has been brought against our Canadian cousins, together with its implied reproach on the apathy or indifference of the British film manufacturer. A year or two ago we published two or three articles dealing with Canada as a field for the enterprise of home producers, wherein it was pointed out that the Canadian, while undoubtedly getting his fill of American films, was quite willing and ready to enthuse over British pictures, provided that they offered him equal amusement and interest. At that time American films had justly won for themselves a high reputation; they were produced regardless of expense, capably acted, and generally of superb photographic quality. British productions suffered by comparison; and the wily American took full advantage of the fact to secure practically the entire Canadian market. But to-day conditions are altered. British manufacturers are keenly alive to the necessity of meeting competition with productions of equal, if not higher, merit, and it is to their credit that during the last year or so English films have gradually come right into the forefront.



Bearing all this in mind it is, to say the least, somewhat disappointing to read that "British films (in Canada) are conspicuous by their absence." What is the reason for this? Why are not British films to be found in the picture theatres of Canada, and why does the Canadian seemingly prefer the glorification of the American flag to pictures dealing with the life of his own kinsfolk? These are questions which ought to be seriously considered by British manufacturers to whom we naturally turn for an answer. After all, the extension of the British cinematograph trade is a matter in which they should be seriously interested; it is not merely a question of buying and selling, of business pure and simple, but one of patriotism, and we somewhat curiously await a reply.

THE SILENT EMPIRE

"You must see it—You can't hear it."

—with one movement—perfect alignment of light condenser, mask, lens and shutter — The Fixed Optical Centre of the SILENT EMPIRE —an exclusive patented feature.

WHEN masking the film in the gate, the arc, the condenser, the picture mask, the lens, and the shutter, are raised and lowered simultaneously, thus always maintaining the correct optical alignment. It should be noted that the shutter moves with the lens. This is of the utmost importance, as ghost and flicker is therefore impossible.

Ask your operator if this is not an advantage, and if it does not promote the best results on the screen—always.

TRADE TOPICS.

The Kinema Exclusive Company are giving a Trade show of their latest exclusive, "Mons. Lecoq, Detective: The Tragedy at the Pepper Box Inn," at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., to-morrow (Friday), at 11 o'clock.

We had a very interesting little chat one day last week with Mr. R. A. Ferguson, the daring young cinematographer whose recent exploit—filming the arrival of the King and Queen at Calais Harbour from an aeroplane—was so extensively commented upon by the Press. The enterprise was arranged by the proprietors of The Sphere newspaper, Mr. Oswald Stoll, of the Coliseum, and the Warwick Trading Company, to whose staff Mr. Ferguson is permanently attached, and the films, which were taken in mid-air over Calais at noon, were shown five hours later to a wildly enthusiastic audience at the Coliseum, having been brought to England by aeroplane in record time by Mr. Hucks, the well-known aviator, in whose machine Mr. Ferguson ascended.

MR. R. A. FERGUSON with his Aeroscope Camera.

To the bioscope journalist everything comes as a matter of course, and it was with some difficulty that we induced Mr. Ferguson to talk of his aerial adventures, which he regarded merely as an ordinary incident in his daily round.

"We started at 11 o'clock," he told us, "and we were in the air exactly one hour. We followed in the track of the Royal yacht as closely as possible, but the great difficulty from my point of view lay in the speed at which we travelled. We flew high to begin with, and then circled down to within 200 ft. above the yacht. It was very hard to keep the object in view on account of the circling and banking of the aeroplane, and but for the wonderful 'Aeroscope'—the camera which has practically revolutionised topical cinematography—I do not think I should have secured much of a picture. The 'Aeroscope,' however, makes quite easy all sorts of things which would be otherwise impossible with the ordinary tripod camera, and we have some very big things in view, especially in connection with aerial cinematography."

"Other experiences?" And Mr. Ferguson laughed modestly, as though disclaiming any pretensions to adventures more strange than those of other men. "Well, one naturally comes in for some rather curious situations in the course of one's work, but I don't know that I have many stories worth telling. I took some pictures from a hydroplane the other day—sitting on one of the floats and nearly getting bumped off by the waves, besides being thoroughly drenched for my pains.

"Yes, there is tremendous competition among camera men at some public functions. I've seen as many as twenty-four cinematograph operators all trying to get the same picture. The 'Aeroscope' is a tremendous advantage at this sort of work, both on account of its superior results and for the reason that 'Aeroscope' men will often be admitted with the ordinary Press photographers when men with tripods will be excluded.

"What are the prospects for cinematographers? For some men the prospects are great, but these men are few and far between. It is necessary to have had dark-room experience to begin with, and afterwards quick judgment and the ability to act promptly are essentials. In topical work you have to get your picture when the thing happens, or you don't get it at all. You can't have ceremonies rehearsed or repeated."

The Newcastle-upon-Tyne Education Committee some months ago appointed a Juvenile-Employment Officer, to advise children on leaving school as to possible channels of employment, and to follow up the scholars with a view to preventing "blind alley" employment. The officer (Mr. Milstead) has just issued his first report, and in it he makes some very gratifying observations upon the employment of boys and girls in picture theatres. After commenting upon the number of juveniles who find employment in the Trade, he remarks that during the present quarter the Juvenile Employment Department had been asked for and had supplied twelve boys to one picture theatre. Mr. Milstead observes that it is often supposed that this type of occupation is improper for boys, and adds that he has personally investigated each case. "I find," he writes, "that in every case the manager or manageress is a gentleman or lady competent to have charge of young boys or girls, and at least as solicitous for their welfare as the parents of the children themselves. Such managers will only entertain applications from children of respectable parentage. The nature of the employment is thoroughly disciplinary, and calls for the exercise of the most desirable qualities, such as punctuality, personal care in dress and hygiene, prompt and respectful speech, honesty, obedience, and initiative. In one establishment where the full complement of boys is to be about twelve, they are to be looked after by an ex-Army man as well as by the manager, and they will receive daily instruction in physical training suited to their physique and the season of the year. They will receive one day's holiday per week, and after one year's satisfactory service will be granted one week's holiday on full pay, and after two years' service they will be entitled to two weeks' annual leave on full pay. Every boy engaged will be comparatively certain of permanent employment, subject to his ability and conduct being satisfactory. Those who show aptitude in the direction of electrical work will be trained in general electrical engineering with a view to their becoming cinema operators, with charge of the electrical plant of a cinema theatre if they choose to remain, and those who wish to serve an apprenticeship elsewhere are assisted by means of a reliable reference and by being put in touch with employers."

With regard to girls, the report states, managers are themselves fully aware of the dangers to young girls that may exist even in the most respectable and well-conducted establishments, and for this reason they do not employ young girls as a rule, preferring to employ only those of more mature age. Any younger girls asked for by these managers are required usually for the kitchens of the café or refreshment part of the establishment, where the conditions will, as a rule, compare with the best in the city.

At the April meeting of the Dramatic Sub-Committee of the Authors' Society, as reported in the current issue of The Author, the formation of the Joint Board was fully discussed. The Secretary reported that the following associations had already appointed delegates:—The Incorporated Society of Kinematograph Manufacturers, the Society of West-end Theatre Managers, the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Touring Managers' Association. He had not heard definitely from the Entertainments Protection Association and the Incorporated Association of Film Renters, as these two bodies were awaiting meetings of their respective committees. He hoped, however, to receive the names of their delegates in a few days. It was resolved that the Authors' Society should be represented on the Joint Board by its Dramatic Sub-Committee. It was decided to call a meeting of the Joint Board for Thursday, May 14th, when the future working of the Board would be fully discussed.

The second session of the attendance of private schools of Balham at the screening of educational subjects at Pyke's Cinematograph Theatre opened on Tuesday. In consequence of what has been stated elsewhere, it is necessary to again observe that this pioneer work in London in the use of educational films is not at present in any way connected with the London County Council schools. The establishments concerned are all private schools. The promoters of this innovation in education methods are indebted to Mr. J. Thom, the manager of the theatre, for an improvement in the manner of showing the films. Last session eight classes attended at intervals between 9.30 and 1 o'clock. The present method is for the boys of each school to view the pictures between 9.30 and 10.30, the next hour being for the girls' schools. Lectures on the subjects screened are given at each school by teachers a day or so before the pictures are exhibited, and after seeing them the scholars write essays. The films are from the house of Pathé, and the subjects dealt with on Tuesday were as follow: — Boys: Electricity, Pompeii, Hemp Growing in New Zealand, Why You Should Kill That Fly, Gleanings from the Harvest of the Sea, The Chaffinch. Girls: Insect-eating Plants, The Axolott, Carbonic Acid Gas, Hemp Growing in New Zealand, Why You Should Kill That Fly, Snow and Ice, Gleanings from the Harvest of the Sea. The attendance at the theatre is now fortnightly instead of weekly, the reason apparently being that the length of the programme requires greater time to enable it to be dealt with in the classrooms.

We are informed that the South African Government has imposed a duty of 5s. per 100 ft. on finished film brought into that country. The tax only recently came into force, and involves a very heavy cost to the African Film Trust. As many of the firm's contracts extend over two or three years, the company will have to bear the entire brunt of the impost. The amusement tax of 10 per cent. on the net profits of picture theatres is at present confined to Cape Colony.

In connection with the special command performance of the Captain Scott Expedition pictures at Buckingham Palace on Tuesday, all the installation arrangements were carried out by Mr. Will Day, to whom we tender our very hearty congratulations.

In connection with the appeal of Mr. Arthur Pearson on behalf of the blind, it gives us great pleasure to record the splendid result of a public collection made at various theatres on the Albany Ward Circuit and among the staff, whereby Mr. Ward was enabled to forward a cheque for £148 18s. 9d. to the fund. Mr. Ward, it may be said, added a bonus of 100 per cent. on the gross collection from the staffs. It is surely worthy of record that, within a period of a little over two years, the circuit and staff have contributed nearly £1,200 to various funds, including those raised for the relief of the sufferers in the Senghenydd Colliery disaster, the Scott and Titanic funds, etc. It is a magnificent record, and one to be truly proud of.

With such a variety of old legends now produced in the form of moving pictures, it seems more than strange that what is probably the most ancient of all love tragedies should have, up to now, passed unnoticed, notwithstanding the fact that its reminder is one of the most everyday objects of domestic life. However, the omission is soon to be remedied, and the end of this month will see the release of the Edison production, "The Story of the Willow Pattern." We hear that the ancient Chinese legend has been most charmingly reproduced, and is replete with the quaint Oriental atmosphere befitting the well-known subject.

On Tuesday morning last a Trade show was given at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, by J. D. Walker's World's Films, Ltd., of their two latest pictures, "Tessibel of the Storm Country" and "Excelsior." A review of the former delightful film, which was received by a crowded house with extraordinary enthusiasm, appears elsewhere in our present issue. We shall hope to deal with "Excelsior," which is an elaborate spectacular production, next week.

A call at the offices of Film Preservatives in Wardour Street, W., the other day revealed quite a busy scene, and we were pleased to have the opportunity of a further inspection of the process and to note its effects upon some films which had been very badly scratched by the users. The process is certainly an admirable solution to many aspects of the expression "bad copies," and we were shown, in proof of the value of the treatment, a film which, it was said, had been in constant use for four months, and was quite as good as new. The firm have a very extensive plant, and are, moreover, in the happy position of having a large number of repeat orders as a proof of satisfaction to clients.

At a meeting of the Durham City Council a discussion took place upon the desirability of there being appointed a Government censorship of films. The discussion arose upon a resolution that had been passed by the Scarborough Watch Committee and forwarded to the Council for their support. The Council decided to support the resolution, the effect of which was an expression of opinion that the time had arrived when, in view of the fact that cinematograph exhibitions are largely attended by children, a Government censorship of films should be established.

Another step forward in the direction of educational matinées for public schools is recorded from the Milnrow district of Rochdale. By a resolution passed at the recent monthly meeting of the Rochdale Education Committee, the managers of the Milnrow Council school are enabled to close the schools upon certain occasions at an early hour in order to allow the children and teachers to attend special displays at the Milnrow Empire. The proposal aroused considerable discussion in the first place, but the words of the various speakers were remarkable for a good deal of sensible appreciation of the possibilities of the new mode of education, and the proposal was carried with an additional proviso that the school managers also attend the matinées. The Chairman (Mr. Edward Taylor, C.C.) and the Rev. T. W. Wareham spoke in terms of praise as to the possibilities of the lessons to be taught by the innovation.

A remarkable amount of interest still continues to be manifested in the admirable cinema lectures given by Mr. Herbert Ponting at the Philharmonic Hall. The Captain Scott Expedition will long be remembered for its heroism, and Mr. Ponting is fully deserving of praise for the very excellent pictures taken during his journey. When it is mentioned that the representations are now nearing their second centenary, it will be acknowledged that this event in the world of pictorial entertainment is receiving a well-deserved and influential support.

We hear that a recent "deal" in exclusive rights has resulted in L. and Y. Films, Limited, acquiring the sole rights for the United Kingdom of a three-reel production based upon the late Robert Louis Stevenson's famous "Treasure

QUAD-CROWN.

When he loses his fortune, Donald Baxter, a young broker, soon discovers that his fiancee, Helen Porter, entertains little regard for him. Stung by her indifference, Baxter resolves to "come back," and leaves for the Klondike goldfields. At the end of five years he succeeds in making a "clean up" and returns to his home town incognito.

Although he buys back the old family home, Baxter manages to convey the impression that his valet Hawkins is the "Klondike millionaire." Hawkins is supplied with plenty of money to enter society.

Mrs. Porter and her scheming daughter are not long in seeking out the supposedly wealthy Klondiker, and Hawkins is made quite uncomfortable by their attentions. Baxter, meanwhile, meets Mabelle Arnold, the ward of the Porters, and a pretty love affair devolops.

Eventually of course, Baxter's true status is disclosed, and Hawkins is dropped like a hot coal by Mrs. Porter and her daughter. Helen Porter is much chagrined when she learns that the family ward, Mabelle Arnold, has captured the prize of the local matrimonial market. Mabelle and Baxter, however, are too much wrapped up in their own happiness to notice the envy of Mrs. Porter and her shallow-pated daughter.

Island." They have, indeed, in this feature, captured a picture which has "a name to conjure with."

On Friday next, we are informed, Messrs. Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford will arrive in England, whither they are bringing a large company of players to produce for the Famous Players Company a number of important films, including "The Silver King," "The Eternal City," "Monsieur Beaucaire," and the pick of the Charles Frohman series.

The end of the present week will witness the departure of Mr. Albert Clozenburg for the States, where he will undertake a tour of some six to nine months' duration in search of fresh conquests for Ruffells Exclusives, Limited. We wish Mr. Clozenburg a pleasant voyage, feeling sure that he will make many new friends, both for himself and for his firm.

Congratulations to Thanhouser Films, Limited, upon the enlarged issue of their admirable house organ. Although only commenced in November, increasing business has brought about a relative increase in the proportions of the firm's "Topics."

Mr. Walter Clarke, late managing director of the International Film Supply Company, of Johannesburg, is due to arrive in this country per the Balmoral Castle on Tuesday next. Mr. Clarke is, of course, a well-known and respected member of the South African film trade.

According to popular report, the "bombarding" of the picture player by the private correspondent still goes merrily on, and some of our leading players now have to devote a by no means inconsiderable portion of their time to the answering of letters of advice and loving missives. We have just been favoured with a glance at one, which does not, however, come under the latter category, in which a fair reader asks our friend Pimple's advice, and whether all artistes get run over by various vehicles of locomotion or really fall from aeroplanes. We regret that we cannot afford space for Pimple's reply, but note that he is quite candid over his exploits in replying to question No. 1, "Are all your plays comedies or not?" giving his wife's opinion in confirmation. A further reference to American War scenes in the Wilds of Wigan closes a very amusing epistle.

A very curious position has arisen in connection with the trade-mark of the Balboa Film Company of America. The design selected by the United States Government for the new 1 cent stamp, bears, it is alleged, a striking resemblance to the Balboa trade-mark. It is certainly a novelty for a producing firm to complain against the Government of its own country.

We read in our contemporary, L'Illustrazione Cinematografica, of Milan, that the total number of plays entered for the Cines Competition was 912.

THE BIOSCOPE "Educational Supplement" will be published with the next issue of THE BIOSCOPE. It will deal with all matters concerning the application of the cinematograph to education, and it is hoped that its success will be such as to justify our making it a regular monthly feature of our paper. The supplement will have an extended circulation amongst school teachers and educationists, as well as the ordinary circulation with this journal.

Interesting evidence was given by Mr. Hedley Smith, of Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited, at a meeting of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, dealing with the London County Council, City of London and Glasgow Corporation Bills, regarding the use of "safety" films. Mr. Smith stated that the general adoption of non-flam films would lead to the use of the cinematograph in places where the use of celluloid film was at present deemed imprudent; further, it would be a great advantage to the film industry. In cross-examination, Mr. Smith denied that the life of a non-flam film was comparatively short, and produced a "safety" film which he said had been in constant use for five months.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

The Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, last week began its summer season of "pictures" under the supervision of Mr. Sydney Thornton, who has had considerable experience in the world of entertainment. The opening week proved exceedingly satisfactory, and there was a long and varied programme, in which "Jim, the fireman," was the feature drama. "The Third String" caused great amusement. Shows will be given twice nightly, except on Fridays, when there will be one performance only, commencing at 7.30 p.m. The programme submitted at the Grand Electric, Middlesbrough, fully upheld the theatre's reputation. "The Grip of Circumstances" and "Her Hand" were the two leading dramas.—At the Hippodrome, "Outwitted by a Child" proved a splendid attraction. The matinées at the Hippodrome continue to attract attention, and arrangements have been made for a children's beauty competition.—The three halls at Stockton had big features during the week and excellent business was done. At the Royal Cinema the anticipations concerning "Spartacus" were more than justified. The film had been widely advertised, and the phrase "See Naples and die, see 'Spartacus' and Wonder" caught on wonderfully well. "Joan of Arc" was popularly received at the Globe, where "Master Bob" was also shown.—"Old St. Paul's" excited considerable interest at Darlington, where it was shown at the Court Kinema and the Arcade Cinema. During the latter half of the week "In Peril of the Law" was shown.—The management of the Empire Playhouse featured "The Way of the World." "Stolen Plans" and "Claim Jumper" also contributed to the excellence of the programmes.

The Technical Side of Picture Making.

XII.—APPLIANCES FOR SPECIAL PURPOSES.—STANDARDISATION.

By ARTHUR S. NEWMAN.

There are many other machines used in the making of film pictures, which, in a concise series of articles, it has not been possible to mention. Methods of drying after development and washing have scarcely been alluded to. The ideas concerning the effect of drying film are so various, and so little scientific investigation has been devoted to this point, that it is difficult to say exactly what takes place when a developed film is dried. The subject is a very wide one; quick or slow drying at high or low temperatures producing different effects, different samples of film acting differently under similar conditions. The thickness of the gelatine coating as compared with the thickness of the celluloid also makes a difference, and even the qualities of the celluloid and the gelatine may alter matters somewhat. Drying usually causes shrinkage, but this is not invariably the case. Sometimes, but rarely, a film gauges the same after development and drying as it did when first perforated, and could the secret of this fact be discovered an incalculable amount of trouble would be saved to all who have to deal with film.

The two generally used drying methods are the rotating drum and the hanging frame. In the former the film has to be wound on the drum after the washing is complete; in the latter the film is dried on the same frame on which it is developed and washed. This latter method is favoured by some manufacturers because it saves the handling of the film while wet and liable to injury. Frame drying is liable to take place unevenly, and usually a frame-dried film gauges somewhat unevenly because the straight pieces at the sides of the frame become dry more rapidly than the portions bent round the outside of the frame. A more or less permanent curve is also given to the part of the film in contact with the frame, which, however, partly disappears when the film is rolled up tightly. Hot dry air forced into the drying-room by means of fans much expedites the time required, and for drum drying is not detrimental, but where films are dried on the developing frames very quick drying has a tendency to accentuate uneven shrinkage and to make more lasting the curves produced by the sides of the frame. Machines for printing the manufacturer's name on the edge of the film are sometimes used. A hollow drum contains the light, an incandescent electric bulb—and stencils are pressed through the edges of the drum round which the film is fed. Combined with this is sometimes an attachment for brushing dust or foreign matter which, by adhering to the surface of the emulsion, would cause white spots on the negatives. The brushes for such machines must be kept scrupulously clean. The very slightest trace of oil will do a great amount of damage in a short time, and with some samples of emulsion the pressure must be very slight indeed, or pressure marks will show on development, every single hair leaving its impress, till the supposed remedy becomes far worse than the disease. There is no doubt that the best method of getting rid of dust from the surface is by the vacuum cleaning process—the suction method before described, because the film is not touched except by the rapidly moving air. When film is perforated some time before being printed, the edges often contract somewhat, and the film consequently does not lay flat in the printing machine. To obviate this a machine has been made in which two rollers run on each perforated edge of the film. Pressure is put on the rollers sufficient to crush and expand the edges till the film lays quite flat, or even to cause the edges to become slightly longer than the centre, so that good contact can be easily ensured. Appliances for cleaning the celluloid side of the film to remove the smears left by the chemicals and washing have been used intermittently. When carefully used they are fairly efficient, and much more rapid than hand work, which latter, however, has its advantages, in that the work is under notice foot by foot, and if the first use of the cleaning pad does not remove all smears, a second or a third rub may completely clean the part. A machine can take no note of an extra adherent smear, and will allow the same to pass, and it is not politic to put the film through the machine a second time for fear of causing scratches. When films have passed many times through the projector, especially if they have fallen into the hands of careless operators, a number of vertical scratches often develop. The greater number of these are on the gelatine side, but the celluloid also may show some. These scratches become filled with dust, and appear as black lines on the screen, producing the appearance called "rain." This term must not be confused with another appearance also sometimes called rain, which is due to the incorrect setting of the projector shutter, and

A better term for the latter appearance is "ghost," which it is now usually called. The "black" rain can be much minimised by cleaning the scratched film with petrol; rubbing the film in the direction of the scratches removes most of the dust, and improves matters considerably. Cleaning machines for the renovation of old films have been much used, and with good results. Still better effects are obtained by coating the cleaned film with a solution of celluloid or collodion, by which the scratches are filled up and prevented from collecting a further supply of dust. Special machines, the details of which have been for the most part kept secret, are used with more or less success.

As the industry progresses and becomes more complete in detail, no doubt many other appliances will come into regular use. The want is already felt for a winder which will not require the film to be guided by hand, and which will expeditiously roll the film both tightly and evenly, so that it may not be necessary to pull the end or a roll to tighten it up, nor to knock or press it on a flat surface to make it lie level; both these methods of procedure cause scratches on the film, and make it deteriorate more quickly than need be. A quick and automatic means of making a true, clean and sound joint would also be welcomed.

There is a subject of the utmost importance to the industry, which to the present time has been shamefully neglected; standardisation of some of the more important measurements ought to be at once attended to, and an international agreement as to correct sizes arrived at.

So-called standard width for film has varied during the last few years, less certainly in later times than formerly. Originally, in "Kinetoscope" times, before the picture was thrown on a screen, the film width was 1⅜ ins. In the first days of the bioscope several sizes, mostly greater than 1⅜ ins., obtained in a fitful style, but gradually the Edison Kinetograph width gained the greatest following. As time went on, and Continental firms increased their business, the film width became known by metric measurement as 34.8 millimeters. Occasionally 35 mm. width was met with, and now bids fair to become the standard width. It does not matter which size is ultimately adopted as long as one size is adhered to. Of the troubles caused by the varying width I need not speak—they are already too well known. Wide film jamming in the gates of cameras, printers and projectors made for narrow film, and pictures with a side movement due to the play when narrow film was used in gates intended for the wide film, were of common occurrence three or four years ago. The trouble has been much reduced by making special provision in the gates to accommodate varying widths, but the printing machine cannot easily be arranged to work well when printing from a wide negative to a narrow positive and vice-versâ. The gauge or step of the perforation—i.e., the distance between the centre of one hole to the centre of the next following in the direction of the length of the film—has also varied to some extent, with the result that manufacturers, showmen, and the public have often suffered disappointment from a small matter which ought to have had attention at the very inception of the industry. The size and shape of the perforations and the distance between their centres, measuring across the film, is of utmost importance to smooth working in the field, the studio, the factory, and the theatre alike, and yet after fifteen years' fairly continuous run there is still no agreed standard! The variation which has taken place in these measurements is so great that a collection of films must be seen to be believed. Nowadays there is not so much variation as formerly, but considerable variety still exists. It is remarkable that a large industry, founded upon accurate manipulation and definite measurement, one which is dependent for its results upon so many highly scientific processes, can have been so long in existence, have developed to such colossal proportions, and still have its interchangeable commodity not definitely standardised. The trouble, vexation, and expense which have been incurred during the term of its life are quite incalculable. Still it proceeds on its way apparently oblivious of the one thing that would make work more easy and certain for all, and would not act detrimentally on a single individual. A general trend in the direction of standard film width and perforation has been the outcome of a sea of troubles, and we are slowly progressing towards finding out what is the right thing merely by having done first all that is wrong. By the gradual elimination of unsuitable perforation we have arrived at a working size—more or less—but as yet there is no generally accredited standard.

Many other sizes also ought to be standardised, as, for instance, the thickness of the positive and negative films; the thickness runs fairly evenly nowadays, but there is no standard. Now that there is so much interchange of kinematograph film between different countries, it is quite likely that film manufactured in America may be exposed in Australia, developed in England, printed in France, and used on a projector in China; and because we have no standard to which to work, some, if not all, of the machines through which our hypothetical picture passes may be unsuitable to deal in the best manner with the film in question. Surely it is high time manufacturers woke up to the importance of film and machine standardisation.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

FROM MERSEY CITY.

A popular member of the Trade, Mr. R. Andre Byland, of the Premier Theatre, Smithdown Road, Liverpool, is usually to the fore in the organisation of charity performances. We hear that he has recently concluded a special three days' show for a leading organisation in the Mersey city, and was congratulated upon excellent results for the cause in question. His leading stars at the Premier this week are "Gem of India" and Edison's "Gunmaker of Moscow."

FEATURES FOR THE WEST.

We are in receipt of information to the effect that Messrs. Hibberts, of 76, Victoria Street, Bristol, have just been appointed agents for West of England (districts south of Wales) for "The Two Bushmen" and "Trapped in the Mine," both X.L. exclusives. The Enterprise Cinema Supplies, of Manchester, report especially good business with "The Two Bushmen," which will be accorded special publicity in a popular weekly contemporary. In addition, special posters are being issued by X.L. in conjunction with the journal, thereby ensuring an exceptional display for exhibitors.

CHIEF CONSTABLE'S APPROVAL.

In the light of recent legislation the following will be read with interest. In the course of his annual report the Chief Constable of Blackpool refers to the influence of cinema exhibitions on children. It is said, he remarks, that some children stole money for admission and were becoming disinclined for steady work and effort. He ventured to suggest that were any statistics available on the subject, cinematograph exhibitions would only be accountable for a very small percentage of juvenile crime. If they thought of excluding children from the cheap and entertaining pastime of watching pictures they must consider what they would do instead. When they were satisfied that their homes and the street corners they frequented were healthier morally and physically and more comfortable than picture halls, then let the children be excluded by all means; but he was inclined to regard the suggested cure as worse than the malady.

CROYDON RESTRICTIONS.

The question whether restrictions as regards the attendance of children and other matters shall be imposed on the cinematograph theatres of Croydon came before the Town Council at its May meeting, when the following report from the General Purposes Committee was adopted: "The committee have had under careful consideration the proposal made by the Education Committee to impose further regulations and conditions upon licences granted under the Cinematograph Act, which proposal was referred by the Council to this committee for consideration and report. The committee have received a deputation from the cinematograph theatre proprietors of the borough and have considered their representations, and are informed that the validity of the regulations already made in other towns is shortly to be tested in the Courts. The committee therefore recommend that further consideration of the matter should be postponed until the September meeting of the Council."

MELTON MEMS.

Mr. J. E. Cox placed a good programme before large audiences at the Thorpe End Palace last week-end, "The Colonel's Wife" proving especially attractive.—At the King's Picture House, "The Sea's Recompense" accounted for good business. This week's stars are "Stolen Identity" and "In the Coils of a Python."

"PROTEA" AS A "SERIAL."

We learn from Mr. Ratisbonne, of Eclair House, that "Protea II" is to appear in story form in the pages of Pluck, one of the Harmsworth group of publications. Exhibitors wishing to have further particulars are advised to write to the Editor, Fleetway House, Farringdon Street, E.C.

THE "INDOMITABLE."

Through a correspondent's error in a recent report it was stated that at the Picture Playhouse, Hammersmith, another make of projector was in use. The oversight obviously calls for rectification, and we must give credit to the "Indomitable" projector, supplied by the Tyler Apparatus Company, Limited, for the very fine picture noted at this theatre.

GLASGOW MANAGERS' OUTING.

The hard-worked managers and operators of the Glasgow theatres are to have a day at the coast, a trip to beautiful Rothesay having been arranged for Sunday, May 31st. A steamer has been chartered to convey the party, which is expected to muster about 300, to the Isle of Bute, and the fare has been fixed at 3s. Tickets and full particulars can be obtained from Mr. P. J. Bradley, 90, Thistle Street, Garnethill, Glasgow.

SOLE RIGHTS SECURED.

When the directors of the Cinema House, Benfield Street, secured the sole rights for Glasgow of the "Kinoplastikon" process they provided Manager Burdette with an excellent attraction. Since the first performance seats have been at a premium, and patrons have in some cases gone the length of asserting that they were not pictures but real artistes. The installation has been a costly one, but is proving a good investment, and the clients of Cinema House are loud in their praise of the innovation.

LARGEST IN UNIVERSE.

A huge new factory has just been opened, after some months of construction work, by the Industrial Moving Picture Company, of Chicago, and the immense floor space is so laid out that the perforating and printing, along with the handling of negatives follow on in logical sequence. This company is the first to specialise in industrial moving pictures and commenced operations four years ago, being launched by Messrs. Carl Laermule, R. H. Cochrane and W. R. Rothacher, the latter gentleman recently succeeding Mr. Laermule as president. The developing and printing rooms are among the largest in the country, while the drying room has a capacity of 100,000 ft. of film. A fine private theatre, equipped with Simplex projectors, enables the inspection of all releases, these being devoted to a large and rapidly increasing clientèle among business firms, transport agencies and various tourist centres.

TRADE NOTICE.

We have been asked to state that neither Mr Kimberley, managing director of Thanhouser Films, Limited, nor any member of the staff, is in any way concerned in the Kimberley Producing Company, located in the North of England.

A LINE FROM GRAYS.

Mr. Miller, who controls affairs at the Grays Empire, owned by Frederick's Electric Theatres, Limited, is doing excellent business with "The Battle of Manila," and crowded houses are invariably the rule.—A new cinema has been opened at Grays, seating about 500.

PIMPLE IN A NEW ROLE.

Last Saturday, at Chiswick, Joe Evans, brother of Fred Evans ("Pimple"), was married to Miss L. Maxwell. Both Joe and Miss Maxwell are members of the Phœnix-Pimple company of players, well-known out Twickenham way. We hear that Mr. F. Evans gave a present which was both ornamental and useful, plus his blessing.

ADDITIONS ADVISED.

In consequence of increased business, it has been found necessary for Messrs. Davison's Film Sales Agency to get to work upon the provision of an additional private theatre for the convenience of their numerous customers. Visitors are thereby to be assured that there will be "no waiting" in future for shows at the Wardour Street premises.

EXCLUSIVES.

Mr. H. W. Townsend, of the Feature Supply Company, Limited, informs us that his company has just taken up two exclusives. Another special, "Her Secret Oath," is to be released almost immediately. Mr. Townsend also informs us that their other exclusive, "Love, the Victor," is going remarkably well, and that several big things may be expected from this company in the future.

FAVOURABLE COMMENTS ON FILM.

The Norfolk Territorial Association, on Saturday last, had under discussion the use of the cinematograph in connection with Army life as a medium for recruiting. The chairman, Sir Ailwyn E. Fellowes, K.C.V.O., speaking upon the effect of the British Army film, said wherever the film had been exhibited it had given a decided stimulus to recruiting. Last week he saw the film and he was bound to say it was very fine. During the coming autumn and winter some new films were to be produced, and he had been authorised to enter into negotiations to have exhibitions in Norwich and the principal towns in the county, so as to aid recruiting still further.

MOVEMENTS AT MORECAMBE.

The new owners of the Royalty Theatre, under the managing directorship of Mr. C. Hamilton Baines and the resident managership of Mr. Ernest Price, have quickly emulated the example of their predecessors, Messrs. Burgess, a week of pictures being followed by either a vaudeville, play, or opera. The choice of films for the first week under the new control was a good one, "The Burning Train" being one of the leading lines.—At the Alhambra "The Inheritance of Remi Daubrais" met with a tremendous response.—Mr. Howson's cosy White Hall at the West-end is closed for the present, as is also the Tower Theatre.—Messrs. Broadhead have resumed pictures at the Winter Gardens after a break in consequence of the great hall being used for the Morecambe Musical Festival.

SEEN AT ST. HELENS.

The Picturedrome continues to do good business under the management of Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—Last week the Empire Theatre, Shatto Heath, which is managed by Mr. Blatford, provided a week of comedy pictures for its patrons. For the first three evenings the star picture was "Jerry's Ma-in-law."—A big star programme was presented at Griffin's, "The Lure of Gold" and "The Streets of New York" taking well with the many patrons.—Mr. Teale, the new manager of the Parrvillion, is making good headway with his patrons,and last week's programme went well, "Branscombe's Pal" and "The Water War" being the stars.

DOINGS AT DERBY.

There is hardly a place of amusement in Derby where pictures do not form an important item on the programme. At the Grand last week the excellent film of the Cup Final was received with much enthusiasm.—At the Victoria Palace, "Eileen of Erin," "Max, the New Butler" and "Wings of Death" were the chief items last week, and Mr. F. T. Studd is featuring this week "A Tragedy of the Clouds."—Particular interest attached to the film showing Mr. Gustav Hamel's recent visit to Derby, and the scenes shown at the Babington Lane Picture House last week were remarkably clear. "I Will Avenge" and "The Great Murdoch Trial" are the leading lines this week.—Mr. J. M. Allen has a faculty for "knowing what appeals" at the Normanton Picture House, and large crowds were well pleased with the fare provided. "The God of Girzah" and "In the Dredger's Claw" are this week's stars.—At the Alexandra Mr. F. Walker did big things last week with "Greater Love Hath No Man." "Cora, the Temptress" and "Unjustly Accused" are this week's specials.—Mr. J. H. Pearman, manager of the Cosy Picture House, secured the sole rights for, and good houses enjoyed, "A Wrecker of Lives," followed later in the week by "Victory."—The music discoursed at the various houses in Derby is of a very high order, and the various "picture newspapers" are features at almost every house.

THANET TOPLINES.

At all the houses along the coast business is exceptionally good. Large numbers at Ramsgate have availed themselves of the opportunity of witnessing "Antony and Cleopatra," secured by Mr. Bert Parker for the Queen's. "Kissing Cup" was also responsible for full houses and was much appreciated. "The Uncanny Mr. Gumble" was a pleasing comedy.—Mr. Reg. V. Crow provided an exceptional programme at the King's, every item being well received.—Mr. G. W. Attack had a successful week at the Royal Palace, "Hearts and Flowers" and "Peggy's Invitation" proving big attractions. A welcome addition to the programme was the illustrated song, "Two Little Orphans" by Mr. Geo. Attack.—"Taking of Rattlesnake Bill" was the star at Shanly's.—"The Great Python Robbery," "Chelsea 7750" and "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" were responsible for good audiences at the Cinema, Broadstairs.—Much interest is always shown in the excellent fare provided at the Parade, Margate. "Chelsea 7750" and "An Hour Before Dawn" were followed with keen attention by large audiences.—Mr. C. W. Ellis is doing well at the Clifton Cinema, and keen approval was expressed of "Tragedy of Big Eagle Mine" and "Tale of a Lonely Coast."—The long film is popular with patrons of the Lounge, Cliftonville, "Antony and Cleopatra" being a big success. "Kelly from the Emerald Isle" and "According to Seniority" were chief films for the latter part of the week.—"Darling of the Regiment" and "Secret of the Black Mask" were chief features at the Town Hall, Westgate.

APPEARING IN COMMAND PERFORMANCE.

The many friends of Mr. Henry de Solla, manager of the Angel Picture Theatre, Islington, will be interested to learn that he appears in the character of "Tubbs" at the Royal command performance of "The Silver King" at His Majesty's Theatre on May 22nd.

REOPENING.

We are informed that the American and Continental Film Company, after a brief spell of rest from their labours, are reopening on the spacious premises at 166 and 168, Shaftesbury Avenue, W. Arrangements have been made whereby Film d'Art, Mono and Minerva films will be issued from this address.

A WELCOME RETURN.

A Lancashire correspondent informs us that Mr. J. W. C. Knight has had a hearty welcome to Farnworth on returning to again take up the management of the King's Hall. This week he is featuring Hepworth's "Blind Fate," and the Jewish drama "Sorrows of Israel" to splendid business at the busy Irwellside town.

SPECIAL FROM BRADFORD.

We are requested by the Imperial Animated Picture Company to state that Thorpe's Chambers, Hustlegate, Bradford, is their only address in that city. Owing to the magnitude of the work involved in our latest issue of the "Bioscope Annual" there were a few unavoidable errors, and our Bradford friends above were among the sufferers.

ANOTHER ADVERTISING AID.

Exhibitors who run the Betty Nansen features will be pleased to hear that the Ideal Film Renting Company, Limited, are now supplying a unique series of photogravure postcards of the famous actress in various poses. These can be obtained in packets of three at a phenomenally low price per dozen packets, which should allow of a handsome profit on sales in the theatres.

EDISON NEWS.

We are told that a company of Edison players, including Miss May Abbey, Mrs. Wm. Bechtel, Mr. George Lessey, director, and Messrs. Ben Wilson, John Sturgeon and William Bechtel have just sailed for Bermuda, where they will remain for several weeks. This is the third time that Edison's have sent a company to the land of sunshine and flowers, where many of their most beautiful films have been staged.—Miss Mary Fuller has again entered the field of scenario writers with a story of ancient Arabia, entitled "The Princess of the Desert," which Edison's are releasing on July 6th. The leading rôles are filled by the authoress and Marc McDermott.—"The Mystery of the Talking Wire," of "The Chronicles of Cleek," is on view at the Edison showrooms this week and is the most exciting of T. W. Henshew's stories so far issued. Exhibitors should not omit to secure the artistic portrait poster of Ben Wilson ("Cleek"), which is supplied free upon request at Messrs. Edison's Clerkenwell Road offices.—We are informed that the latest date the company can receive orders for "The Necklace of Rameses," their special three-reel release for May 25th, is Monday next.—In view of numerous inquiries the Edison Company request us to give publicity to the fact that the death of Mr. Thomas W. Hanshew will not affect in any way the monthly releases of the "Cleek" pictures. Mr. Hanshew completed all the stories before his demise, and they will, therefore, be produced just as he planned them.

NOVEL POCKET MIRROR.

We have received from the Trans-Atlantic Film Company a surprise in a novel pocket-mirror, which forms an excellent "ad." for the firm. When the mirror is breathed upon, the words "The Best Programme appear upon the surface of the glass.

CANTERBURY CHIMES.

At the Cinema, St. George's, Mr. John H. Wills is happy in excellent audiences, large numbers having witnessed "Antony and Cleopatra" during the week. "Detective Finn" and "The Fatal Legacy" are topliners this week.—"Thor" was a big attraction at the Electric, St. Peter's, and gave entire satisfaction. Mr. Cawse-Morgon has secured "Orders Under Seal" for the first part of this week.

PURCHASED FOR HEALTH CRUSADE.

The Bristol Corporation recently purchased the film, "The Story of John McNeil," which deals with the prevention of consumption, and made arrangements with the managers of the various picture theatres to exhibit it. This they are now doing, competitive theatres including the film in their programme on the same day and thus furthering the excellent objects of the Health Committee.

MOVEMENTS IN MEXICO.

In a letter from Mexico City, M. J. Granat, of Calle de Capuchinas 32, informs us that he has commenced a film-renting establishment and is, under the style of Compania Cinematographia Pathé S. en P., the sole concessionaire for Messrs. Pathé Frères' productions for Mexico. M. Granat desires us to add that he is also in the market for good detective dramas and would be pleased to hear accordingly from producers of these films.

FIRST IN THE PROVINCES.

We are told that the Exchange Film Service, of Piccadilly, Bradford, who are supplying the projecting apparatus for the Victoria Hall, Queensbury, have purchased for the installation a new Jubilee model Ernemann projector. This machine is one of the first three of its kind in the country, and is of the most up-to-date pattern, embodying all the latest devices for ensuring clear projection and safety in running.

POLICE ACT FOR PICTURES.

Some idea of the importance attached by the authorities to the motion picture art is to be gained from an announcement just made by the Reliance and Majestic companies of Los Angeles. Chief Constable Sebastian of that city notified Mr. Cabanne that the entire police force was at his disposal for motion picture purposes, and the producer took immediate advantage of this offer to stage a special police drama, which will show the force at work in all departments. This film will be shown by the New Majestic Company in the near future.

ANOTHER FAMOUS PLAYERS' CAPTURE.

We are told that another famous actress is about to appear in motion pictures in the person of Miss Maude Adams. Under the management of Mr. Daniel Frohman, Miss Adams will reproduce for the Famous Players Company some celebrated rôles, including Peter Pan and Lady Babbie. This adds another name to a list which includes Sarah Bernhardt, Lillie Langtry, Cissie Loftus, Mrs. Fiske, James K. Hackett, John Barrymore, etc., and those film favourites, Miss Mary Pickford and Miss Laura Sawyer. Another artiste just engaged by the Famous Players Company is Mr. Carlyle Blackwell, the popular American actor.

NON FLAM EXPECTED.

At the Dumbarton Sheriff's Court on Friday last, before Sheriff MacDairmid, Robert Dayben was charged with having, in the Masonic Hall, Cumbernauld, allowed inflammable films to be used without the premises being registered for such purposes.—Defendant tended a plea of guilty, and explained that he had a contract for the supply of non-flam films, but 10 ft. of inflammable film, containing titles of the pictures, had been introduced.—A fine of three guineas was imposed.

NEWARK JOTTINGS.

Mr. Boardman fully maintains the high reputation for "programmes par excellence" at the Corn Exchange, and during the Mair Fair has done exceptionally well. "Beauty Unadorned" and "The Great Ocean Catastrophe" were shown last week, the latter appearing on Sunday's programme.—Mr. F. A. Wheeler has featured at the Kinema "The Iron Man" and "A King's Romance," which met with a good reception.—At the Picturedrome, Mr. Hough continues to do well, and the orchestra here, under Mr. Chas. Ashley, is much appreciated.

PROGRESS IN GLASGOW.

During last week, writes our Scottish representative, in the course of looking up the Trade in the city, I visited nearly forty picture theatres and in the majority found that business was once again up to the high average noted during the winter. With the new halls opened, and music-halls, etc., running picture programmes, the number of habitués can be said to have greatly increased; and the fact that many more halls are building, two or three enlarging, and another music-hall and theatre to commence pictures very shortly, proves that directors have not yet formed the opinion that time is ripe to cry "enough."

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

Since the undergraduates have come up, Cambridge cinema proprietors have been doing excellent business. A powerful programme shown at the Playhouse included "The Third String."—The feature at the Empire last week was "When the Earth Trembled" and this week "The Dock Catastrophe" and "The Red Spider" are proving a good thing for Mr. Fred Hawkins.—The Rouge-et-Noir Concert Party are occupying "the boards" at the Palace Rink, and their programme is interspersed by several good films.—At the Electric Theatre Mr. Mortimer continues to exhibit the best of programmes, and his efforts in this direction are greatly appreciated.—The Army film is to be screened at the Playhouse next week.

CAMERAS ON THE CLYDE.

On Sunday last the banks of the river Clyde formed the rendezvous of camera-men from all over the kingdom. The event was the moving of the world's largest liner, the Aquitania, to the Tail of the Bank, Greenock, where the vessel was to moor previous to leaving on Tuesday for Liverpool. The event of a large steamer passing down the Clyde is a daily one, but the national interest taken in the moving of the Aquitania is created by the fact that the task is one of the most difficult ever undertaken by the River Commissioners. To secure topicals of such an event no expense was spared. Special motor-launches were chartered, motor-cars and motor-cycles requisitioned, and one enterprising firm hoisted a camera to the top of the Clydebank Municipal Buildings in order to get a good picture. Almost every picture theatre in the city ordered a copy, and it is safe to say that the pictures were seen on Monday in many of the picture houses of the kingdom. The local firms who had men on the spot were the Bendon Trading Company, Messrs. Green's B.B. Pictures, Limited, Pathé, Gaumont, and other topical producers were also well represented.

CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

The fourth and fifth series of "Fantomas" delighted full houses at the Rectory Hall, Guernsey. In addition to this the facile pen of the film cartoonist went a long way to popularise the entertainment. As was expected, the local football film was as well received at West's Playhouse, Jersey, as in Guernsey, and has produced favourable comment from the local newspapers.—At the Alhambra, "From Out the Flood" and "A Sister's Sacrifice" have been seen by large audiences.—"A Wife's Devotion" and "The Birthday Ring" proved most interesting to audiences at the Opera House, Jersey.—Mr. J. Nisbet, of Guernsey, has just paid a flying visit to London with the object of securing some of the latest subjects for the Rectory Hall.

INTERESTING DERBYSHIRE CASE.

A case of considerable importance recently came before the Heanor (Debyshire) magistrates, who were occupied in hearing a charge against Mr. Robert McCord, manager of the Empire Theatre, Heanor, of opening the theatre on Good Friday in contravention of a certain restriction upon the licence. A similar charge was also made against the proprietors.

Mr. Marshall Freeman defended, and pleaded not guilty, and stated it was obvious that one of the summonses must be bad.—Supt. Walker said if only one summons had been taken out Mr. McCord might have put the responsibility upon the proprietors. If defendant was prepared to accept responsibility one of the summonses would be withdrawn.

Supt. Walker stated that the magistrates had refused to grant Mr. McCord a special licence, but notwithstanding the refusal he opened on Good Friday and gave two performances. No charge for admission was made, but a silver collection was taken.

Cross-examined by Mr. Freeman, Supt. Walker said the magistrates were acting under powers delegated by the County Council, and that three applications were made, two of which were granted.

Mr. Freeman: I want to ask you what is your experience. Does the opening of such places tend to public order or disorder?

Supt. Walker: It depends on the locality.

You were in Ilkeston: did the opening there tend to good order or disorder?—It tended to no disorder.

Sergt. Ordish stated that in company with Constable Godfrey he visited the theatre on Good Friday night and found the ordinary programme going on. He and the constable were well pleased with the programme.

Mr. Freeman: Do you think the young people were better there than in the streets?—Yes, a lot better.

For the defence, Mr. Freeman said the case was of a somewhat exceptional nature. Mr. McCord had felt desirous of bringing the matter to the test. There were questions of law in the case which sooner or later would have to be faced. When other people applied in another part of the Petty Sessional Division the licence was granted, but when Mr. McCord applied he was refused, therefore there was no uniformity of procedure in the division. The magistrates had powers delegated to them, and had a right to exercise those powers so long as they exercised them reasonably, but to single out one man for a refusal was not reasonable treatment.

The Chairman said there had been uniformity of decision as far as that Bench was concerned.

The magistrates retired to consider their decision, and on their return the Chairman intimated they had decided to convict, and the fine would be £10, and costs. The Chairman agreed to state a case for appeal.

The summons against the proprietors of the theatre was then dismissed.

THE WORK OF THE EDISON CO.

The most recent releases of the Thomas A. Edison Company give striking proof of the determination of the firm to relax nothing in its efforts steadily to raise the already high standard of its films in their qualities of production, of acting, of photography, and, above all, in the remarkably wide range of their subject-matter.

SCENE FROM "THE BEAUTIFUL LEADING LADY."

In addition to the many notable adaptations from the greatest works of standard literature the list of authors contributing to the weekly output comprises names which are a sufficient guarantee of the highest class of dramatic invention and literary distinction. This list includes, amongst many others, such well-known writers as Marriott Watson, Booth Parkington, Anne and Bannister Merwin, Mark Swan, and T. W. Hanshew, all names of established reputation in the leading monthly magazines. The plot of a film play is the most important factor in its success, and the continually increasing number of weekly releases must severely test the invention of scenario writers. The Edison Company has never spared pains to secure the best writers, and the result of its enterprise is an unfailing supply of films of striking originality and unending variety.

The finest plot, however, may gain in its presentation, and the same care is invariably shown in the casting and mounting of a play as in the selection of its subject-matter. A notable instance of the thoroughness of the Edison Company's methods was the eminently successful experiment of enrolling a company for the purpose of taking films in England and on the Continent during last summer, and with the addition of a company largely made up of well-known English actors, a series of fine plays was produced, the value of which was enormously increased by the introduction of picturesque localities of world-wide interest.

Another eminently successful instance of Edison enterprise has been the introduction of the serial film, of which "What Happened to Mary" was the pioneer. The reception of this popular series proved so gratifying that it has been followed up by others which bid fair to rival even the fascinating Mary in popular favour. The adventures of Andy Clark, of Cleek, and of Mr. Wood B. Wedd are fully equal in inventiveness and originality to anything which has preceded them, and the interest of each story is greatly increased by the past exploits of the principal characters.

In "The Beautiful Leading Lady," which is the third adventure of Mr. Wood B. Wedd, that susceptible swain follows the example set by Andy, and has a short but full and exciting experience of theatrical life. We have had many very excellent films from the Edison Company burlesquing a certain class of dramatic entertainment, and we need hardly say that Mr. Wadsworth is given full scope to bring out his peculiar style of humour in a play which provokes continuous laughter and still leaves the sentimentalist apparently as far as ever from the fruition of his hopes.

"The Brass Bowl" is a strong drama by Louis Joseph Vance, in which Mr. Ben Wilson plays a fine dual role, appearing as a wealthy young society man and a notorious burglar to whom he bears a striking resemblance. By skilful superimposed printing and the very ingenious use of a "double," the most perfect illusion is created, the two men not only playing a long scene face to face, but engaging in a realistic and deadly struggle. The story, which is intensely exciting, contains a pleasant love interest, and is excellently played by a strong company, headed by Mr. Wilson and Miss Gertrude McCoy.

"With the Eyes of Love" shows how a young girl who has studied the art of lip reading is enabled by its practice to save her lover from a false charge of murder, and to bring the actual culprit to justice. It contains a well-arranged and dramatic court scene, and those members of the audience who like to "see" what the characters in a film drama are saying will be able to follow much of the dialogue with remarkable ease.

The heroine, Alice Elgin, acts as stenographer to an old banker, who is almost deaf. She has taught him lip reading, being an adept herself. Her employer's son, Ned, falls in love with her, and although the old man is secretly pleased with this development he pretends to be angry, and the butler overhears what seems to be a violent quarrel between the two men. That evening burglars enter the house, and the old man, who surprises them, is killed with a heavy cane. On the butler's evidence Ned is arrested and tried for murder. It is during the scene in court that Alice's attention is attracted by the behaviour of two spectators, and her knowledge of lip reading enables her to read enough of their conversation to justify her in giving one of them in charge on suspicion, with the result that her lover is eventually acquitted. It is a somewhat novel idea, and carried out with such ingenuity as to render it plausible, and the amount of the conversation which one can follow will be a matter of interest and surprise to many.

SCENE FROM "WITH THE EYES OF LOVE."

"The Double Shadow" is a drama of intrigue in which a young society leader, having left his affairs in the hands of his business partner, is roused from his apathy by his fiancee, and looking into matters for himself soon finds cause for believing that his partner is not worthy of trust. Rebo, the partner, has been falsifying the books for some time past, but the peculation has been discovered by Plunket, a clerk, who bargains with Rebo for a share in the plunder. The two criminals attempt to outwit each other, and are both watched by Blake. He succeeds in defeating their plans, and then learns that a timely loan which has enabled him to tide over his affairs has been supplied by his fiancee. It is a good drama, and the detective efforts of the three men hold the attention and work up to an effective climax.

"Sophia's Imaginary Visitors" is a pretty little fantasy adapted from Booth Parkington's "Beasley's Christmas Party," in which David Beasley, a middle-aged bachelor of unromantic tendencies, is induced to enter into an elaborate game of "make-believe" with the object of interesting his little niece, Sophia, a delicate and imaginative child. The guests who people his lonely house are real enough to the fancy of the child, but when Beasley, entering thoroughly into the spirit of the game, is seen by his political opponents greeting and shaking hands with invisible guests to an imaginary Christmas party the report gets about that Beasley's faculties are leaving him. An old flame of Beasley's, who had rejected him for his lack of imagination, sees the matter from a different point of view. She realises that a man who can so thoroughly enter into the heart of a child is worthy of serious consideration, and her sympathy qualifies her for admittance as the only material guest at Sophia's party. It is a pretty, fanciful little piece, full of imagination, and is played with delicacy and charm by Miss Miriam Nesbitt, Mr. Marc MacDermott, and little Miss Edna Hamel.

"Courting Betty's Beau" is a sprightly little comedy, while two very excellent farces are supplied in "Love's Young Dream" and "The Missing Twenty-five Dollars."

The Edison films range from sensational drama to extravagant burlesque, but all alike show the same qualities of originality, studious thought and artistic production, which secures for them a distinction entirely their own.

PERSONAL TO THE KIDDIES.

The charming Indian actress of the Kalem Company, Princess Mona Darkfeather, has so many children correspondents that she wishes to return the compliment and is offering an Indian toy prize to children all over the world, together with a signed picture of herself, for the best pen-and-ink, pencil or coloured pictures representing her as an Indian maiden. The pictures should be sent to Princess Mona Darkfeather, care of 1,446, Bellevue Avenue, Los Angeles, California, together with a personal letter giving the age of the writer. A special likeness is not required in every case so long as a certain amount of talent is displayed by the young friends of the actress.

HALIFAX HINTS.

Nothing further has transpired since the special meeting of the Halifax licensing authorities, when Mr. Arthur Willey appeared for the exhibitors of the district, and asked for the deletion of Clause 10 in the new regulations. It was pointed out by the Magistrate's Clerk that the application could not be dealt with then, as the regulations had been passed by the whole of the Justices, and so it was arranged that Mr. Willey would write to him fully on the matter, and he (the clerk) would convene a meeting of the justices to consider the question.

Good business has been the rule at the Electric Theatre, Ward's End. "The Devil's Deciple" and "The Murdoch Trial" proved to be great attractions. For the current week, Mr. Leslie Stansfield has secured "The Man of Destiny" and "Love and Dynamite" as his top-liners. Mr. Stansfield informs me of a beauty competition for children, to take place at the Electric from May 25th to May 30th, the winners to be decided by the votes of the audience. Handsome prizes are to be offered, and this scheme should prove a success.

Mr. Harmsworth, manager of the Theatre de Luxe, Northgate, has been giving his patrons some exceedingly good programmes lately, and they have been deservedly appreciated by the large audiences which have been in evidence. The projection of "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" was well received. This week "Truth will Out" tops the bill. At the recent sitting of the justices of Halifax, the management of the Northgate house were successful in their application for opening on Sunday evening for the use of a certain local society giving lectures and services weekly.

It is pleasing to note that attendances are keeping up well at the New Palladium, King Cross. It is indeed a pleasure to sit in this splendidly appointed building and witness the excellent programmes shown. Mr. Job spares no pains in endeavouring to give his patrons exactly what they want. Good houses will always be assured when the selection of the films is so excellent. "The Antique Brooch" proved a "winner" last week, and for the first three nights of this week "Thor" is being screened. For the latter part, "Treasures on Earth" will hold premier position.

I am informed that the Albert Theatre, Brighouse, which has during the winter been given over to "legitimate" and variety entertainments, is to be opened next week with an all-picture programme, to be continued during the summer months.

The Ideal, Raglan Street, still continues to attract large audiences, and Mr. Reg Watson, the manager, is to be congratulated on the exceptionally strong bill-of-fare at this popular house.

One is always assured of a tip-top programme at the Gem, Crossley Street, and the fare provided last week was quite up to the usual high standard associated with this favourite house. "The Flame of Vengeance" proved to be a film of great interest. On Wednesday last, and for the rest of the week, an important series dealing with the traffic of worn out horses was screened. This has been given by arrangements with the R.S.P.C.A. Needless to say, this film caused a considerable amount of attention. The King Cross Picturedrome still enjoys popularity, and included in the programme this week are "The Invaders" and "Romance of Old Brittany."

THE BRIGHTON HALLS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

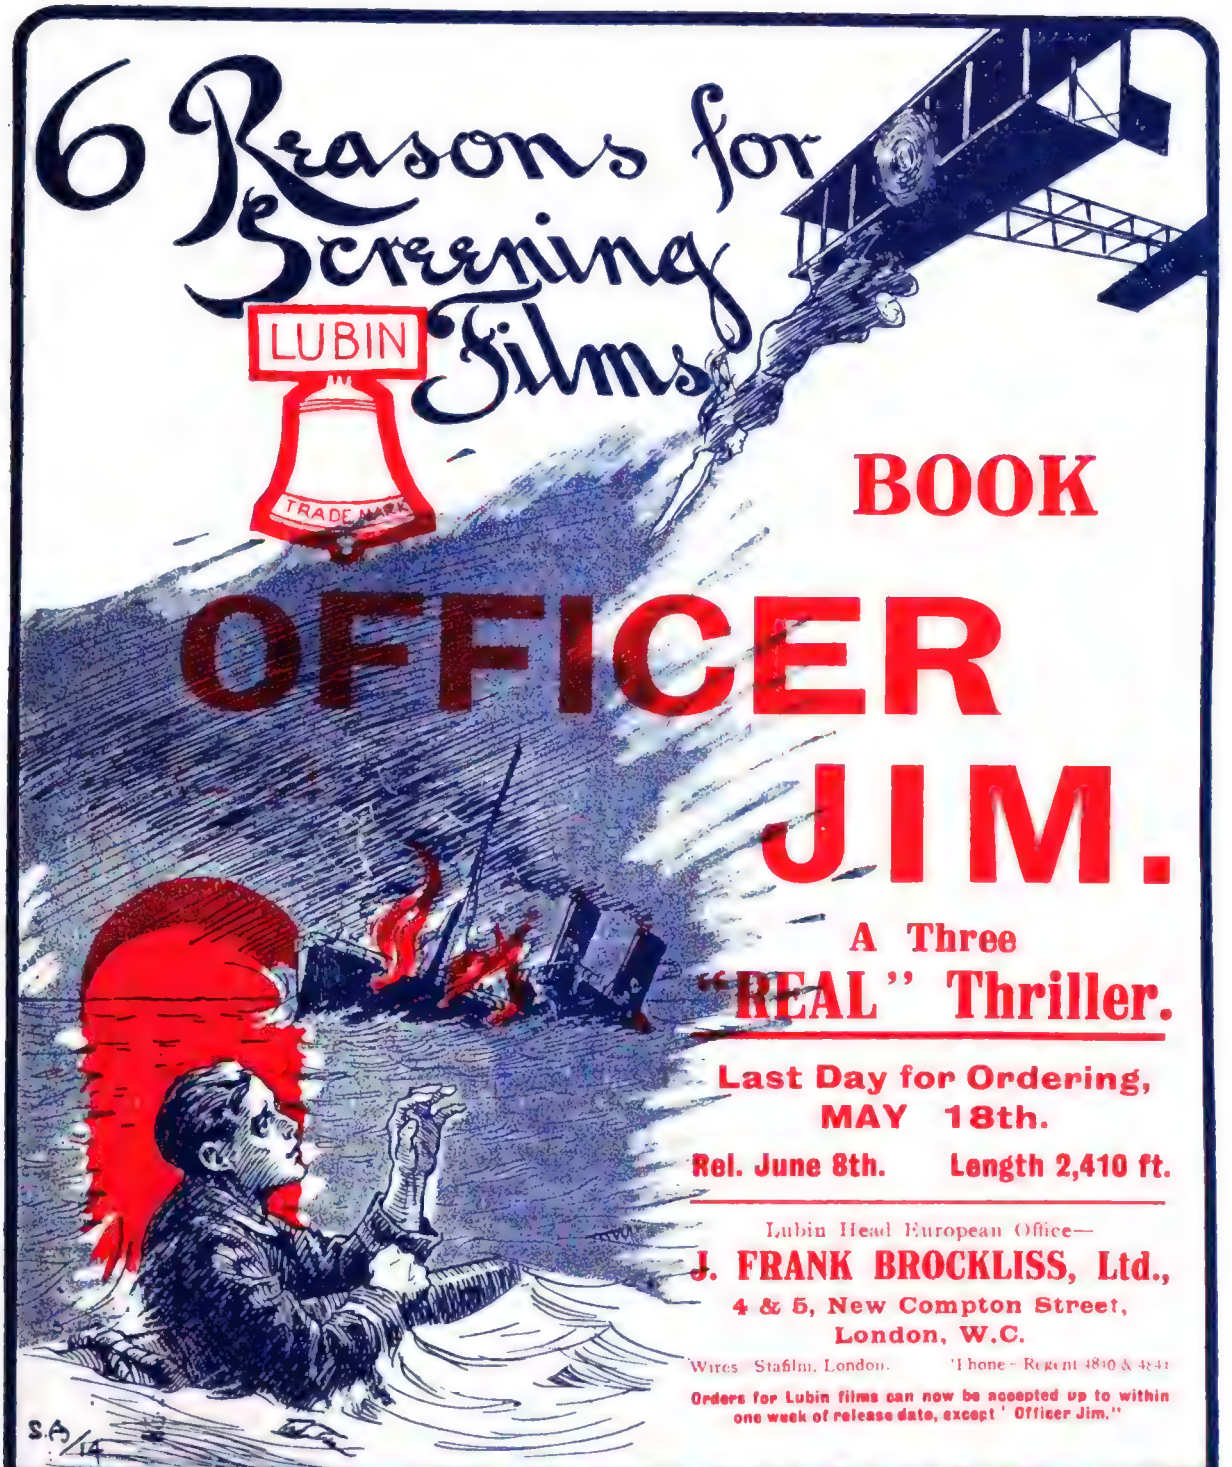
The controversy between the management of the Brighton picture palaces and the Town Council, with regard to the rates charged for electricity is by no means settled. The other week I mentioned in these notes that the Corporation, largely influenced by the possibility of the cinema proprietors manufacturing their own current, had agreed to make a universal charge of 3d. per unit for lighting and power, as compared with 4d. per unit which was being paid previously. While accepting this concession, the picture palace management claim to be supplied with current for power purposes at 1d. per unit, and contend that, under the Acts regulating the Corporation electricity undertaking, it is illegal to make a higher charge to them than is made to other consumers. A rebate can also, it is argued, be claimed on accounts paid in the past.

These contentions were put forward at an important meeting held last week at the Court Theatre. Dr. oJhnston presided, and those present included Messrs. G. Yate Ashwell (Duke of York's Theatre), George Bloch (Imperial and Coronation Theatres), N. J. Coverdale and W. J. Grimes (Court Theatre), C. Frere (Grand Concert Hall), W. S. Hammick (Theatre de Luxe), C. W. May (Hare Electric Empire), H. Pilgrim (representing Mr. H. B. Parkinson, of the Academy Picture Palace), and R. E. Woods (Picturedrome). As the result of their deliberations, it was decided to form a Theatres Protection Association for Brighton. Steps were taken to circularise the members of the Town Council with regard to the grievance alluded to, and it was also decided to get into touch with theatre proprietors and managers in other towns with the object of forming similar associations. Ultimately, it was suggested, these local associations would become federated, and the influence of such a body throughout the country would be enormous.

The Empire Novelty Theatre, West Street, a small but very cosy cinema surrounded with big competitors, has just closed its doors. It is to reopen shortly as a cinema rifle range, still, I understand, under the control of Mrs. W. Harold Speer. One such range has already been opened in one of the arches on the Front, the chairman of the company being Mr. A. W. Rogers.

Between Easter and Whitsun is usually a quiet time for Brighton, but the excellent shows given at the various picture palaces have been drawing good houses. "David Garrick" has been one of several big bookings at the Palladium, King's Road, where Mr. J. L. Crown and his lieutenant, Mr. Johnson, leave no stone unturned to promote the comfort of their patrons. "The House of Temperley" is being shown again this week by special request.

I spent a very enjoyable two hours last week, at the Court Theatre, which Mr. N. J. Coverdale is now managing with characteristic enterprise. The star films for the week were "The Doctor's Honour" and "Heart of Kathleen" and there were some first-rate "turns" as well. Mr. Coverdale is trying the experiment of "military band nights," while an extra attraction this week is a sketch competition for amateur actors.



The Academy, West Street, keeps up its reputation for first-rate shows under Mr. H. B. Parkinson's management. "Spartacus" has been secured for this week ,and a popular booking was "The Children of Captain Grant.

O'Brien has learnt the dangerous art of hypnotism, and decides to turn this to practical use in the Ring. He has a very strong "sense," even hypnotising the Professor who taught him and abstracting his fee back, while under the influence.

Nobody can withstand him, and he defeats every opponent by doctoring them and then knocking them out. He even boxes two at once, but hypnotises them so that they fight each other instead.

He, however, meets disaster at the hands of the Professor, who, remembering O'Brien's trick, challenges him under another name, hypnotises him and the audience as well, makes a haul from their pockets and decamps.

Round the Birmingham District.

The uncertain conditions of last week's weather have given a decided filip to box office receipts round the town, and renters generally announce brisk business conditions. "A Midnight Wedding," Moss's exclusive, is winning golden opinions amongst the Birmingham exhibitors, and Mr. Syd. Wright, the local agent, reports big bookings.—At the showroom of the Royal Film Agency in Corporation Street last Tuesday afternoon Lubin and Kalem films were exhibited, and No. 5 of Gaumont's Fantomas series, "The False Magistrate," was favourably received by a full attendance.

I paid Mr. Malcolm, of the Kinematograph Trading Company, housed in Hill Street, a visit last week, and he gave me glowing accounts of his state of business. He has taken over two three-reel exclusives, "Temptation" and a reissue of "The Ring That Binds." Although but recent acquisitions, I understand these films are showing quite good bookings, and shall be able to announce the date of their exhibition to the Trade next week. "Orders Under Seal," which made such a big hit at the Scala recently, is having a very successful run round the Midlands, and I understand that Warwick, Worcester, Leicester, Redditch, and other surrounding towns have been doing exceptionally well with the film. "Love and Vengeance" promises well locally.

A very interesting and varied programme was presented by Mr. Yeulett at the New Street Picture House last week, when "Beauty and the Barge" and "Kronstadt" were the star pictures. A very interesting series of educational matinées, at 5.30 p.m. daily, still continues to further popularise this house.

Mr. Heath, of the Picturedrome, Sparkbrook, billed two strong stars last week in "The Discovery of America" and "The Inspector's Story."—A strong programme was presented at Mr. Parry's Moseley Road Picture House last week, when "The Curse of War" and "Moths" both realised good business. This week reveals a strong programme, wherein is featured "The Mystery of the Old Mill" and "The Murdoch Trial."

Looking in to see Mr. Elbourne, managing director of the Balsall Heath Picture House, I found him screening "Thor" to good business. This week "In the Grip of a Villain" and "A Footballer's Honour" are two popular stars, and future bookings reveal Pathé's "In Mid-Atlantic" and that successful Ideal exclusive, "The Princess's Dilemma" as striking stars. This hall, which was opened on November 6, 1913, has won for itself a good clientele of good-class patrons, for whom Mr. Elbourne caters in excellent fashion. The prices are 4d., 6d., 9d., and 1s., and comfortable plush tip-ups are provided. The projection is excellent, and two Simplex machines are in use. There is a good rake of about one in five on the floor, and a throw of 112 ft. on to a 19 ft. by 8 ft. screen. There is an orchestra of eight, and I may say that this is one of the most attractive features of the hall. In order to throw the sound well back into the auditorium a large sounding board is extended over the orchestra, and beneath their feet is a hollow cavity for the same purpose. An interesting feature about this hall is that it stands upon the River Rea, and before erection an expensive bridge had to be built on the site. The hall is well ventilated.

The Ladypool Road Picture House presented a well-selected programme last week to appreciative houses, when "The Wastrel," together with "The Broken Melody," were at the top of the bill.—Mr. Nelson, of the Sparkhill Picture Palace, made a good hit with the British Army film during last week.

TRADE NOTES.

Mr. Hubbard, of the Exclusive Supply Company, New Street, reports phenomenal business, particularly with "Moths," which had a splendid record last week when rebooked by the Moseley Road Picture House. During last week Mr. Hubbard was continually screening the well-known Keystone two-reel exclusive, "The Fire Bug," and no less than twenty-five bookings of this comedy are already realised.

Looking in to the local home of the Kinematograph Trading Company, Hill Street, I was pleased to find there a visitor from London in the person of Mr. George Soole, the managing director of the company, with whom I had a very interesting chat anent Birmingham as a Trade centre. Mr. Soole told me he was delighted with the headway that had been made with the company's films down here. "The Fighting Blood of 1809," which, I understand from Mr. Soole, the Kinematograph Trading Company have taken over, will assuredly form another popular edition to their long line of winners in the district. Mr. Soole is paying a flying visit to customers, returning to Town by an early tram Saturday morning.

Liverpool and Manchester Notes.

LIVERPOOL.

The authorities of Liverpool have lately bestirred themselves with regard to the ventilation of picture theatres, and notice has been sent to all proprietors that in the next regulations issued improved ventilation of their halls will be insisted upon. In this connection visitors have also been advised to forward plans showing exactly existing arrangements.

The Lime Street Picture House is being repainted and decorated throughout, so as to maintain its reputation among the most comfortable and artistic houses in Liverpool. So far as this hall is concerned, ventilation has been made a special study, nearly £1,000 having been spent on this particular scheme, in which are included five extracting fans. Good music has always been a feature, and the orchestra, consisting of five instruments, with Mr. P. S. Ainley as conductor, is generally admired. Last week, during the latter half, "A Restless Woman," "The Chest of Fortune," "The Vanishing Cracksman," and "Torquay and Its Surroundings" were the principal items. This week visitors are being regaled with "The Curse of War," "For Auld Lang Syne," and the Keystone farce, "Love and Dynamite." Among the many good things coming in the near future may be mentioned "The Midnight Wedding" and "A Lady of Quality."

Mr. F. Victor Swift, who succeeded Mr. Hamer as manager of the New Century Picture Hall, Mount Pleasant, reports satisfactory business. The former pianist, he has "shaped" exceedingly well in his new capacity, and the knowledge previously acquired has proved exceedingly useful. This hall, which runs a daily matinée at 3 and a continuous performance from 6.30 to 10.30, makes a special show of posters. Among recent films to score a decided success was Barker's picture of the Cup-tie, which was shown on the Monday afternoon following the match. Another useful film was found in "The Inspector's Story." Last week interest chiefly centred in "Three Children" and "No Quarter," whilst "Mystery of Boscombe Vale," together with "An Elusive Diamond" and "The Fight for a Fortune," are three of more than usual interest this week. Of the things to be shown shortly "The Curse of War" is likely to prove the best.

I found a well-filled house present at the Prince of Wales, Clayton Square, and the programme provided was well up to the usual standard. "Beauty and the Barge" appeared to be generally admired, and among the other excellent pictures were "Scenes in Moscow and Tiflis," "The Vanishing Cracksman." "He Would a-Hunting Go," "The Man of Destiny," and "Sammy's Umbrella." The orchestra, under the direction of Herr W. Meyer, played some well-selected music. During the present week the third of the W. W. Jacobs' comedies—for which this house has the exclusive rights—entitled "Lawyer Quince," is being shown, and among the principal pictures during the first three days were "The Black Spot" and "Love and Dynamite."

The Palais de Luxe as usual is doing excellent business, and the programmes provided are full of interest and variety.—At the Philharmonic Hall pictures of the expedition conducted by the late Captain Scott are being shown, with a lecture by Mr. Cecil H. Meares.—The special Trade show given on Friday last by the Progress Film Company, of Manchester, at the Lime Street Picture House, when "A Midnight Wedding" and "A Winter's Tale" were shown, proved a great success.

MANCHESTER.

Of the several new picture houses shortly to be added to Manchester's list, I have had the privilege of inspecting the plans of a particularly fine hall to be built at Birch Street, West Gorton, to be known as the Corona Picture House. Operations on the site have already been commenced by the demolition of twenty-six private houses, and in a few months' time, certainly by September, there will be completed as handsome a picture theatre as any to be found in the North of England. The site contains an area of about 1,000 sq. yds., with a frontage of 47 ft., whilst the building itself will be 183 ft. in length. At the Birch Street end there will be a café lounge fitted up in Tudor style, which will be entered from a spacious foyer. A billiards saloon containing full-size tables is also to be provided. Seating accommodation has been arranged in the theatre for over 1,000, this work, together with the furnishing and decorating, being entrusted to Fred Wilkins and Brother, Limited, of Duke Street, Liverpool. Special attention is to be paid to the electric lighting and the system of heating and ventilation. The architects are Messrs. Stott and Sons, of Manchester, and the contract for building has been placed with Messrs. Townson and Sons, Limited, of Bolton, who erected the Manchester Hippodrome and the New Palace. The green and white marmo front will be greatly admired, this portion of the contract having been secured by the Leeds Fireclay Company. Although when completed the Corona will be quite a palatial house, the proprietors have decided to charge only the most popular prices, ranging from 2d. to 6d.

Mr. John P. Gibbons, one of the proprietors of the Lyceum, was in charge on the evening of my visit. Many will remember him as pianist at the Bijou, Erskine Street, in the immediate neighbourhood, where his exceptional ability was a great attraction. Mr. Gibbons related a rather amusing experience that happened recently at the Trade show given by the American Express Company at the Salford Cinema. In the absence of the pianist on this occasion, he volunteered his services, and accompanied the pictures from start to finish. Everyone present was struck by his brilliant playing, and at the conclusion the applause given would have gratified a star of the first magnitude. To his astonishment one of those present, unaware of his identity, offered him an engagement. With regard to pictures, the Lyceum was showing last week "Œdipus Rex" and also "The Antique Brooch." This week the principal attractions are "Meshes of Fate" and "Master Crook Outwitted." Among recent successes, "Fight for the Great Black Diamond" scored a great success. A special programme for children is put on every Saturday afternoon, and is a popular institution in the neighbourhood.

During the latter portion of last week the Oxford Picture House ran as its chief picture "Kronstadt," and the Picture House in Market Street depended chiefly upon "Beauty and the Barge." The Deansgate found "The Runaway Princess" a good attraction.—The Shaftesbury, Longsight, had a good, all-round programme, which included "Hook and Hand."—The Prince's, Grey Mare Lane, did well with "The Secret of the Orphan," and has for this week "In Mid-Atlantic" and "A Woman of the People."

"THE BIOSCOPE" PARLIAMENT.

Readers are invited to express their Opinions upon any subject of general interest.

Correspondence submitted for publication must be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith. Anonymous letters will be promptly consigned to the Waste Paper Basket. Publication of a letter must not be taken to imply that the views expressed are endorsed by the Editor.

WHY NOT A MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION?

To the Editor of THE BIOSCOPE.

SIR,—While in conversation with several brother managers, the question of the formation of a managers' association was referred to, and one and all expressed the opinion that something in the nature of a combination should be formed, more for defence than defiance.

Whatever may be one's political creed or personal opinion of Trade Unionism, it must be admitted that these are the days of combines—that unity is strength. The prestige of picture theatre managers would be considerably enhanced by a well-conducted association consisting of managers who understand and have had experience in the art of catering for public entertainment, rather than the man who with a few spare pounds at his disposal and an excellent training in another profession, blossoms out as a manager and eventually lands his company into serious difficulties.

If my ideas meet with approval I shall be pleased to hear from any brother manager who is willing to co-operate in forming an Association, and a preliminary meeting might be arranged at an early date.—Yours, etc.,

FRANK BENTZ.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

To the Editor of THE BIOSCOPE.

SIR,—With reference to the notices which have recently appeared regarding the National Institute for the Blind, and the great movement inaugurater by Mr. C. Arthur Pearson to provide literature in Braille type for the use of the blind, I have undertaken to arrange a special benefit matinée, to be held at the Theatre de Luxe, Glasgow, at an early date, the entire proceeds of which, free of any expenses whatsoever, either for the use of the theatre, lighting, advertising or provision of the programme, will be handed over to Mr. C. Arthur Pearson's Institution.

In order to make our matinée the greatest possible success, I wish, if I can, to secure the services of an influential voluntary committee, and if some of your readers who may happen to be in a position to render help would very kindly work with me, I should be most grateful.

May I suggest that much help could be afforded to the movement if those who cannot assist in any other way would spare a contribution—stating which book they will buy for the blind men—which contribution should be sent direct to Mr. C. Arthur Pearson, Hon. Treasurer, the National Institute for the Blind, 206, Great Portland Street, London, W.—I am sir, yours, etc.,

THOMAS BUTT,
Manager.

THE NEWCASTLE PICTURE HOUSE.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This magnificently designed and luxurious theatre was opened in Newcastle-upon-Tyne last week by the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, and is a dominating building in one of Newcastle's most dignified thoroughfares, and occupies one of the most valuable sites in the city. The theatre stands at the top of Grey Street, and the main entrance is directly opposite the famous Grey's Monument, the architecture comparing favourably with any other scheme in the city. The internal decorations have been carried out on a rich and ornate scale, and excellent taste marks all that has been done.

The accommodation will provide for 1,000, and no less than three cafés on different floors have been provided. The main vestibule is decorated with rich marble, and the leaded glasswork bears the arms of the city, in combination with the arms of the counties of Northumberland and Durham. The entrance hall, in white and grey marble, is enhanced by pilasters of breche rose marble, and further enriched with elbronised mouldings. From the centre of the foyer rises a handsome staircase, which, after a short flight, branches off to right and left, and gives access to the first floor foyer and the entrance to the ground floor of the theatre. There is a third foyer on the second floor, which gives access to the grand circle, and each foyer is furnished with very comfortable lounges, pannelled in rich oak and hung with a series of charming tapestries.

The decoration of the interior is in Louis Seize style, and strikes a new note in picture theatre decoration. The colour scheme is original and pleasing, and the lighting, operated on the single lever dimmer system from the projecting room, is designed to give a soft glow without shadows. The large balcony goes right round the theatre, and the seating and furnishings have been specially designed. Ample promenading room is provided in the side balconies.

The ordinary visitor to the theatre can have no conception of the care and money expended to ensure proper ventilation and pure air. The installation of the necessary machinery has in itself cost some thousands of pounds. The apparatus is a modification of the Plenum, and has been specially designed by the company's engineering staff. In the event of a fog, it should be mentioned that special screens will be used. By means of this system the atmosphere is renewed every three to five minutes, and the spent air is drawn up through the roof by means of a huge electrically driven propellor.

The public may gain access to the cafés and foyers without entering the theatre, and for their convenience electric lifts are provided to each café, also to the grand circle. On the ground floor there are cloakrooms, which may be used free of charge, and patrons shopping in the city may have parcels addressed to be called for. A public telephone is placed at the disposal of visitors.

The whole of the work was carried out to the plans of Messrs. White and Stephenson, architects, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, the contractor being Mr. George Douglass, of Newcastle.

Prior to the opening ceremony, the representatives of the Press were entertained to luncheon at the Station Hotel by the directors. The gathering was presided over by Mr. J. J. Newbould. Subsequently the guests were conducted over the new building, and its various interesting features were explained by Mr. Palmer and Mr. Ronald Grierson, the chief engineer of the company.

The opening ceremony was performed by Sir Francis Blake, Bart., the vice-chairman of the Northumberland County Council and chairman of the Northumberland County Education Committee. The theatre was crowded, and supporting Sir Francis were Dr. Jupp (managing director), Mr. J. J. Newbould, Mr. Walter C. Grant, Mr. A. E. Newbould, Mr. S. Graham Ball, and Captain A. Meares, D.S. (directors of the company), and Mr. James A. Lauder, well known in Newcastle, who has been appointed manager of the theatre.

Dr. Jupp introduced Sir Francis Blake, who, in declaring the theatre open, said he did so as a private individual interested in the pleasures of the people, and not in any official capacity. With regard to the theatre, they could say, with the Queen of Sheba, "One half is not told unto you." A finer building than they were in that day had seldom been erected in Newcastle, or in any other town throughout the kingdom. Everyone would agree that the coming of the picture house was one of the most notable features in modern life. The popularity of the cinematograph was a sign, he thought, of a change in the condition of the people, of their altered outlook upon life, and of their determination to use some part, at all events, of the increased leisure which they enjoyed in consequence of Shops Acts and Eight Hours Acts, and machinery which saved the body and the mind, in harmless amusement and pleasure. Under a wise and thoughtful management—a management which recognised its responsibility to keep the entertainment as clean as the beautiful rooms they were in—people could pass a pleasant and instructive hour or two, and find both rest for the mind and comfort for the body at a minimum amount of expense. In discussing the pleasures and recreations of the people, said Sir Francis, the question of temperance arose. There were many people who expressed the opinion that if the public-house could be made less of a drinking shop and more of a social club, then a long step would be taken in the direction of the general betterment of the people. Holding that view himself, and regarding, as he did, the establishment of such an institution as an approach to the fulfilment of a desirable change in the habits of the people, he most cheerfully and most willingly accepted the invitation to declare the building open. He wished the manager success, success for the larger, the better, and more hopeful results which one might expect to come from a well-managed institution such as the Newcastle Picture House would undoubtedly be.

Dr. Jupp expressed, on behalf of the directors, their sincere thanks to Sir Francis Blake for so kindly consenting to open the theatre, and for the extremely kind remarks he had made. The presence of Sir Francis there, and the presence of the large gathering, would be an incentive to them to so manage the theatre that it would always be looked upon as a credit to the city.

Refreshments were served, and a fine programme of pictures was shown, including "The Training of Italian Cavalry Officers," "The Third String," "Pals," and "England's Menace." A high-class musical programme was also given, with Mr. Nicholls as musical director.

BRADFORD BREVITIES.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Messrs. Hibberts' Pictures, Limited, of Bradford, are running the Clarendon "speaking films" with great success. From the Queen's Hall, London, the films were put on at the Bradford Temperance Hall, the Hibbert headquarters, for a whole week, from whence they were destined to the Golden Cross Picturedrome, Leeds, and later back to Bradford to the Towers Hall. At each of these Hibbert houses the films were booked for the whole week.—At the Huddersfield hall of the company the Clarendon pictures were not shown, but the Edison Kinetophone maintained a profitable run there.—Mr. J. Phillips, of the Imperial Animated Picture Company, of Bradford, has returned from Paris, where he was present to witness the visit of the King and Queen, with a bagful of slides to add to the series "Impressions of the Continent," of which Mr. Phillips makes a profitable hobby. The Imperial Company are running local rights for many of the biggest things recently produced in the cinema world.—Messrs. A. M. Crowe and Hainsworth, of the Exchange Film Service, Piccadilly, are building up a wide connection in "ordinaries," though some first-class exclusives in children's fare are also obtainable from this office.

St. George's Hall, the home of the New Century Company, is to undergo further reconstruction and refitting. The latest plans, prepared by Messrs. Chadwick and Watson, of Leeds, are for the rearrangement of the great galleries of this big hall and of the screen. The whole pitch of the tiers in the galleries is to be changed, so as to provide wider space between rows and the fitting of tip-up seats in the west gallery and running cushioned seating with backs in the north and south galleries. "The Port of Doom" was one of the leading attractions here recently, and another episode of Sherlock Holmes was portrayed in "Boscombe Vale."—At the Theatre de Luxe Mr. H. Leacey featured the Football Cup Final pictures. Mr. Leacey's most attractive drama was "The Open Door," in the first half of the week, and in the succeeding programme he made a great hit with "The Eleventh Commandment."—At the Bradford Picture House, in Victoria Square, Mr. Clarence Hurst screened "The Gipsy's Child" and "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake."—At the Picture House, Town Hall Square, "The Open Gate" and "Sons of the Sea" were top-liners of great value to Mr. J. S. Clayton, who also showed the British Army film.—At the Oak Lane Cinema Mr. Frank Bentz was booming "The Eleventh Commandment," and his fine selection of subjects also included "The Open Door."—"In the Hands of London Crooks" was the star picture of Mr. Hamilton at the Picturedrome.—At the Olympic, Mr. Frank Robinson featured the thrilling Irish Rebellion story in "Arrah-na-Pogue."—"The Black Ball," shown at the Coventry Hall by Mr. H. Coe, was one of the thrills of the city.

GIGANTIC PORTRAIT LENS.

Many of our readers who are concerned in camera work will note with interest that J. H. Dallmeyer, Limited, have recently constructed at their Willesden works a gigantic lens of 11 in. diameter and aperture f/4.2, for the use of a photographer in Egypt who wishes to secure life-size pictures in natural perspective. The theoretical design presented considerable difficulties as the standard of definition requires to be of as high an order as in the case of a small lens. After weeks of calculation the desired form to give the individual lenses was found and the metal tools were put in hand. The design is somewhat similar to that of the Dallmeyer patent portrait lens (two glasses in front and two behind).

Over six months elapsed before the glass makers were able to provide suitable material, but the grinding and polishing fortunately passed off without incident and the photograph below shows some of the men engaged on the work.

The lens itself is seen in the lower part. The overall length is 20½ in., width 12½ in. flange diameter 16 in., and the lens complete scales just over a hundredweight.

After the best results had finally been obtained, it was thought that it might be of interest to see what stereoscopic effect was obtained by reason of the large diameter. The test object, which had to be very short on account of the little depth, was a thin plate, painted on each side with alternate bands of black and white, so arranged that a black band on the right hand side corresponded to a white band on the left-hand side. This object was put about 20 ft. from the lens and photographed, first, with the lens covered, except for a small central hole. Next, with the lens covered, except for a small hole on right. Third, with the lens covered, except for a smallhole on left; and, lastly, with the complete lens uncovered. The results were that in No. 1 photo there is the end on view of the plate only: in No. 2 end-on view, also right-hand side; in No 3 the end-on view, also left-hand side; and in No. 4 the end-on view and both sides, the whole combining to form one view.

The photographs thus prove the ability of a large lens to see round corners, also the statement that a large lens gives more roundness and modelling in portraiture.

MUSICAL MEM.

Mr. George Harcourt, late of the Theatre de Luxe, Sunderland, informs us that he has resigned the musical directorship there in order to take up a similar post at the luxurious Queen's Hall, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

EXETER AND DISTRICT.

There was not a dull moment in the programme provided at the Empire, Exeter's oldest picture house, during the past week, and when I looked in the other evening a crowded house was watching with interest "The Golden Beetle," which Mr. Butler told me has attracted large audiences during the week. "Branscombe's Pal" was another favourite, while "Through Flaming Paths" was attractive. For the present week, one of the chief items in a strong programme is "A Daughter of the Hills."

The essay-writing competition is still in full swing at the City Palace. These competitions are held twice weekly, and on each occasion three prizes are offered. Some excellent films have been shown here lately, among them being Asta Nielsen in "Up to Her Tricks," "The Broken Idyll," "Her Scorn Repaid," "The Thwarted Plot," and "The Pitfall." The special feature of the programme for the first half of the present week is "A Girl and Her Money," which later in the week will give place to "The Open Door."

Since Mr. F. Adderley has been in charge of the Exeter Palladium for Mr. Albany Ward he has introduced several improvements. Educational matinées are now in full swing. "The Three Musketeers" and "Hamlet" have been shown, and so great was the appreciation of the latter film that by special request it is to be repated one evening this week.

One of the chief attractions at the Public Hall, Exmouth, was "The Return of Helen Redmond," while during the present week "The Foreman's Treachery" and "The Escape of Jim Dolan" will be screened.

"Life in the British Army" is announced as the feature of the programme at the Imperial, Newton Abbot, next week.

LINES FROM LEICESTER.

Business throughout the town continues satisfactory, the queue system being well in evidence at more than one house.—"Beauty and the Barge" is a dominant feature at the Granby Street Picture House throughout this week.—At the Coliseum, "Orders Under Seal" is likely to make a big stir.—Bright twin attractions (both exclusive) at the Imperial are "Asta Nielsen as Suffragette" and "In the Bishop's Carriage."—At Silver Street, "Broncho Billy's Guardian" and "Quantrell's Son" take leading place.—"Fitzhaugh's Ride is the bright particular star at Mr. W. H. B. Emson's comfortable and commodious Belgrave Cinema, while "The Opium Smoker" and "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" are promising items at Clayton's Picturedrome.—At the High Street Electric "The Shadow on the Wall" leads the way.—Olympia is, as usual, well to the fore, "Hook and Hand" and "Duty" being among this week's "titbits."—"His Hour of Triumph" at the Boulevard bids fair to lead to another of greater duration, while "Tangled Threads" at the Empire, and "The Golden Pathway" at the Knighton Cinema are notable films that are scoring a hit.

By JOHN CHER.

There is no truth in the report which stated that Monsieur Hennion, Prefect of Police, had annulled the decree prohibiting the use of inflammable film. As already stated in these pages, the use of non-flam film in Paris picture theatres will be compulsory from July 1, 1915, onwards.

"Fantomas, the False Magistrate," is the film of the week here. This sensational production tops the bill at the Palace Hippodrome, Magic City Cinema Palace, Colisée, and several other important halls. It is astonishing to what extent the popularity of the "Fantomas" series of plays has attained in Paris. English and American picture theatregoers are especially keen on the stories, and I am constantly being questioned as to the date of the next exhibition of a new "Fantomas" exploit. Some time ago a well-known American booked seven boxes at the rue de Clichy picture theatre in order to take a party of friends to see the film.

Louis Aubert is interested in the Cinema des Nouveautes, now being constructed on the Boulevard des Italiens.

The more I go the more I marvel at the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome. Visiting the home of Gaumont films last week, I found the place crammed to overflowing. An exceptionally good programme was represented, including some very superb colour views, which I may mention are now a weekly feature. There is no doubt that Messrs. Gaumont's studios are turning out films expressly prepared for the tastes of the Hippodrome patrons. Therefore —like Broadway Features—Gaumont features films are offered to other countries after having for the most part been seen and appreciated by thousands of people in the French capital. "L'Agonie de Byzance," for instance, was produced to draw a certain class of audience which had hitherto not been represented at the Place Clichy, and I am informed that the venture was entirely successful. Indeed, this film proved to be one of the strongest box-office attractions ever screened.

Last Saturday afternoon, at the Cinema Demours, I saw how pneumatic tyres are turned out in the United States, at the rate of one every five minutes. Mr. Frank W. Thropp, of The de Laski and Thropp Circular Woven Tyre Company is in Europe demonstrating, by means of a superb series of moving pictures, his firm's method of manufacturing tyres. The film, which is the work of the Lubin Company, graphically shows the process from the treating of the raw material to the finished article. It is equally as interesting to the professional as to the general public.

A woman on horseback on top of one of the cars of a revolving Big Wheel will furnish the main incident in a forthcoming Eclair drama. This wonderful feat of daring was recently performed in Vienna by Madame Solange d'Atalide, a French circus rider. The current issue of the Kinematographische Rundschau contains an interesting account of the perilous exploit which took place before a crowd numbering many thousands. The story goes that the equestrienne decided to risk her life in an attempt to provide a thrilling sensation for the moving pictures. Coming to an agreement with the enterprising Eclair Company, she commenced to train her mount, "Dreadnought," for the task. This she did by riding the animal on the top of a moving van. When all was ready, horse and rider mounted on the roof of one of the Big Wheel cars. Then, amidst deadly silence, the wheel was set in motion and, greatly to the relief of everybody, the exploit successfully performed without mishap. After Madame d'Atalide perhaps the cinematograph operators are most deserving of applause, for they occupied an uneviable position on the axle of the wheel.

The Cup Final, my Vienna correspondent writes, was recently featured at a leading cinema in the Austrian capital.

No better proof of the increasing popularity of the picture theatre is afforded than the official record of receipts which has just been published. 1913 was another golden year for showmen. The takings of twenty-four Paris picture theatres during the last twelve months amounted to more than eight and a half million francs. Over £79,000 was taken at the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome, which is closed during the summer months, the Folies Bergères is the only music-hall which beats this. Second on the list is the Pathé Palace, which took the nice little sum of £36,320.

I understand that Mr. Rudolf Von Jacobvitch, who has purchased the French rights of Edison's Kinetophone is about to build an extensive studio for the purpose of manufacturing talking pictures.

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

A smart piece of work has been accredited to the Dublin branch of the Gaumont Company. Last Saturday they took a film of the launching of the Sea Scouts' Lifeboat, Comet, which took place at 4.30 p.m. at Ringsend, Dublin. At 5 p.m. the operator was on his way to the developing rooms, and by 8 o'clock a copy of the film was screened at the Camden Picture House, presided over by Mr. A. Poulter. It is, of course, needless on my part to say that the theatre was packed and the drawing power of a good "topical" was once more demonstrated.

Whenever I call at the Cosy Cinema, Parnell Street, I always find a goodly crowd of people watching a very fine programme. That submitted last week was no exception, including as it did "The Filly," "Judgment of the Jungle" and "The House of Discord." Other films which contributed to the evening's enjoyment were "Green Eye of the Yellow God," "His Mother's Song" and "For Love of Mabel."

Passing through Navan the other morning I took the opportunity to scan one of the bills of the picture theatre in Academy Street. I found it packed with films of the very best. "Blue Grass Romance" topped the bill, and was followed by "The Dictator" and "Marble Heart." I noticed also that the theatre is only opening once nightly during the summer.

At the Grand Cinema, Sackville Street, Dublin, the programmes continue to maintain their high standard. Mr. Kay, the proprietor of this cosy little cinema show, always does his best to have an extra fine film for his patrons. Last week "The Expert's Secret" was, in my opinion, the best. "The Actress," "Sandy and Shorty at the Circus" and "Pimple's Humanity" were also on the bill.

At the Mary Street Picture House, Mr. O'Russ had an excellent programme. The principal items were "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" and "The Golf Game and the Bonnet." The orchestra here continues to delight patrons with splendid selections beautifully rendered. Writing of Mr. O'Russ I might mention that the new picture theatre in Phibsborough is due to open next week. Mr. O'Russ is the secretary of the new Company, and I feel that he will carry out his work in the best possible manner. Of course he will still continue to act as manager and secretary of the Mary Street house.

I am able to state on the best authority that Mr. I. I. Bradlaw and Messrs. Karmel have purchased a very important corner site in Grafton Street, comprising two shops. These gentlemen propose to build a palatial picture theatre on the site to hold about 1,000 people. It is worth noting that Mr. Bradlow and Messrs. Karmel are directors of the Princess Cinema, a very successful show in Rathmines. I wish these gentlemen the best of luck in their new enterprise.

Two very dramatic films were screened last week at the Dame Street Picture House, under the management of Captain Ahearne. These were "The Bird of Prey" and "At the Hour of Dawn."—At the Dorset Hall, the principal films were "The Girl and the Tiger," "The War Correspondents" and "A Sentimental Sister." Manager Sullivan continues to conduct the destinies of this hall in first-rate manner. A number of seats are shortly to be placed inside the entrance hall to accommodate those waiting.

Mr. R. G. Bell always has a powerful programme on view at the Grafton, and the films are all release-date stuff. The Kinetophone continues to be exceedingly popular, the talking pictures including "Musical Blacksmiths."—At the Sackville the principal films were "FitzHugh's Ride" and "For Love of a Man." "A Family Feud" was also screened.

When I called in to see Mr. Cropper at the Kingstown Picture House, the heat was dancing on the streets outside. I was agreeably surprised therefore to find the house packed from top to bottom. This surely shows the popularity of Mr. Cropper and the programmes selected by him. "A Woodland Romance" and "Princess Nicotine" were on the programme, and I also witnessed the "Gaumont Graphic." The films are supplied by Messrs. Gaumont's Dublin branch.

The departure of Mr. Wyndham, the engineer of the Dublin branch of Messrs. Gaumont's, has been keenly felt in cinematograph circles. Mr. Wyndham was extremely popular with every one in the Trade over here, and he always took a keen personal interest in any work he had to do.

PORTSMOUTH PARS.

Yet another picture house has been opened in Portsmouth. Queen Street, Portsea, is the possessor of one of the finest cinemas in the town. Within a remarkably short time a tobacco factory has been transformed by Messrs. John Croad, builders, into a first-class theatre. The owners are the Portsea Cinema Company, Limited, and the manager is Mr. Harry H. Martyne. The exterior, for attraction and substance, has its counterpart in the interior, and expense has not been spared in the work of transformation, fitting up, and making the premises comfortable, sanitary, and well ventilated. The house is lofty—an electric globe on the apex of the outside roof is 60 ft. high—there is a double balcony, the decorated walls have panels of a rich red, and there is altogether accommodation for nearly 800 people. The stage is 30 ft. by 40 ft., and the screen 18 ft. by 14 ft. Ernemann and Tyler machines have been installed, and all the arrangements here are of the latest and safest. Mr. Martyne has got a good staff under him, and Mr. A. E. Marlowe, who was with the Albany Ward circuit at Weymouth for eight years, has taken the position of operator-electrician. Desperate were the efforts made to open, as announced, on Saturday—there was scaffolding still up the previous night—but they were successful, and there have been good houses ever since, and audiences have gone away well pleased. Last week end "The Street Singer" topped the bill, and this week the chef d'œuvres have been "The Gipsy Child" and "Fitz Hugh's Ride."

The Apollo in Albert Road continues to do great business. Mr. T. H. Donohue, the manager, was with West's "Our Navy" several years. The principal pictures last week were "The Wastrel" and "Her Supreme Sacrifice." Two exclusives are announced for this week, "Joan of Arc" (until Thursday), and "The Musgrave Ritual."

The oldest and the largest picture house in the town—the Victoria Hall, in Commercial Road, formerly Andrews', now owned by Mr. S. J. Flattan—has recently been redecorated and reupholstered, and the manager, Mr. William Farmer, informed our representative that the licensed accommodation for 1,400 was severely taxed last week. "Old St. Paul's" and "Lieut. Rose and Sealed Orders" were the main attractions. Exclusive films this week have been "True Irish Hearts" and "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves."

The Picture House, the chaste building adjoining the Speedwell Hotel, also in Commercial Road, recently opened by the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, has made a deep seizure on the affections of the Portsmouth public. First-class in every way are the films shown here. A great picture last week was "Kronstadt"; very attractive also was Shakespeare's "The Winter Tale." This week's programme contains "Beauty and the Barge."

The Fawcett Road Electric Theatre have recorded more than average audiences to witness "Western Chivalry" and "A Plucky Ranch Girl." This week's top-liners are "The Accusing Skeleton" and "The Red Spider."

The Shaftesbury Hall (Andrews') in Kingston Road, continues to be a very popular twice-nightly picture resort. Crowded audiences last week enjoyed "The Three Shadows," "His Last Deal" and "Little Fanny's Burglar." For the first part of this week the management screened a charming romantic love story, "A Romance of Old Brittany," and "A Night on the Road," and for the second part, "The Whimsical Threads of Destiny," in addition to other educational and entertaining films.

"The Right One" and "The Mystery of an Express Car" were two of a series of very interesting pictures exhibited at the Eastney Theatre last week. The principal attractions this week are "Saved by a Miracle" and "'Twixt Joy and Sorrow."

A FIRST RELEASE.

We are informed that the Morgana Films Company have now finished the great film, "Captain Blanco," the first of the "Giovanni Grasso" series. This film is said to be of intense dramatic interest, and to have been perfectly executed both from the point of action and photography.

SIGNORA BALISTERIERE.

The renowned Sicilian actor has had two fine co-operators, Signor Maiorana and Signora Balisterierè, who are well known in the dramatic world. We have received some of the photos of this first release which attest the good quality of the Morgana Films, and are now waiting to see the first reel, which will shortly arrive in this country.

Bioscope Advertising and the Hoardings.

A Few Points in Favour of the Poster as a Medium for Cinema House Publicity.

By F. T. STEPHENS.

The poster as a medium for advertising the cinema has not so far been appreciated at any thing like its full value by many exhibitors. This ought not to be the case. For in addition to the general arguments which may be urged on behalf of the publicity of the hoardings, the bioscope proposition is susceptible to several very powerful arguments derivable from its own nature as being the kind of entertainment which it is.

In discussing the case for poster advertising, no depreciation of newspapers is necessarily involved, nor yet in setting forth the case for the trade journal or the magazine. For the cinematograph, as for other enterprises, newspaper publicity has its own advantages, including the advantage of prospective and retrospective mention and commendation in the news columns. And the newspaper, whether daily or weekly, is in no danger of being overlooked. It has too much to say for itself for there to be any danger of its being forgotten. And there certainly is plenty to be said for it.

Now what is there to be said on behalf of the poster as a medium for advertising the cinema? Here it is well to say at once that it is the picture poster which is meant. The picture poster is demanded alike by the marked increase of the pictorial factor in present day advertising and by the nature of the bioscope proposition.

Well, to begin with, the effective life of the poster is not limited to a few minutes, or a few hours, or a few days. People see it without in most cases having to pay to see it and without even making a point of seeing it. The poster is seen each day by more people, and day after day by the same people. Consequently the message of the poster has the force of cumulative effect. Then there is the psychological bond of sympathy in the public mind between the proposition advertised and the medium of advertising. The picture on the screen and the picture on the hoardings alike appeal to the æsthetic interest in the spectacular side of life. So, because of the medium, the advertisement tends to make the mind of the beholder receptive and favourable to the idea of the thing advertised.

Another very important consideration in favour of the poster as a medium for advertising the bioscope is derived from a consideration of the special case of one section of the population. Is it not a fact that children are great patrons of the bioscope, either alone or with the adults who take them there? For children from the age of five to fifteen the bioscope is perhaps the only all-the-year-round indoor entertainent. Few of these children buy or read newspapers. Even those who do are probably not greatly impressed by the usual letterpress, non-pictorial newspaper advertisement of the bioscope entertainment, if it is noticed at all by them. But posters on the hoardings they see and look at—especially pictures—on their way to or from school and in their walks abroad. And often they draw the attention of their fathers and mothers, with the result frequently that the latter do not rest content to give the children pennies for admission, but themselves accompany them because they too have been attracted by the poster to see the bioscope films of which the picture is a representation.

Emphasis has already been laid upon the point that the poster must be not merely a letterpress display, but pictorial. As such it will of course catch the eye and arouse interest and create desire in adults as well as in children in a way that a newspaper advertisement cannot do, even when it includes an illustration. The picture poster has the advantage by reason of its size, and still more its colours.

There is another point, too, in which the publicity of the hoardings compares favourably with that of the newspapers as far as concerns the metropolitan district and many provincial towns, such as health resorts and seaports, which have a large migratory element in their population, uninfluenced by permanent local ties or local interests. Bioscope entertainments are advertised mainly in local newspapers, very little read by such people, many of whom probably could not name a local newspaper if asked to do so. Foreign residents, visitors, boarding house dwellers, students, three-yearly tenants of suburban houses, workmen constantly shifting about after jobs—all patronise the bioscope. But they have no interests to stimulate the purchase or the perusal of local newspapers. The bioscope entertainers who want to reach them must seek them through the medium of the hoardings.

To sum up, the poster, because of its constant visibility, its cumulative effect, its sympathetic appeal to the pictorial instinct, its accessibility to children and other non-readers of local newspapers, demands more attention than it has yet received from bioscope advertisers.

ON AND ABOUT THE YORKSHIRE COAST.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Competition in the Scarborough cinemas is keener than ever, and as a consequence the public are getting full value. Last week there were several notable subjects in the various programmes submitted, and there is a continuation of the popularity which has been maintained all the winter.

"The Battle of Manila" and "Adrift on Life's Tide" were featured at the Palladium. Mr. Catley, manager of Mr. Will Catlin's magnificent picture palace on the South Foreshore, is succeeding in maintaining the popularity of the Palladium despite the fact that the Olympia, which is only a stone's throw away is under the same management. A special feature is made week by week of the topical cartoons by Max Martin.

The Olympia has had as chief attractions "The Diver" and "Spartacus," both of which have resulted in excellent houses, and as in the case of the Palladium, the management are to be congratulated on obtaining such excellent and distinctly varied programmes.

As a cinema, the Theatre Royal, St. Thomas Street, is still amongst the most popular of Scarborough amusements. Messrs. Garside and Gibson invariably have a good strong programme of both pictures and varieties. The special pictorial attraction at the time of writing is "Master of Himself."

Mr. F. Cardwell is proving the need of the Picture House, Vernon Place, and care is taken in selecting the right kind of pictures.

Mr. Gibson has been showing "The Old Melody" and "Shep, the Hero" at the Picturedrome, Newborough, and also "Angel of Death" and two good humorous films, "Mr. Rye Reforms" and "Winning His Wife." At the Picturedrome no charge is made above 4d., and the seats are plush tip-ups.

Mr. Parnell, who manages the Grand, another of the South Foreshore cinemas, has had "The Wastrel" heading the list. This film was shown under "exclusive" rights and has ensured capital business. Other items in the programme were "Fleeting Fortune," "Schnitz, the Tailor," and the news film.

Whilst in Bridlington recently I noticed the picture palaces there were doing good business. Mr. W. Freeman, of the Picturedrome, Quay Road, had a good pictorial programme, and in addition had engaged Mr. Kennedy's Premier Pierrots as an extra attraction.—At the Corporation's cinema, the Royal Victoria Rooms, Mr. Palmer, the entertainment manager, had amongst other films, "Love of '64," a pleasing romance.—Mr. J. Austin had also an attractive and well varied programme at the Picture House.

Hedon, a quaint little town in the East Riding, will soon be in possession of its first cinema. The Assembly Rooms have been secured by Mr. J. Young Brown, who possesses a picture palace at Hull, and it is intended to give a first-class entertainment.

There are two very flourishing cinemas at Beverley. The Playhouse, in the Market Place, is owned by Messrs. Holderness and Simmons who recently had a phenomenal success with "Sixty Years a Queen," which reached the Minster Town for the first time.

The County Film Agency, who have taken over the management of the Cinema (Assembly Rooms), Beverley, are running three distinct programmes a week, and some recent successes have been "Flame in the Ashes," "Love and Friendship" and "Fight for a Fortune."

EAST ANGLICAN NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Sidney C. Sullings, manager of the Central Cinema, Ipswich, has decided to drop pictures for the summer season, substituting concert parties.—On Wednesday evening, Mr. Sullings entertained the entire staff and several friends to supper and a very enjoyable evening was spent.—The manager of the Ipswich Picture House, in response to numerous requests, recently screened "The House of Temperley."

Good business is being done at the Yarmouth picture theatres. At the Gem, "Through the Clouds" and "Chelsea 7750" have been pulling them in.—"Jerry's Mother-in-law" and "Beauty Unadorned" were recent successes at the Empire, while "Through the Clouds" has been filling Filmland.

The Gorleston Coliseum introduced a special feature last week in the shape of after matinées.

The high reputation of the Cinema Palace, Norwich, is being well maintained. Recently Mr. J. W. Bruce presented "The Old Curiosity Shop" and Will Evans "Whitewashing a Ceiling.""The advent of Mr. J. McCormic at the Norwich Picture Playhouse has been heralded with much success. He screened "The Fallen Idol." This theatre is one music was rendered by the Playhouse Orchestra.—Mr. G. F. Howes did big things at the Prince of Wales Palace with "The Black Panther" and a "Sexton Blake" film.—The palatial Norwich Electric, of which Mr. G. E. Allen is the manager, has been screening "The Fallen Idol." This theatre is one of the best and most comfortable halls in the Eastern Counties. First-class artists are engaged every week.—Mr. T. Hallisey, manager of the Theatre de Luxe, Norwich, provided "The Lure of London" and "Shattered Crown." At this theatre the advantage of a good orchestra is being clearly made manifest.

At the Lynn Electric Theatre, "The Great Gold Robbery" proved a big attraction.

The numerous patrons of the Palace, Lowestoft, were loud in their praise of "Chelsea 7750."—Mr. C. J. Carpenter of the Lowestoft Cosy Corner Cinema, has done brisk business with "Through the Clouds."—Mr. Carpenter recently introduced "singing pictures" and has installed a magnificent gramophone for that purpose.

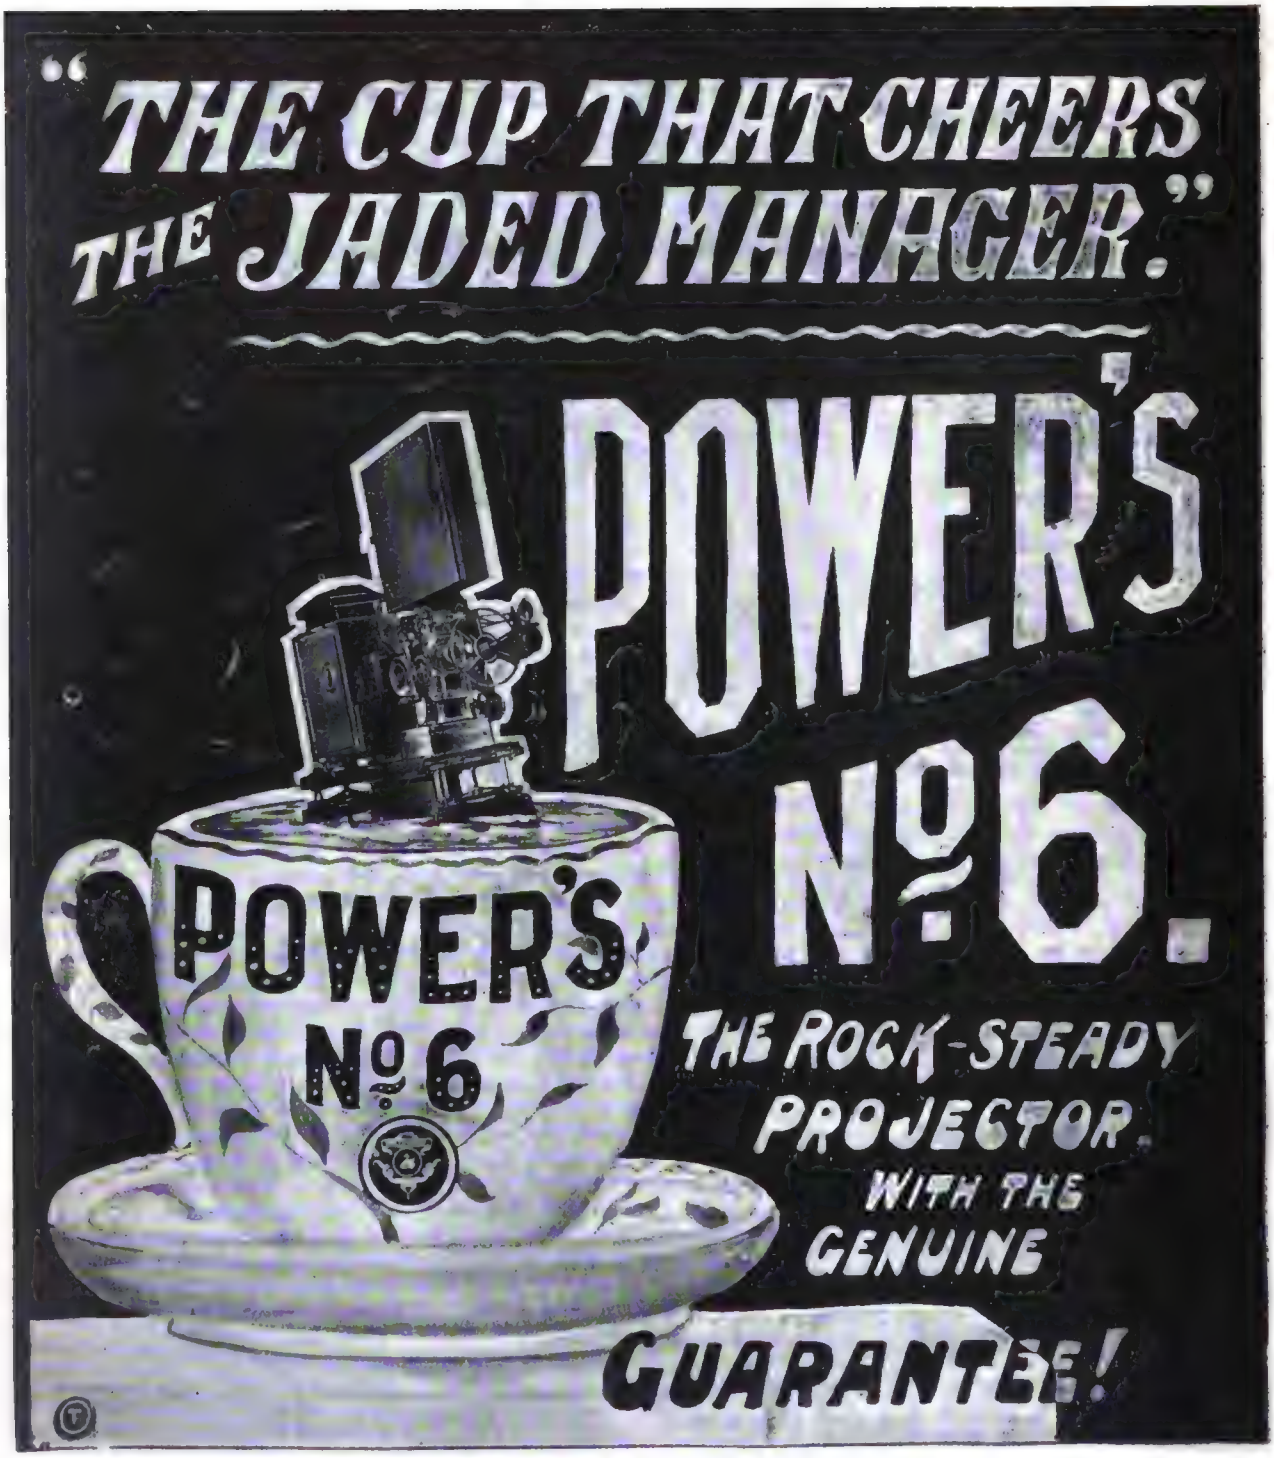
The Latest Application of Cinematography.

EYE MOVEMENTS IN READING.

By JOSEPH BEST, B.Sc. (Lond.)

A Manchester doctor is arranging with Messrs. Pathé Frères for a film to be taken that will show the rapid movements of the eye. This affords another example of how the cinematograph is proving of value in many unexpected directions—in this instance it is a particular application of the apparatus to the study of physical movement and bodily fatigue. In the case of the eye, these movements are so rapid that the ordinary camera, taking pictures at sixteen per second, is quite useless; a special ultra-rapid camera has to be employed, geared up so that at each turn of the handle a few hundred pictures are registered. In this way, when the resulting pictures are projected at the normal speed, the extremely rapid movement is slowed down, and can be studied by a scientific method.

Eye movements are recognised by the medical faculty to be directly related to nervous conditions, and the well-known author and specialist on nervous diseases of children (Dr. Francis Warner) employs tests based on eye movements in diagnosing the cause of deficiency in those submitted to his judgment.



The delicacy and rapidity of the eye movements we are constantly making in normal life may be well observed in an exaggerated form by watching the eyes of a person looking from the window of a railway carriage, with their rapid adjustments and fixations, to which much of the fatigue and headache of travel are due.

An article in a contemporary recently gave some interesting particulars on the subject, bearing specially upon the movement of the eye in reading. Though such eye movements are of the essence of the reading process, it was not until thirty years ago that their significance was first pointed out by Professor Javal, of Paris, who himself later became blind, largely as a result of his devotion to his work. Normally we do not notice them, and though we can feel the motion we cannot see our own eyes move, for the eye is at rest in clear vision. But if you sit opposite a person who is reading, or, better still, if you place a mirror on the opposite page, and, looking over his shoulder, watch carefully the reflection of his eyes, you will see that the movement is not a smooth one across the page, but a succession of quick jumps and very brief pauses, followed by a longer backward sweep to the beginning of the next line. With some rapid readers it is difficult to differentiate the movements, but with a slow reader the pauses can be clearly seen.

Since Professor Javal first opened the subject much research work has been carried out upon this topic, as a result of which it has been found that for each line of ordinary book print there are usually from three to five pauses, their number and length varying with the length of the line and the familiarity of the matter; for long lines and difficult matter there may be as many as seven to nine. Attempts have also been made to get approximate measurements of time lengths; thus, the forward movements in one subject were measured and found to average about one-fiftieth of a second, whilst the backward movements to the beginning of the next line took about twice as long. The length of the pauses varies considerably with different readers, and with the same reader for different classes of matter—an average length of about one-tenth of a second was noted in one case, but more usually the average is about one-fifth. And it is during these pauses that reading occurs; whilst the eye is in motion practically nothing is seen beyond what is sufficient to guide it along the line to be read, and to help it fixate the beginning of the next line. As would be expected, children make longer and more frequent pauses than adults.

Further, during the brief periods of fixation, the eye can see both to the right and the left of the fixation point, with a tendency, born of long habit of reading from left to right, to see more to the right than to the left. Hence the first pause occurs a short way in from the beginning of the line, and this is almost always the longest; the difference, though infinitesimal, is important, whilst the last pause, which occurs a short distance from the end of the line, is usually the next longest. It has also been found that these eye movements are more frequent than would be necessary to bring the whole of the matter within the field of clear vision once only. Hence, from these and similar observations, it has been deduced that the eye obtains its knowledge of the printed forms by what may be symbolised as a series of sectional and overlapping photographs.

The relation of these numerous movements and pauses to the question of reading fatigue will be at once recognised, and their importance need not be insisted upon. During the minute or two within which we read the page of a book we have made perhaps 150 of these adjustments, each involving a carefully graduated movement and the utmost precision of fixation for clear vision. It is evident that this is greatly in excess of either the number of movements or the accuracy of adjustment that would be required in the same period of normal observation. The only thing analogous to it is the rapid eye movement in railway travelling before alluded to, and this is only more trying because less habitual and more irregular. It is, indeed, habit which saves the adult from feeling the full force of the fatigue, but only slowly does it come to the aid of the beginner, to whom the first steps in the reading process must be very wearying if long continued. It has been noted that proportionately fewer pauses occur in short lines, which are, therefore, less fatiguing to read. This, together with the greater ease of accommodation, and the less distance through which the eye has to travel back to the beginning of the next, has caused experts to strongly advocate the use of shorter lines than prevail at present, and also lines of uniform length. The breaking of the line to the right or left for the insertion of illustrations is undesirable, particularly for children, in whom we wish to cultivate a habit of easy and rapid fixation. For comfortable reading the eye has to find, as it were, the set of the page, and tends to get into a rhythmical swing from line to line, but this can only be done when lines are of even length. In broken lines the eyes of unpractised readers want to go on to the end, and show some hesitancy in fixing the beginning of the next, a fact which tends to cultivate slow and over-cautious reading. It has, indeed, been suggested that to enable the eye, especially of children, to easily and quickly fixate the commencement of each line, a slight indentation should be made to the left of every alternate line of type.

The weather last week was decidedly more favourable towards indoor amusement than the preceding week and as a result the picture palaces did well. It was an exceptionally keen week for competition for in addition to the regular theatres we had in our midst the remarkable historical picture, "Sixty Years a Queen." This great film was on view in the Plymouth Guildhall, and the spacious building was well filled at each performance. I had the privilege of witnessing the production on the first day, when it was patronised by the Mayor of Plymouth. There were also present by invitation about sixty members of the Three Towns Veteran Association, and it was quite refreshing to see how the old warriors intently followed the incidents recounting the life and reign of Queen Victoria.

At the Belgrave Electric Theatre, Mr. Mont Gilpin provided his supporters with a rare good round of films. "Stolen Tapestries" was excellent, and the same remark can be applied to "Through Flaming Paths." "Suzanne Comes to Stay" was exclusively submitted at this theatre, and it gained, as it deserved to do, high enconiums from young and old. As a change of programme in mid-week, the leading film was "Under False Suspicion."

At the Theatre de Luxe, Mr. H. W. Knowles, the manager and licensee, regaled his patrons with tip-top films. Dramas were the leading feature, and I was much struck with those entitled "Marie's Devotion" and "The Mystery of the Express Car." Two side-splitting farcical comedies were exhibited in "Shelley and the Turkey Trot" and "Bunny's Mistake." For the second part of the week "For the Honour of the Seventh" stood out as the best thing in the bill of fare, although it was among worthy company. "Life in the British Navy" is booked for this theatre.

The delightful and cosy Theatre Elite, so well conducted by Mr. C. Halderson Rundle, provided visitors with enjoyable entertainment. "Through the Storm" made a more than ordinary appeal. "A Great Hunt in Russia" was as instructive as it was interesting. "Her Wedding Day" was also a good story. "Love or a Throne" proved to be one of the best pictures submitted at this theatre for some time.

At the Cinedrome, in Ebrington Street, "The "Golden Beetle" was the outstanding production in a good entertainment.

"The great family entertainment" is the term by which Mr. Sydney Boultwood presses his programmes upon the public at the Electric Theatre, Devonport, and he is a good judge, for no matter when you visit his popular house there is always a good show and a good audience. He made a feature with "The Golden Pathway," and it excited general admiration. "The Gusher" and "A Game of Cards" were also films of high merit. "The Curse of Gold" made a drama of deep interest. The orchestra did their share of accompaniment with gratifying effectiveness. The programme was made all the more enjoyable by the inclusion of a variety turn.

Mr. Cecil Frost's principal "draw" among a good collection of pictures was the detective drama, "The Iron Man."

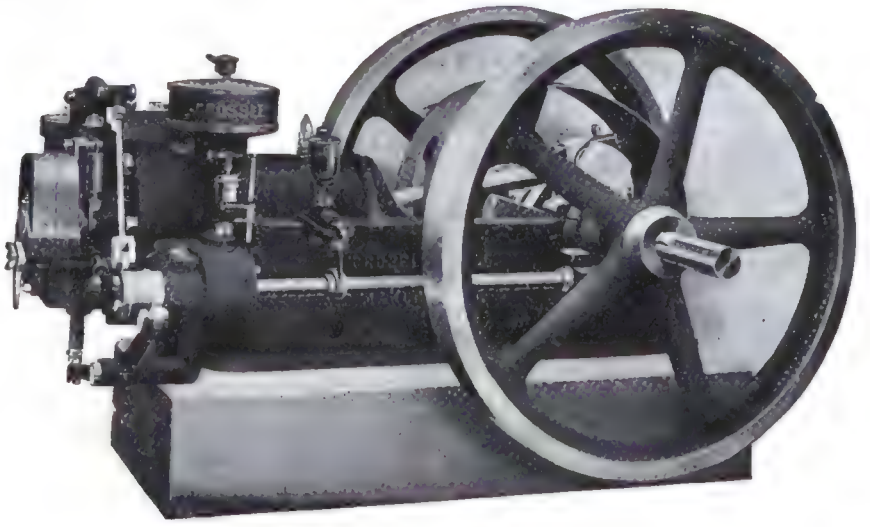
THE CHEAPEST CURRENT.

If there's one place above another where Crossley Gas and Oil Engines excel, it's in the dynamo room of a Cinema Theatre—and why?



First, because that's a place above all others where reliability must be maintained, day by day, week by week, and year by year.

Second, because it's a place where absolutely steady running is essential to the best pictures. Thirdly, because it's a place where economies must—we repeat must, be effected if the show is to yield its best profits in these days of strenuous Cinema competition.

Cut out these three essentials—reliability, steady lighting, and economy—and where would you be? Who would come regularly to your show if breakdowns were always occurring, if the pictures flicker and dance because of the unsteady voltage at the arc, and if it costs so much for current that you can't afford to give your patrons those many little inexpensive attentions that would confirm them into w becoming regular occupants of your best seats?

Perhaps the last, the money-saving question, is the most important of any. Even a few shillings a week, judiciously spent, will promote the confidence and loyalty of your patrons to a surprising extent. "Please your patrons, and they'll please you." That's the motto

BITS FROM BOLTON.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The outstanding picture of the last fortnight has probably been shown at the Queen's Theatre in "How Wild Animals Live," and it drew multitudes of people during the seven days it was screened. Of course, it was a foregone conclusion that the ever-on-the-watch cinema man would not miss such an important event to Lancashire people as the Cup Final, and a rousing picture it was, too. Apart from these two projections the last fourteen days have been eventful ones at the Queen's and some excellent programmes have been fully appreciated. "In the Bishop's Carriage" and "Unto the Third and Fourth Generation" found favour, and such humorous plays as "Why Girls Leave Home" and "Some Nerve" broke the record in laughter producing. Then there were "Annettee Kellerman" "Winter Sports in Sweden" and "A Noise from the Deep." Although this was the second appearance of the latter Keystone absurdity, it proved as popular as ever. The repetition was by request.

Turning from Bradshawgate to Deansgate, Mr. W. Sutton has had two weeks of real good business also, and certainly the shows of late have been deserving of patronage. I generally spend an enjoyable evening there every week and was especially interested in one of W. W. Jacobs' stories, "The Second String." "The White Lie" also took well, while the Cup Final was a popular feature, and in the dramatic line, "Under the Mask" and "In the Dredger's Claw" were stars. "Fleeting Fortune" and "Some Nerve" aroused plenty of laughter. "Double Dealings" was a most absorbing work and made an appearance before a magnificent afternoon audience. A considerable number of youngsters attend the matinées. "The measure of a Man" was another good drama, and in lighter vein were "A Misplaced Foot" and "Tiny Tim and the Chimney Sweep." "True Irish Hearts" was a much appreciated "star."

"The God of Girzah" carried all before it at the Gem, where crowded houses have been the rule. "The Wife" and "A Friend in Need" were exceptionally attractive. "Any Port in a Storm," "Some Nerve" and "Sammy's Double Bass" were productive of roars of laughter, the youngsters being especially pleased.—At Runworth Theatre, Mr. Parnell put on "The Empty Cot" and "The Next Generation" as "stars," and they proved excellent draws. "C-h-i-c-k-e-n spells Chicken" and "Count that Counted" provoked some real fun. Later, "Thor" was screened and proved a tremendous attraction. It was backed up by "Coward or Hero," "A Pair of Schemers," "The Gusher" and "The Special Officer," not forgetting to mention the "Pathé Gazette."

Up Fletcher Street way there were all-round programmes. "Thieves and the Cross," "The Children's Hour," "The King of the Seven Dials," "Faithful Unto Death" and "Green Eye of the Yellow God" were among the best of the dramas, and "Mike Murphy's Dream," "When Dreams Come True" and "Clara's Mysterious Toys" drove dull care away.—A success was booked at the Bee Hive Picture Palace in the film, "Alone in the Jungle." In addition there were "Sea Dogs" and many exceedingly good laughable pictures.

OUR POSTER GALLERY.

To-day (Thursday) marks the issue of a special production by the Thomas A. Edison Company, dealing with the romantic, yet troublous, days of Henry VIII. of England. As befits one of their most artistic efforts in the direction of historical drama, and a play wherein that consummate artiste, Miss Mary Fuller, appears, the publicity matter is of an equally fine standard. The poster illustrated above will be seen to contain an excellent sketch of Miss Fuller as the Princess, and is an admirable specimen of artistic colour printing.

THE WRIGHT ELECTRICAL SALES COMPANY, LIMITED.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, the creditors of the Wright Electrical Sales Company, Limited, Leeds, were called together recently at the Central Bank Chambers, Leeds. It was reported that the shareholders of the company had passed the usual resolution in favour of voluntary liquidation, and had appointed Mr. A. France to act as liquidator. A statement of affairs was presented by the liquidator which disclosed total liabilities of £2,562 17s. 10d. The indebtedness to the trade was £306 4s. 5d., and there was a cash creditor for £600, while the National Provincial Bank of England were scheduled for £1,560 13s. 5d. There was also a fully secured creditor for £5 16s. 4d., who held securities valued at £11. The assets were estimated to realise £1,191 10s. 1d., less £22 2s. 9d. for preferential claims, leaving net assets of £1,169 7s. 4d., or a deficiency of £1,303 10s. 6d. It was stated that the company was registered on March 7, 1910, with a nominal capital of £2,000, divided into 2,000 shares of the face value of £1. each. The company was formed to take over the business carried on by Mr. H. Wright, under the style of Wright Sales Company, and the consideration paid to the vendor was the allotment to him of fully paid shares. The balance-sheets of the company were presented, and it appeared that up to May, 1911, a net loss was incurred of £300. During the following twelve months there was a profit made of £120, while in the succeeding year there was a profit of £65. During the last year there had been a loss on the trading of over £1,000. The result of the trading since the commencement of the company had been a loss of £1,135. The large loss made during the last year was due to the fact that the company had been experimenting with a patent cinematograph. A considerable quantity of material had been used on the patent for which, so far, there had been no return. In September, 1912, debentures were issued to Mr. W. Newbould, in consideration of that gentleman guaranteeing the overdraft at the bank, which then stood at £1,050. The debenture was duly issued, and it was stated that it was in order. After the company had passed resolutions for voluntary liquidation, the debenture holder appointed Mr. France to act as receiver. The creditors decided to confirm the voluntary liquidation of the company, with Mr. France as liquidator.

ALLEGED BREACH OF CONTRACT.

At the Ashford County Court, Mr. E. Taylor, proprietor of the Cinema de Luxe, Ashford, sued the Fenning Film Service, Limited, for £25 damages for alleged breach of contract.

Plaintiff stated that he had received a circular from the defendants offering to supply an exclusive film of the Blake v. Wells contest for £5 for three nights. On the morning after the contest his manager—Mr. Childs—'phoned the defendants, and their manager—Mr. Carter—after some conversation, agreed to hire the film to him from March 23-5 for £4. He was certain it was Mr. Carter's voice he heard at the other end of the 'phone; he had frequently spoken to him before. Mr. Taylor himself also spoke to the manager, and heard him agree to the terms. About 4 p.m. he received a telegram from defendants saying they could not accept £4. He at once telegraphed that he would give £5, but received another telegram stating that the company could not book it at all to him. The manager was positive that Mr. Carter was the spokesman as he had also conversed with him about a berth. Subsequently a rival picture show in the town produced the film. He estimated the damage he had received owing to loss of takings at £25.

For the defendants it was denied Mr. Carter had spoken to Mr. Taylor or Mr. Childs over the 'phone. Mr. Carter admitted that his secretary, Mr. Cross, had taken the message, and despite his orders, accepted Mr Taylor's offer. He was informed of this when he returned to the office about 4 o'clock, and immediately sent a wire to Mr. Taylor, stating that the firm could not accept the £4. Just then the proprietors of the other cinema hall in Ashford arrived, and witness allowed them to hire the film for the following Monday for £10. Afterwards Mr. Taylor wired offering £5, but witness declined this.

His Honour, Judge Shortt, in giving judgment, remarked that it was not for him to say which of the parties were telling the truth. The onus of establishing the fact that a contract had been made rested with the plaintiff, and in his opinion he had not done so. In view of the fact that Mr. Taylor had evidently been misled, no doubt innocently, into believing that his offer had been accepted by defendants, although he gave judgment for the defendants, he would not allow them costs.

Bankruptcy.

The public examination of H. Rockett, cinematograph theatre proprietor, Royal Tierney Theatre, 64, Edward Street, Brighton, was held on May 6th, at Brighton, when the ranking liabilities were returned at £520, and there was an estimated deficiency of £400. The Hon. S.O.N. Collins (barrister) appeared for the petitioning creditor, and Mr. McClean for another creditor. The principal part of the public examination was directed to elucidating the exact nature of the business relations between the debtor and a London solicitor, who had been concerned with him in the Royal Tierney Theatre. The debtor returned no personal liabilities, and in his replies to the Official Receiver (Mr. T. Gourlay), said the whole of his liabilities were in respect of work done and materials supplied in connection with the theatre. He maitained that the solicitor above mentioned had financed the building of the theatre, which was opened last September, and that he was really responsible for debts incurred, and had not repudiated his liability, though he had not met the later debts. This solicitor, he said, had sunk several thousands of pounds in the venture, and debtor, though nominally the lessee and manager, had really been his paid servant. In reply to Mr. Collins, debtor said he had never paid any rent under his lease of the theatre. To Mr. McClean debtor said that if he could have got the mortgage he would

What we say we stand by.

We hereby declare that our Open Market Release for June 29

Child O' My Heart

By BANNISTER MERWIN.

It ranks amongst the finest films yet produced by this Company. The photography is wonderful, the acting convincing and finished, the settings pleasingly English, whilst the story has a genuine interest for everyone.

The story deals with a simple old countryman whose wife is dead and whose whole interest in life is wrapped up in his daughter. She loves a rich young man who insists that she shall cut her old life when she marries. This she does, but her longing for her humble home and noble old father, the picture of his loneliness, and the reunion are so well depicted that this simple story becomes a real gem. It is a peep into a home, and unveils feelings which are as a rule buried from sight.

Every Audience will appreciate this Film.

LEWIS GILBERT and EDNA FLUGRATH.

The Charm of Mary Pickford.

"Tessibel of the Storm Country," by the Famous Players Film Company.

It is rare indeed to find in an actress so young as Miss Mary Pickford an art so mature and so finished as that which she commands. This rarity is a serious thing for the cinematograph. On the ordinary stage your leading lady, carefully painted and wigged and padded, may play juvenile parts almost irrespective of her years. But the moving picture camera will tolerate no such deceptions. The first essential is that an actress shall look her part physically—and that is why the picture theatre has given us so many leading ladies, charming to look upon in their unassisted youthfulness, but for too inexperienced to be worthy as artistes of the important parts they are called upon all too prematurely to play. Miss Pickford stands almost alone as an actress of exceptional youth and beauty, who is also an extraordinarily accomplished artiste.

To attempt any analysis of Miss Pickford's art would be nearly as wantonly useless as to seek the secret of a flower's loveliness by plucking it to bits. Natural, spontaneous, entirely unaffected, her art is as much a part of herself as her hands or her mouth or her eyes. In short, her art is herself, and her only method is to be just what she feels at the moment, according to the part she is playing.

In spite of the many splendid pictures of almost every kind which that wonderful organisation, The Famous Players Film Company, have now given us, we have always felt that the films by which they will longest be remembered, and for which the public owes its deepest debt of gratitude, are those wonderful pieces of whimsical comedy mingled with pathos which they have produced in co-operation with Miss Pickford. These films represent something which cannot be excelled by any other company in the world. There are many young comediennes, and several of them are people of great charm and talent, but it is only Mary Pickford, throughout the whole range of Picturedom, who can create through the silent medium of the cinematograph just that particular kind of sentiment—ineffably sweet, joyously young, and sometimes, if one may put it so, almost unbearably heartbreaking in its tender pathos—which has become identified with her name, and with which we are all familiar.

Since it is Miss Pickford's art which counts first, and the play in which she happens to be acting at the moment only second, one is always inclined, in reviewing one of her films, to neglect the latter in one's enthusiasm for the former. In the present instance, however, it would be really a pity to do this, because "Tessibel of the Storm Country" is notable on its own account as a play, besides being a most admirable vehicle for the charm of Mary Pickford. In general character it is not unlike that earlier masterpiece, "Caprice." Although however, it provides Miss Pickford with a largely similar part, it strikes a somewhat more serious note and is, on the whole, a better play.

Tess, "of the Storm Country" (a region whose name will convey less to English people than it does to Americans) is a waif of the sea-shore who dwells with her father and a few other outcasts in a wretched hovel upon the beach. These poor creatures, who are a sort of sea gypsies, rely upon the ocean for their living, and as they pay no rent, they are held in high disfavour by a local landowner who, being himself "unco' guid," regards them as disreputable vagabonds. Tess herself, as represented with infinite charm by Miss Pickford, is a wild little being whom the kicks of the world have kept in a condition of semi-savagery and general mistrustfulness. The story shows how Tess' father is wrongfully imprisoned through the agency of the unfeeling landowner, how she gets to know and subsequently to love and be loved by, the latter's son, and how, at the risk of her own happiness and honour, she shields from disgrace the same man's daughter who, as the result of a tragically terminating passion, is left with an illegitimate child. It would be impossible to do justice to the tale in the small space at our disposal, especially in view of the fact that it has already, as we believe, appeared in book form. It is full of the most delicately sweet touches of pathos, mingled with enchanting humour. Whether it be the spectacle of the unruly Tess having her hair washed, or her equally diverting scene with the irate landlord; the dreadfully pathetic attempt—somewhat similar to a famous incident in the life of another Tess—to secure baptism for the child of love; the tragic scenes in which the landlord's daughter, unwedded yet widowed, contemplates with terror her approaching motherhood;—always, throughout the whole masterly production teeming with scenes both grave and gay, we are held enthralled by the perfect art with which this strangely fascinating tale is unfolded to us. In addition to the charm of the acting and the story, moreover, we have constant delight from the numerous very beautiful sea and landscapes, which are quite a notable feature of the production. It would be possible to make one or two trifling criticisms—to suggest that the religious folk are a wee bit exaggerated in their vindictive spite, to wonder why the rich girl could not have contributed in some small way to the upkeep of her child, and to ask why it was necessary for the unhappy girl to die at the end, thus causing the play to finish on a rather unnecessary note of gloom—but they are very small and mig t quite well be replied to. As a whole, we can scarcely remember a film which gave us so much real pleasure as "Tessibel of the Storm Country." It is calculated to provoke more laughter and tears combined than fifty ordinary films, and it is quite certain, in its simple sweetness, to appeal with equal force to everyone who sees it. It is a picture which ought to visit every cinematograph theatre in the land.

SNIPPETS FROM SOUTHPORT.

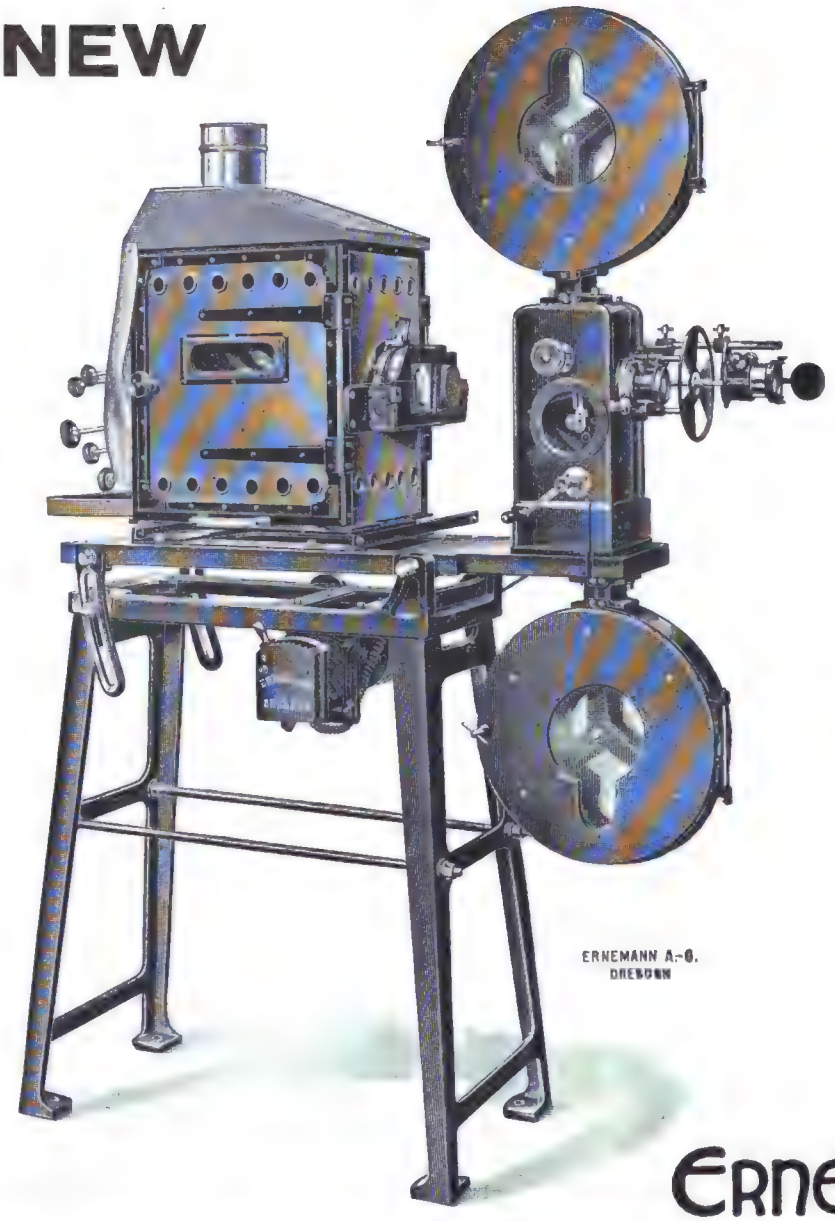
(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Taking the country as a whole it is an undeniable fact that managers of picture theatres while not anticipating dreadfully dull business, do not look forward to full houses at every performance during the summer months, unless, of course, they secure some extraordinary attractions. And yet there are places making up the exception which proves the rule. Southport is one of those places. Its season cannot be said to start in one particular month and finish in another. Its population is augmented by visitors all the year round. Still, there are more strangers in the town from the beginning of May to the end of September, and, naturally, the cinemas derive some financial benefit from the influx of people to the town.

Immediately the doors of the Picture Palace, Lord Street, were opened to the public, now some years ago, the class of entertainment provided was such that it secured a name peculiar to itself, and the reputation then gained has in no way been dimmed by the march of time, bringing in its train keener opposition than ever. The secret of the success is the efficient management of Mrs. Parker, and the business acumen of Mr. H. Kennedy, the secretary, who is responsible for the selection of films. His good taste has enabled the numerous patrons to spend a pleasurable two hours because of the exhibition of such films as "The Golden Beetle," "Eileen of Erin," "Kronstadt" and "Threads of Destiny," which have been the respective "stars" for the two distinct programmes during the past two weeks.

Mr. Geoffrey Hill had scarcely had time to look round the Picturedrome, Lord Street, before it was announced that coffee and biscuits would be supplied free at the evening performances—a new departure, which so far has not been followed by any of the other houses locally. Mr. Hill mentioned to me the other day that those who visit his theatre appreciate this provision, and that it will certainly be continued. When asked about business he smiled knowingly, and no words were necessary. He is highly satisfied, for there is an ever-increasing clientèle, and so are the pleasure seekers. To merely indicate the character of the "fare" provided, "A Tragedy in the Clouds" was followed by "Officer John Donovan," and then last week the chief attractions were for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "Duty," and later, "Where is Happiness?"

In my weekly tour of the Southport theatres one thing has been strikingly manifest, and that is the increased support given to the Neville Street Picture House since Mr. William Walker went there to guide its destinies. I will just mention one unusual thing I noticed. Upon paying a visit there the other night I saw that four rows of the most expensive seats were reserved and they could not have provided accommodation for less than 160 people. Surely this is ample testimony to the drawing propensities of the pictures provided, and it is just as well to say that Mr. Walker has had some very good exclusives. To state that he has screened "For East is East," "In the Sultan's Power," "At the Hour of Dawn" and "Love or a Throne" as the "top-liners" is to demonstrate that Mr. Walker finds films of a thrilling character suit his supporters admirably. In a conversation I had with him one afternoon I found him in the best of spirits, and when asked how "things were going" he replied in typical fashion, "Merry and bright," as usual.



Mr. Frederick M. Jones, at the Empire Picture Theatre, caters for some hundreds of persons weekly. I can always spend an enjoyable evening there, for this genial manager has such a splendid idea of what a programme for a cinema performance should be. Mr. Jones informs me that while business has been slacker since Easter, he has no cause for complaint, and, of course, he truthfully points out that no manager could reasonably hope to have four crowded houses daily as he had at Easter. A few of the many fine films he has introduced to Southport audiences recently have been "The Golden Beetle," "Trapped," "A Race for a Million" and "Thor." Surely his keenest critics could not ask for anything better. At any rate, they continue their patronage, and are always certain that by taking a friend they will give that friend satisfaction.

Note how "The Golden Beetle" caught the eye of the Southport managers. Three houses were showing it simultaneously, and yet all did well with it.

Application for the renewal of the seven-day music licences for the Picturedrome, Picture Palace, Nevill Street Picture House, Empire Picture Theatre, Birkdale Picture Palace, Tivoli, Palladium, and the Pier Pavilion were made at the special transfer sessions held on Thursday last. It was anticipated that the applications would be granted, and such was the case, but in giving the decision the Chairman (Mr. W. J. Boothroyd) was responsible for a rather belated echo of the Sunday cinema question. He said, "I am requested to say that in view of the fact that the Watch Committee, which is a representative body, has granted the licences of these picture houses and other places for seven days, it is felt the Licensing Committee, by a majority of the Bench, can take no other step in fulfilling their duty than by granting the music licences for the same period. There is a strong feeling on the part of the members of the Licensing Committee that the Watch Committee are ill-advised in this matter, but it it not for us to judge them. They are in the hands of the town and ratepayers."

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

Hull exhibitors have given evidence time and again of their originality of ideas, not only with regard to the selection of programmes but in introducing perfectly legitimate means of advertising to make a success of those particular programmes, yet at the same time it is a pleasing thing that in none of our picture palaces have distinctly supplementary attractions been employed. A picture show is a picture show, and such in every case has it remained in Hull.

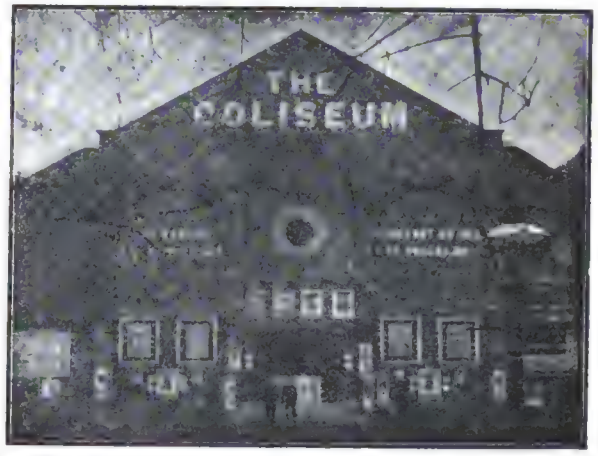
The wisdom of Mr. William Morton in building the new Majestic within a stone's-throw of the Princes Hall might be questioned, but I am confident he would not undertake a matter such as this without the gravest consideration being given to it from all its aspects. Mr. Morton has a plan of his own, and is certain that success will attend his venture. His philosophy is here in a nutshell: "Some people like the long film which lasts nearly all the programme, and some a programme composed of a diversity of shorter subjects. They are two distinct classes, and I cannot cater for them both at once at the Princes Hall, therefore I propose to give the long films at one hall and the shorter ones at the other."

The wisdom of not attaching too much importance to what I described last week as "the likelihood of a picture palace in the Prince's Avenue district" has been proved. Locally there has been a good deal of discussion as to the proposed cinema which was to have been in Westbourne Avenue, and as a result a board which had actually been put up bearing the words "Site for the Westbourne Picture House" has been very quickly removed.

"Military week" at the Hessle Road Picture Palace has been a huge success. The splendid British Army film, taken by Messrs. Gaumont, has been shown during the week, the first three parts in the first half of the week and the remaining three parts in the second half. Mr. W. R. Nicholson arranged for great doings and was bent on making the film answer its purpose. Union Jacks have been waving over the cinema and an array of red, white and blue lamps were also employed to demonstrate loyalty. On special nights music was supplied by the West Hull Excelsior Band, who went on a short march before entering the cinema. The big event was on Thursday night, when the band of the East Riding Royal Garrison Artillery, accompanied by over 300 officers and men, marched to the picture palace. There were great doings and a packed house. This week Mr. Nicholson has "The Road to Ruin," featuring Mr. George Gray.

Mr. B. Firth, manager of the Eureka Palace, Dairycotes, was well rewarded for the extra expense to which he was put in obtaining "Give Us This Day" exclusively for the Eureka, for it has been witnessed by packed houses every night. When I called one day last week Mr. Firth asked me if I would wait whilst he "distributed the bread." I was bewildered for a minute or two, but I replied "Yes." The next minute the lights were turned up and I saw a large pile of bread-loaves on the stage in front of the screen. Mr. Firth then mounted the stage and delivered a speech. "The gifts are small," he said, "but they are given with a good heart." Mr. Firth did not believe in preaching a film-sermon to hungry bodies, and each night during the screening of "Give Us This Day ——" he gave loaves of bread to deserving widows, the largest loaves to the poorest people. As the manager left the stage there was an outburst of applause which spoke eloquently of the appreciation of the poor people for these kindly acts.

The Magnet, West Dock Avenue, has had a very good attraction this week in "The Blacksmith's Crime." During last year the Magnet was entirely altered and refurnished and given a more inviting exterior appearance by the erection of a new frontage. It is a good sign, therefore, that the management are contemplating enlarging the building by taking in about 20 ft. at the rear, and it is expected that the alterations will be commenced before very long. There will in all probability be other changes, to which reference will be made later. Suffice it to say that the Magnet is surviving opposition with honours with a run of first release programmes.



I notice there is a big improvement in the appearance of the pictures at the Hessle Road Picture Palace just now. The two machines used have been fited with extra powerful lenses and the screen has been enlarged more than a foot all round. The result is a very fine picture, both large and clear.

According to reports I hear, the new Cleveland Picture House at Wilmington is rapidly justifying its existence, and the directors have little to complain of so far. Mr. Malam, the manager, is turning his previous experience to good account.

Hull readers will be pleased to hear that Mr. Alfred Blackman is getting on well in his new post at Grimsby.

AN ALL-LUBIN WEEK.

In appreciation of the drawing power of Lubin films, Mr. Montanini, of Manchester, has made arrangements for an all-Lubin week at the whole of the halls on his company's circuit. A start was made last Monday at the Coliseum, Ardwick Green, Manchester, where crowded houses were the result. Our illustration gives a general idea of the outside display at the Coliseum.

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

"I know what I want," said Firemaster Waddell, of Glasgow, in the course of cross-examination before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, which is considering the Glasgow Celluloid Bill. "If I get all these films on the top floor it will be all right." Since the industry was established the efforts made by the various film firms to minimise danger from fire have met with the approval and approbation of all the authorities, the firemaster included. Now, however, a Celluloid Bill has been considered a necessity, and evidence as to why it is required had to be produced, with the result that the firemaster expressed himself as above. Should the Bill become law as it stands it will have a most serious effect on several firms. Four of the principal renters have had their premises specially adapted for the purposes of their business, and three of these occupy ground-floor and basement premises, while the other occupies the first and second floors. Should they be compelled to lease top flats in addition, the extra expense will add materially to the hiring rates. Other renters are in a more favourable position. Several already occupy top flats, and one of the largest has his premises in a single storey building, far removed from the congested part of the city. "The public would appreciate special legislation, and feel safer if it were carried out," was another sentence in Mr. Waddell's evidence. The public does not concern itself about the storage of films, and nine out of every ten citizens in Glasgow could not say off-hand, where the film hirers' premises are situated. There has been no demand for the Bill, and the general opinion in the Trade is that it is entirely unnecessary, and that the "danger" has been unduly magnified.

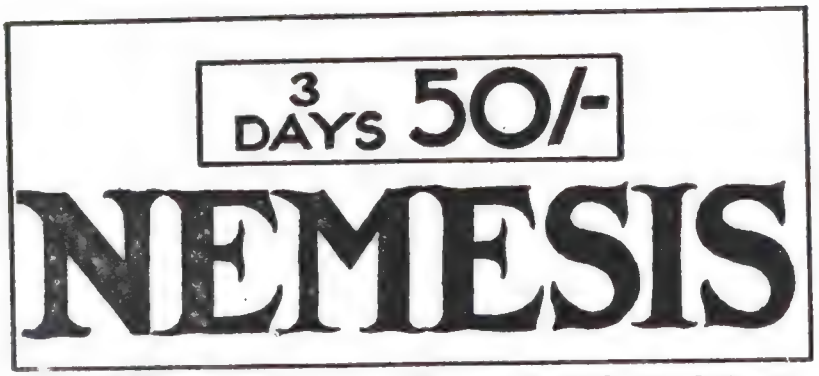
In the Edinburgh Sheriff Court on Monday, before Sheriff Maconachie, the Provost, magistrates and councillors of the Burgh of Dalkeith presented a petition praying for the confirmation of by-laws for the regulation of theatres and other places of entertainment within the burgh. The by-laws provided that no theatres or other places of entertainment should, except in special cases, be permitted to open on Sundays, on week days not to open earlier than 8 a.m. nor to keep open later than 11 p.m. Objection to the by-laws was made by Mr. D. M. Wilson, advocate, instructed by Mr. R. Duncan, solicitor, secretary to the Edinburgh and East of Scotland Branch of the Exhibitors' Association, on behalf of Mr. Herman, of the Dalkeith Electric Picture Palace. Mr. Wilson asked that the terms of the by-laws be modified, so that Mr. Herman could continue to give his entertainments on Sundays after Church hours. For the past eighteen months the entertainments had been given on Sundays after Church hours, and no charge was made for admission, a collection being taken on entering. Another cinematograph entertainment had been given in the Forester's Hall on Sundays during the last two years. Lately an agitation was raised against Sunday opening, but at a public meeting called to oppose Sunday opening, only forty people attended, which, Mr. Wilson contended, was an indication that the proposal to stop the entertainments was objected to. A petition against Sunday opening had been prepared, but contained only 200 signatures out of a population of 8,000. The attendance at the two houses on Sunday was usually 800 or 1,000.

His Lordship pointed out that such places opening on Sunday was an absolute innovation in the customs of Scotland.

Mr. Wilson replied that other places in Scotland—Lochgelly, Methill and Broxburn—had Sunday entertainments.

His Lordship: The Town Council think it is for the good of the town that they should have these by-laws in their hands. Can I say that this is unreasonable?

Mr. J. C. Sturrock, solicitor, Deputy Town Clerk for Dalkeith, submitting the case for the petitioners, said that Dalkeith was the centre of a large mining district of Midlothian, and the majority of audiences were drawn from the outlying districts—Rosewell, Bonnyrigg, Newtongrange, etc. These places were provided with picture houses of their own, but the proprietors were prohibited from opening them on Sundays, with the result that the inhabitants came over to the Dalkeith houses. He admitted that these entertainments had the effect of clearing the streets, and thus assisting the police, but observed that when these places emptied themselves there was a good deal of disturbance, which was objected to by the inhabitants.



In granting confirmation of the by-laws, his Lordship said that he did not see his way to refuse confirmation. Cinematograph entertainments were not a necessity of life, and he could not think it was unreasonable for the guardians of the town to say it was for its benefit that they should not be open on Sunday.

THE PICTURE PLAY.

[Under this heading we shall deal with the construction and production of picture plays. Correspondence is cordially invited. We are willing to criticise scenarios if a reading fee of 2s. 6d. be enclosed with each.]

Foreign Films and Their Characteristics.

Cinematography being so essentially international an art, and its products being so freely circulated throughout the world, it is somewhat strange at first sight that the work of each different country should remain so largely individual, not only in subject matter and general character but even in details of treatment. In most cases one can recognise the origin of a film from such evidences as the methods of its actors and the technical peculiarities of its lighting and photography, not to mention more obvious points such as physiognomy, costume and scenery. The truth is that the producers of each nation have approached this new art from different standpoints and, in consequence, their results are sharply distinctive except in those basic matters which they must necessarily all hold in common. Just as we have "schools" in painting, so we are beginning to have "schools" in cinematography. One may talk of a film as belonging to the Italian School, the French School or the American School in the same way that one classes pictures under various headings.

This absence of sameness is a very desirable and excellent thing. It shows that the cinematograph is a medium for expression, quite as flexible and quite as able to embody individual characteristics as any other artistic vehicle, and not merely a soulless reproducing machine. At the same time, although it would naturally be far from anyone's wish to attempt to reduce all films to one dead level of conformity, there is naturally a great deal which may be learned by one school of producers from the works of another school.

It is easy to pick holes, but although we may in a negative way learn wholesome lessons from the faults of our fellows, we can derive still greater benefit from an intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of their virtues. In the matter of films there are object lessons on "what to avoid" in practically every picture one can think of. On the other hand, however, the same pictures probably contain as many practical illustrations of "what to imitate"—and a consideration of these latter is both pleasanter and more profitable.

The art of the picture play was created on the Continent of Europe, whatever may have been the birthplace of the mechanical invention which made this art possible, and the most interesting artistic developments continue, on the whole, to emanate from the same source. In America cinematography was placed upon a sound commercial basis. Its commercial possibilities were first realised by our cousins across the Atlantic, who with their keen business instinct, energy and skill in practical affairs quickly transformed the scientific toy into the foundation of a gigantic industry. This commercial aspect, as well as the peculiar trade conditions accompanying it, has had a double influence upon the American film—a harmful influence in that it has produced a rather soulless, machine-made effect upon some pictures, and beneficial in that it has secured a smartness of finish and a general technical efficiency whose absence in many Continental pictures is still responsible for a certain amount of amateurishness. One feels of the American producer, as one knows him through his work, that, however much his artistic capabilities may vary, he is always a competent professional. Sentimental rather than romantic, practical rather than imaginative, his choice of subject-matter is for realistic modern drama and comedy rather than for picturesque historical stories or for poetical fantasies. In treating any practical tale of everyday life, reflecting vividly the everyday joys and sorrows of his fellow creatures, he has few equals, and it is from his work in this direction that the European producer can learn most.

His country's wonderful past and its ancient remains, his own passionate and dramatic temperament, and the favourable material by which he is everywhere surrounded have inevitably lead the Italian producer to revel in the more purely pictorial and spectacular possibilities of the cinematograph. Although he can handle modern subjects also with very considerable skill, it is in works which give scope for poetical fancy, epic splendour, passionate emotionalism and brilliant pictorial beauty that he is at his best.

In the work of the French producer we find a curious blending of the romantic and the realistic which is thoroughly in accord with the national temperament. There is, moreover, a strong vein of eroticism, an extraordinary sympathy and delicacy in handling human emotion, and an intensely keen dramatic instinct, together with a full measure of that magnetic vivacity and shrewd sparkling humour for which the French are so noted. As a whole, French acting is probably the best in the world, and it is, therefore, to the histrionic side of their films that one turns with the greatest admiration.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

Many cinemas throughout the country have been used for patriotic recruiting work on the occasion of the showing of the British Army film, but few have been the scene of such notable doings as was the case with the Peckham Hippodrome last week. Mr. E. A. Kent, the manager, should be a proud man, for has he not worked in conjunction with the Mayor and Corporation of Camberwell, and with Major-General Sir C. Sclater, Adjutant-General of the War Office; Brigadier-General Fitton, Director of Recruiting; and other notabilities? Moreover, he himself was captured in the net spread during this Colours Campaign Week on behalf of all branches of His Majesty's Forces. Mr. Kent's sympathies were attracted to the work of that useful organisation, the Red Cross Society. A great many recruits were secured for the Regular Army, the local Territorial Force, and the Red Cross Society as the result of the opening of an office at the Hippodrome, where the Army film was exhibited four times each day. At the evening representations the martial setting was added to by the performances of the band of the Camberwell Battalion of the National Reserve. It was the desirability of providing headquarters for these veterans that led to the inception of the Colours Week on the part of the Mayor, whose task was rendered easy of accomplishment when the British Army film was introduced a few months since. Through the generosity of the proprietors of the Peckham Hippodrome a sum of probably £150 will be available for the headquarters building fund from the proceeds of the showing of the British Army film. Various detachments of troops have marched to the Hippodrome each day of the week, the lead being given on Monday by the Foot Guards, who were welcomed at the Camberwell boundary by the Mayor and Mayoress.

A spectacle that would rejoice the hearts of managers even where continuous displays are given is that to be seen on Monday afternoons at 2.30 outside the Canterbury Theatre of Varieties in Westminster Bridge Road. Taking advantage of the fact that there are many persons who are not at work on that day, the manager has instituted a weekly matinée. Long queues are to be seen awaiting the opening of the house.

Brixton Palladium is the first in south-west London to show the "Cup Final Mystery," which was put on during Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this week, accompanied by "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" as the other chief item for the first half of the week. "Heir to a Million" is the main attraction from Thursday onwards, this film being also exclusive to the district.

The Pavilion, Brixton, had Harry Lauder and Neil Kenyon in comic golf on the first three days this week. Exclusives for the second half are "Kronstadt" and "A Daughter of the Hills."

It is of interest to note the class of fare put forward by the two Tooting houses now in competition in the same thoroughfare. At the Broadway Palace this week the top-liners are "A Circus Girl's Romance" and "Death Sign at High Noon." Among other good fare are humorous and satirical cartoons and "Pathé's Gazette."—The recently opened Pavilion, which has drawn full houses without apparently affecting the older establishment, showed Tango dances by Phyllis Dare and George Grossmith as the leading item for three days, and the second half of the week will see the featuring of Charles Wyndham in "David Garrick." Throughout the six days also there are, as usual, Kinemacolor films.

The Picture Coliseum, Harlesden, possesses a large clientele of regular patrons. During the first half of last week Mr. B. Myall, the manager, and Mr. C. Martin, the assistant manager, have done good business with "Chelsea 7750." A neat and humorous piece of advertising was inserted in the programme. It took the form of two fingerprints thrown on the screen and described as being respectively those of a male patron killed in the rush to see "Chelsea 7750," and of a "flapper" who did see "Chelsea 7750." There was a promise of further fingerprints for this week. The star film for the second half of last week was "A Footballer's Honour." The screening of the films at this house is noticeably excellent. A Pathé projector is used.

Part of the Picture House, Harlesden, which is managed by Mr. A. W. Matcham, has just been refurnished with new plush seats. The large hall by which the theatre is approached is found very useful for storing mail-carts while mothers and children are watching the films inside. Star items last week have been "The Convict's Story" and "Love's Sunset." A strong classical programme was promised for this week, for which "Quo Vadis?" and "The Last Days of Pompeii" were engaged.

At the People's Picture Parlour, Harlesden, the main attractions this week have been "Seneschal's Diamond" and the Keystone comedy, "A Healthy Neighbourhood."

At the Prince of Wales Picture Playhouse, Harrow Road, principal films last week included "Tragedy in the Clouds," "The Gipsy Child," and "The Lure of London." "Beauty and the Barge" was also screened. Humour was also well supplied by "Diana's Dress Reform."

For the past few weeks the Blue Hall, Hammersmith, has utilised a vacant piece of land just opposite the District Railway station at Hammersmith Broadway to advertise itself by means of an immense poster, which is illuminated at night. The "standing matter" of the poster points the way to the well-known picture house, which is situated a little way down King Street, while there is a "change of copy" weekly to announce the main attractions occupying the screen to the countless multitude which passes through the busiest centre of outer West London.

Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" proved a big attraction at the Maida Vale Picture Theatre, while "And the Villain Still Pursued Her" was successful in raising many laughs. The musical selections continue to be very popular here, where "effects" are also worked.

"Caprice" was successful in "fetching them in" at the Royal, Maida Vale. I learned that business was brisk, and that several "big features" were to be included in forthcoming programmes.

Good business continues to be done at the Biograph Hall, High Road, Kilburn, where first-class programmes are submitted. The opening of the Grand Cinema and Winter Garden, which is being erected near the Biograph, is, I hear, fixed for early next month.

Travelling on to the Cosy Corner, High Road, Kilburn, where Mr. Longford is in charge of affairs, I found him screening "A Terrible Moment," which was enthusiastically received. I hear that several alteration are to be made here shortly which will add materially to the accommodation and comfort of the hall.

Mr. Harriss, of the Imperial, Edgeware Road, featured George Gray, of "Fighting Parson" fame. An orchestra of eight accompanies both the afternoon and evening performances here, where an interesting "bill of fare" is always served.

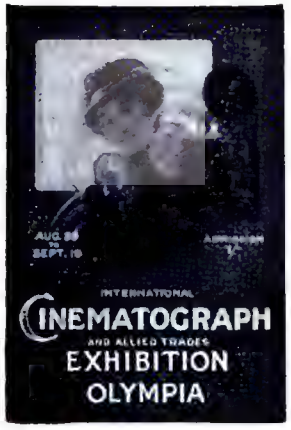
At the Electric Pavilion, Edgeware Road, I found Mr. Ashdowne very pleased with his comfortably full house. An interesting feature here is the grand organ recitals under the direction of Mr. Piena.

Mr. C. E. Best, proprietor-manager of the Picture Hall, John Street, continues to make good progress with his hall, where a continuous performance is given from 5 till 11 p.m., with popular prices of admission.

At the Recreations Theatre, Edgeware Road, Mr. Chandler was delighting his numerous patrons with "The Opium Smoker" and "Because of a Hat," both subjects being well received by a large audience.—The management of the Grand Cinema, Edgeware Road, screened "The Reclamation of a Soul," supported by a generous programme of other interesting subjects.

Messrs. Soula and Deroy continue to secure good patronage despite keen competition. The premises are shortly to be enlarged.

At Messrs. Clavering and Beck's Kilburn Palace capacity business is being done. Included in a big programme was "The Three Children." "Life" is to be a coming top-liner at this hall.



Capital business has been done during the week at the Ideal Cinema, Holloway Road, "The Witch of Salem" and "The Peril of Riches" being the top-liners. The Ideal orchestra renders agreeable selections, and there is a continuous performance from 2 to 11 p.m., the prices of admission being 3d., 6d., and 1s., and boxes 5s. and 7s. 6d.

At the Holloway Grand Pictures, where Mr. Sydney W. Lewis conducts affairs, I found a crowded house witnessing "Her Dreadful Secret." During the latter three days "King of Seven Dials" will be at the top.

The Electric Pavilion, Holloway, is featuring "A Lady of Quality" and "The Cry of a Child."—Patrons of the Highbury Imperial are given a feast of good things this week. Kinemacolor is a feature of the programme, and among the films are "Ku Klux Klan," "Vicissitudes of a Top Hat," and "Fashions in Frocks." To-day (Thursday) the programme will embrace no fewer that three two-part films—"Black Spot," "First Law of Nature," and "Too Many Maids."

Mr. G. E. Williams provides the best of everything at the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington. A strong programme includes "The Midnight Wedding," "Kinema Girls," "Training Cavalry Officers," "Saving the Homestead," and "Heartsease," with a few good variety turns.

NOTES FROM SURREY.

Another of those educational cinematograph lectures which give great promise of usefulness and popularity was given at the Coronation Hall, Surbiton, on Saturday morning by Mr. E. Stokoe, headmaster of Tolworth School. The lecture treated of animal and bird life as well as travel and industries, and both the animated pictures and the lecture were much enjoyed by the audience. By inaugurating these lectures in this district Mr. Stokoe is doing much not only to popularise cinematography but to advance education along interesting lines that make strong appeal to old and young alike. In a circular letter to local residents Mr. Stokoe makes an appeal to them to "assist this effort to make the cinematograph of educational value," and this series of lectures is an earnest attempt to direct public attention on right lines.

During the past week the management of the Cinema Palace have made strong appeal to their wide circle of patrons with "Orders Under Seal," "A Romance of Old Brittany" and "The Antique Brooch." This week the management are screening "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves," "A Bird of Prey" and "The Ring of the Rajah," the programme being varied by select comedies and two interest films, the latter always being a popular feature of the programme at this house.

The programme at the Royal County Theatre at Kingston continues to consist more of variety turns than of pictures, but the house still maintains a reputation for the ever-popular film. The Kingston Coliseum has been making a special feature of "Alone with the Devil," to which were added "The Fortune Hunters" and "Amid Raging Beasts." The management of this house are to be commended for their arresting street advertising, which never fails to attract the attention of the passers-by.

At the Talbot Theatre, Richmond, where an excellent reputation has been established for up-to-date and attractive pictures, Mr. Smithers has been showing "Beauty and the Barge," which was well received. Enterprise is reflected in the exhibition at this house of films of the local rally of Girl Scouts. This week "The Old Curiosity Shop" is the premier feature, and at the end of the week the star film will be "The Clue of the Wax Vesta."

The management of the King's Hall at Wimbledon believe in being thoroughly up to date in every way, and have recently been regaling their patrons with some of the leading films. There is no doubt of the enhanced popularity of the house, which has become a popular resort of picture-loving people in Wimbledon and district.

THE LIFE OF GENERAL VILLA.

We are informed that the multi-reel subject illustrating the life and adventures of General Villa has just been completed. Much that was exciting occurred during the production. Mr. H. E. Aitken, President of the Mutual Film Corporation, made the contract with General Villa, then a large company of Mutual players followed to Mexico. General Villa played his part between battles and skirmishes, and is first seen as a young rancher, happy in his home life and supporting his two sisters. A really engrossing drama follows, and Villa becomes leader of the Constitutionalists and defeats the Federals. Many scenes are shown taken during the battles by Mutual photographers under the agreement with Villa.

A REMARKABLE LIKENESS.

With regard to the subject of the photograph reproduced below, our Glasgow representative writes as follows:—"In my last week's notes I recorded the fact that Mr. Arthur Vivian, the managing director of the St. George's Hall, Paisley, was regarded by many as a 'double' of Buffalo Bill, the famous Wild West Scout. The photograph was taken last week when Mr.

Vivian donned the costume to 'speak' to the Wild West picture, and forms ample proof of the assertion.

"Mr. Vivian knows the value of publicity, and it may be mentioned that when he screened 'Rob Roy' at Paisley, he and his staff all dressed in the garb of old Gaul, and were kilted and plumed in their tartan array." His appearance in the above attire and his remarkable likeness to Colonel William F. Cody caused quite a stir in the old Clyde-side town.

ARMY FILM IN DERBYSHIRE.

The British Army film was shown to packed houses at the Queen's Theatre, Castleford, and on the opening night the place was visited by troops of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry and the York and Lancaster Regiment upon the invitation of Mr. W. H. Emerson and his colleagues in the management of the theatre. The troops marched to the theatre headed by the band, and their passage through the crowded streets drew a big following to the theatre. During one of the intervals Major C. R. Ingham Brooke, commanding officer, addressed the audience, and expressed thanks to the management of the theatre for the opportunity afforded by the display. On the Thursday evening the theatre was attended by the Castleford and Pontefract Territorials and the local ambulance corps.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

A Change in Baggage Checks.

The names of John Bunny and Flora Finch are sufficient guarantee for irresistible mirth whatever may be the nature of their adventures. In this film the authors have hit upon an idea which is humorous in itself, and with every assistance from producer and artistes resolves itself into a most excellent farce.

Steven Jenks and Stella Triplight are vaudeville artistes who are sent off hurriedly from New York to appear on the same night in different parts of the country. Even with the American system of baggage transport, the human element is liable to error, and a baggage agent is responsible for the confusion that arises when each performer receives the wrong trunk a few moments before the curtain goes up. There is no time to repair error, and Stella Triplight has to make the most of Jenks's stage wardrobe, while he appears in her borrowed plumes arranged as his own fancy dictates. It is needless to say, with two such comedians, that their appearance alone is enough to ensure a huge and permanent success, and when they eventually meet and the mistake is explained, they wisely resolve to work together in future and make one trunk serve for two.

Mr. Bunny and Miss Finch find unique opportunities for a display of eccentric farce, and their appearance together on the stage of the music-hall is quite enough to convulse any audience. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released June 18th. Length 1,046 ft.)

The Tragedy of the Three M's.

The chief object of this drama is evidently to introduce to us the remarkable armless gentleman, Mr. C. H. Unthan, who figures prominently in it, and whose qualities as "Man, Marvel, and Martyr" are responsible for the film's curious and, at first sight, meaningless title. The wonderful skill and ingenuity with which Mr. Unthan uses his feet in the place of his hands certainly render the film quite worth seeing, and perhaps its most interesting portion is that part of the second reel in which we are given extended glimpses of this remarkable gentleman performing his domestic duties with an adroitness and facility not always found amongst those possessing their full complement of members. The story, which is important chiefly as a medium for Mr. Unthan's exhibition of skill, is not greatly novel, but it is admirably acted and excellently staged, and it is quite effective so far as it goes. That finished actress, Mdlle. Marie von Oeser, appears as the heroine of the piece.

Altogether, "The Tragedy of the Three M's" should prove a very popular and effective entertainment. Mr. Unthan's large share in the picture gives the latter the virtue of unusualness, whilst in all other respects it is a thoroughly capable production. (Walturdaw Company, Limited. Three reels.)

Villages in the Bavarian Highlands.

This very beautifully coloured film shows many picturesque views of the many villages and small towns situated in the Bavarian Highlands. The villages and their occupants are shown, surrounded by scenery of romantic beauty taken during the height of summer and with effects of light and shadow which give additional beauty to lakes and mountains, woods and cascades, photographed and tinted to perfection. (Nordisk Company. Released May 15th. Length 387 ft.)

Alone at Last.

The trials of an intensely loving and devoted couple who endeavour to seek seclusion on their honeymoon are amusingly illustrated in this capital farce which is played throughout with an irresistible gaiety and sense of fun. We see Adolf and Charlotte escorted to the train by a host of affectionate relatives, and their relief when at last they find themselves alone in a first-class railway carriage. They are constantly interrupted by railway officials, and eventually the interference of a traffic superintendent rouses Adolf to wrath which lands him in the police station. His troubles are not at an end even on his release, for his wife's parents take pity on their loneliness and pay them a visit, shortly followed by one from Adolf's two maiden aunts. An attempt to meet his wife secretly at apartments hired for the occasion, involves him in a scandal which threatens to wreck his domestic happiness, and it is only with the connivance of a doctor and a simulation of madness that the two fond relations are frightened away, and Adolf and Charlotte are alone at last to enjoy their domestic felicity.

It is a merry, irresponsible farce, admirably played by all concerned, and though in two reels is not by any means too long, the fun being well maintained to the end. (Nordisk Company. Released June 15th. Length 240 ft.)

The Midnight Strike.

Labour troubes, unhappily, are always with us nowadays, and although this excellent drama does not deal directly with ordinary economic problems, the interesting strike pictures it introduces will doubtless increase its appeal for the public, especially in manufacturing districts. As a story, it is a conventional tale of love and villainy, containing any number of those frankly melodramatic but effective situations which are invariably so popular. Although without any striking novelty the plot is consistently interesting and is notable for the variety of its scenes and its incidents. The staging is good—there is one particularly fine scene showing the destruction of a drawing-room by a mob of hooligans—and the acting is very capable throughout. "The Midnight Strike" may be relied upon to please audiences which like strong dramatic fare with plenty of love-interest and no waiting.

After a brief prologue in which we see the villain of the piece desert his wife and child, the former of whom subsequently dies of starvation, we come quickly to the main theme, which deals with the love story of a young inventor and the daughter of a wealthy mill-owner. The villain, who is in the mill owner's employ is a rival for the hand of the heroine, and in order to marry her, he sets a series of elaborate and wicked schemes in motion against the inventor-hero. After many exciting episodes, true love and virtue are properly triumphant, and the villain, together with his accomplice, is thoroughly foiled, partly through the agency of his little daughter, who turns up as a crippled mill-hand. (Warner's Features. Released June 18th. Length 2,200 ft.)

Love and Vengeance.

The first film to exploit Mr. Ford Sterling under the universal banner proves an ideal vehicle for the peculiar abilities of that eccentric comedian. The plot is slender, but when an American comedian of Mr. Sterling's ability is provided with a hose pipe, a horse pond, a couple of motor cars and half a dozen policemen, very little plot is necessary for the production of a screamingly funny farce. Mr. Sterling's particular form of humour is inimitable and undescribable. His tempestuous method is equally provocative of mirth, whether making love or besieging his enemies with brickbats, and his unflagging acrobatic efforts keep the fun going fast and furious from start to finish. Although the film is a rattling comic, it is not without its thrills, for in some fine pictures of the races for the Vanderbilt Cup, a racing motor turns turtle at a dangerous corner and comes to utter grief in what looks like a very bad smash. The spectator, however, becomes so accustomed to the eccentric conduct of the racing cars after Sterling has applied the hose to the course that a slight mishap or so only adds to the interest of a most ingenious comic film. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited. Length two reels.)

The Sacrifice of Kathleen.

This pretty sentimental little play shows the adoration of a harshly treated little slavey for a handsome but impecunious young author who takes a room in the cheap lodging house in which she drudges. Arthur Jordan has written a play and, like Molière, trys it on the domestic, who thinks it the greatest work that has ever been penned. This is not the unanimous opinion of the various managers to whom it is submitted, and Arthur becomes very despondent. Kathleen has $5,000 left to her, and without saying a word to Arthur she goes to the most favourably disposed manager and arranges that he shall produce Arthur's play in consideration of her $5,000. The play has an enormous success, and Arthur is able to move to luxurious apartments and forget all about his days of poverty and the little slavey who was the first to appreciate his dramatic efforts. A year later Arthur accidentally hears how his play came to be produced. He hurries to find out his little benefactress, and though he finds her very ill, his return is all that is wanting to restore her health and complete her happiness.

This pretty little story is most admirably played. Miss Norma Talmadge gives a charming study of the overworked little drudge, and her facial play, when listening to the reading of Arthur's work, and later, when realising that he is leaving, is touching and expressive. Mr. Leo Delaney is effective as Arthur Jordon, and Miss Josie Sadler gives a delightful performance of the landlady whose manner changes so completely when she learns that her little "help" has come into a fortune of $5,000.

This play should be a universal favourite. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released June 25th. Length 1,827 ft.)

The Devil's Eye.

This is a drama of a highly sensational order, the plot of which is designed obviously for the introduction of a succession of thrilling incidents, and it would be difficult to name any film which achieves its object with more perfect success. The hero, Count Hugo, is suspected of murder and the theft of a priceless diamond, "The Devil's Eye," on circumstantial evidence, which is theatrically sufficient to justify him in flying from the police and attempting to reach the border. The chase which ensues is perhaps the most sensationally planned, and the most daringly executed that has yet been shown on the screen, and includes a leap from a high railway bridge on to a barge which is passing below, and a wonderful ride when the hero and a regiment of mounted police slide down the face of a steep cliff, terminating in a sensational leap from a galloping horse to a motor car travelling at full speed. Though this chase, in which everyone concerned shows utter disregard of danger, reaches the highest pitch of excitement, the sensations are by no means at an end, for the hero subsequently climbs along a wire stretched from one tall factory chimney to another, to a basket suspended midway, the secret hiding place of the diamond. The factory is blown to atoms, and the chimneys, the diamond and the Count fall to earth together, and being picked out of the ruins the Count finds that the diamond is as little injured as himself and no obstacle remains between him and his future happiness. This film is announced as the first of a series of Mr. Harry Piel, the intrepid hero, and as an example of inventions and reckless daring should have a great reception. (Anderson, Vay, Hubert and Blumberg, Limited. Released June 8th. Length 3,750 ft.)

An Officer and a Gentleman.

Under this title the Vitagraph Company presents a stirring military drama elaborately and tastefully mounted. The story is plausible, well worked out and cleverly constructed, and contains many strong situations which receive their full value at the hands of an exceptionally strong company. One detects a slight weakness in the lack of evidence on which Lieut. Brinkley is accused of the murder of his fellow officer, and it is difficult to account for the behaviour of his friends whose interference involves their comrade in suspicion, but apart from this the sequence of events is natural and plausible, and the situation in which Lieut. Brinkley is cross-examined by the Colonel, whose wife he is trying to shield, is dramatic and interesting. The scene at the trial, with the entrance of Mrs. Cavendish, whose public confession is only averted by the appearance of the real murderer, is well imagined and finely carried out. This scene is a triumph of effective stage management, and the scenes both inside the court and out are marked with an attention to detail which render them admirably impressive. The fact that the hero is clothed in the garb of a convict before his trial, and appears in the dock in full dress uniform, may be accepted as a concession to pictorial effect, for the mounting and dressing of the play in other respects all are conscientious in every particular.

In drama of this type much depends on the company, and the piece gains great distinction from the actors, who in manner and bearing give a realistic picture of regimental life. Lieut. Brinkley is played with frankness and sincerity of Mr. Arthur H. Ashley, who displays great tact in the handling of his scenes with the Colonel's wife. Mr. Charles Wellesley is an ideal figure as the Colonel of the regiment, and a particularly fine performance is given by Mr. Darwin Karr as the sergeant whose righteous anger causes the death of Captain Sutherland. Miss Jane Fearnley is excellent in a very difficult part, and Miss Naomi Childers, looking remarkably handsome, plays Joy Grayson with great charm.

A special word of praise is due to the crowds in and about the Central Criminal Court, whose demeanour reflects great credit on their stage manager. The photography is faultless, and the whole production must be admitted as one of the Vitagraph Company's most pronounced successes. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released June 22nd. Length 2,400 ft.)

sea between a man and a fearsomely realistic octopus. It is admirably acted, with the reserved force and natural sincerity so characteristic of German players, by a strong cast which includes several very well-known and popular artistes, and the staging throughout is irreproachable.

A detective story is generally interesting, especially if it is more or less probable, and the present film, whose plot is kept more strictly than usual within the bounds of possibility, is a thoroughly acceptable example of this class of production. The cuff-link incident is rather weak and the villain gives in to the detective at the end rather more easily than was necessary; but with the exception of these two small points the play is very well conceived, with a careful regard for detail. There is always room for good sound dramas of this kind. "£1,000,000 Will Case" should enjoy much success. (L. and Y. Films, Limited. Length 3,000 ft.)

Golf: By J. H. Taylor.

Two golfing friends of ours, both crack players, driving off from a tee near a public road, attracted the attention of a couple of loafers who paused to watch the game. Being on their mettle, each put in a magnificent drive and walked on elated, stretching an ear to catch the eulogies of their spectators. As the two loafers slouched off one uttered to the other, "Lurid silly game, this 'ockey."

The man in the street knows more about the game than he did, but even to the absolute tyro this excellent picture should prove at least as interesting as any film showing how to make a silk hat or a maxim gun, and to the golf enthusiast it will be invaluable. Taylor gives a practical and very clearly expressed lesson on how to play the game, shows how to grip the club, how to stand and how to strike the ball. The diagrams showing the change of stand for different shots are particularly interesting, and some very attractive shots are shown. The man who knows nothing will be able to understand something of the fascination of the game. The man who knows a little may learn a great deal, and the man who knows a great deal will see exactly how he may win the open championship five times. (London Film Company. Released June 8th. Length 700 ft.)

Lucille Love.

Considerable success has attended the introduction of the series of film plays dealing with the various adventures of some popular character. It remains for the Trans-Atlantic Company to introduce the long serial play in which the interest is continued through every instalment. The modern public is so accustomed to take its light literature in serial form that the innovation must certainly prove interesting, and should be entirely successful. Many of our finest novels have been issued in monthly numbers and there seems no reason to doubt that the regular frequenter of the picture theatre will take an additional interest in a film which continues a story by which he has already been attracted

The first two instalments of "Lucille Love" show every promise of a story unusually rich in dramatic sensation. Lucille's father, General Love, of the U.S. Army, has an inveterate enemy in Hugo Loubeque, a former rival and now an international spy. Loubeque steals some military papers from Love and escapes on a steamship, involving in suspicion both the General and Lieutenant Gibson, who is engaged to Lucille. The girl determines to regain the papers and joins the steamship by the aid of a hydroplane. She obtains the confidence of Loubeque and secures the papers, but the ship takes fire and Lucille is cast ashore on an island in the South Seas. There we are compelled to leave her for the present, surrounded by vast hordes of murderous looking savages, but as Lucille is essential to the further development of the plot, we make no doubt that her attractions will prove sufficient to enlist the sympathy of her temporary hosts.

The first two instalments are full of incident and produced with great elaboration, while the photographic quality is very fine. Lucille possesses great personal charm, and as each number finishes with a strong climax and the necessary note of anticipation, there is little doubt that the succeeding instalments will be eagerly looked forward to by the public. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited. Released June 22nd. Length 2,000 ft. each.)

Fantomas : The False Magistrate.

In the fifth drama of the series concerned with the exploits of the amazing criminal Fantomas, we find that he is serving a life sentence in a Belgian prison. It might be assumed that the police would experience considerable relief at the thought of their arch enemy being safely under lock and key. But Detective-Inspector Jude is not satisfied that the man by whom he has been so constantly outwitted should suffer punishment at any hands other than his own. He therefore determines that Fantomas must be released, which fatuous decision, however it may be regarded by the detective's own department, cannot fail to earn for him the gratitude of the sensation-loving public. In order that his plans may be carried out according to his own ideas he takes the place of the criminal, who walks out in the dress of a prison warder, carefully provided by the astute detective. Jude's original plan provided for the shadowing of Fantomas with the object of discovering his haunts and the remaining members of the gang but, owing no doubt to the detective voluntary captivity, Fantomas has little difficulty in putting his spies off the track, which he does by the simple method of murdering the first person he happens to meet and assuming his identity, a device in which, by constant practice, he has become expert.

The murdered gentleman happening to be a newly appointed examining magistrate, Fantomas takes over his duties and finds himself in a position admirably adapted for the exercise of his peculiar talents. He detects some members of his old gang as the perpetrators of a large jewel robbery and compels one of them to meet him at a church for the purpose of handing over the loot, filling in the intervening time by murdering a marquis and blackmailing the widow to the extent of £20,000. The thief has concealed the jewels in the church bell, to which Fantomas compels him to ascend, but on refusal to part with the gems till he has safely descended, Fantomas takes away the ladder and leaves him to his fate.

This humorous sally takes full effect when the bell is tolled at the funeral of the murdered marquis, the solemnity of the proceedings being somewhat impaired by the shower of jewels and fragments of jewel-thief that descend on the heads of the mourning party.

Fantomas is recaptured later on and again imprisoned, but having taken due precautions during his short career on the bench, he is released by the Governor at the close of the film on an order which he has himself signed in his magisterial capacity.

This truly remarkable film shows a degree of inventiveness which places it in a class of its own. It is magnificently mounted and produced, and if one accepts the combination of a criminal with an entire lack of moral sense and a detective whose vanity is vastly in excess of his intelligence, the improbability of the incidents is more than counterbalanced by their ingenuity, and they become plausible through the conviction carried by the actors engaged. As a frankly sensational melodrama, this last adventure is an advance even on the preceding ones, and is likely to be received with even greater approbation. (Gaumont and Company, Limited. Released June 8th. Length 3,395 ft.)

The Woman Pays.

A conventional melodrama as regards its plot and general character, this excellent film is notable for the admirable manner in which it is presented. The story is developed in a series of beautifully mounted, naturally acted scenes, without a moment's relaxation of the dramatic tension, which is sustained at a high pitch throughout. The life history of an unhappy woman whom the Fates conspire to crush, it is one of those tales which are always popular. Miss Maude Fealy gives a sympathetic performance as the unfortunate heroine, whose downfall is brought about not through any fault of her own, but as the result of various unlucky chances which are made the most of by the unscrupulous man whose selfish love has so tragic an ending. Mr. Gardner Crane is particularly fine as the implacable husband who remorselessly turns away his wife when, as he believes, he has proved her guilty of an intrigue with another man. This must have been a difficult character to render convincing, and it is greatly to Mr. Crane's credit that we are always able to believe in the probability of all he does. The play ends sadly, but it is immensely effective throughout, and, although its plot is somewhat melodramtic, it is so well acted as to seem completely realistic. The staging is magnificent, the various scenes showing the raid on a gambling house being especially well mounted. The picture has been produced with the utmost care for realism of detail as well as of general effect, and there can be little doubt but that it will prove immensely successful. (Thanhouser film. Released June 11th. Length 3,026 ft.)

Shadows.

The detective story is, on the whole, probably the most popular of all types of film within the range of modern drama. But although there are many detective stories there are very few good ones. Some are mere sensational extravaganzas, entirely divorced from probability or even possibility. Others are so padded out with conventional "love interest" that one can scarcely repress a smile at their absurd heroics. It is very rare indeed to find a perfect detective story, and one is, in consequence, exceedingly obliged to the Essanay Company for their magnificent picture "Shadows," which justifies the use of the superlative as fully as any film of the kind that one can remember.

"Shadows," if one may put it so, is a "real" detective story. Its plot, that is to say, might have been founded upon one of those strange tales of criminal adventure that one reads from time to time in the newspapers. It is just the sort of story—for all its thrilling sensation—that might have happened in actual life, and it is interpreted by the Essanay producer and players with a realism, even of minute detail, which can only be described as "photographic." One never feels for one moment with this film that it is a make-believe stage play, carefully prearranged for reproduction by the camera. One has the sense all the time that one is an onlooker by some fortunate chance at a series of real events. And this, surely, is a pretty good test of a detective film's merit.

The story is full of novel and ingenious little touches, which add to its general originality, and also by keeping it clear from conventional treatment, to its realism. It is magnificently staged, many of its studio scenes being of an unusually elaborate and ambitious nature, and it is acted with that perfect sincerity and naturalness which very few companies know how to command as well as the Essanay players. Mr. Francis X. Bushman, who is always so fine an artist, is the detective-hero of the piece, and he has certainly never acted better. His quiet incisive methods render every scene in which he appears powerful and convincing, whilst towards the end of the film he softens into the warm-hearted lover in the most satisfactory manner imaginable. Mr. Rapley Holmes gives a remarkably finished study of a rascally saloon proprietor who shelters the gang against whom the energies of the detective are directed, and Mr. E. H. Calvert is satisfactory as the leader of the villains. Among the ladies, Miss Irene Warfield is a delightful heroine, charming to look upon and accomplished as an actress, whilst Miss Lillian Drew contributes a very clever portrait of a characteristic criminal.

Altogether "Shadows" is one of the very best pictures of the kind yet produced by the Essanay or any other company. It is, as we have said, a perfectly natural story and yet an intensely thrilling one. It contains in its two reels as much excitement as many producers get into four, whilst never being unduly hastened or abbreviated. Exhibitors who are wise enough to book this most excellent film may rest happy in the assurance that they have secured something which will enthral every member of their audiences. (Essanay film. Released June 11th. Length 1,984 ft.)

The Photographic Exhibition.

Messrs. J. H. Dallmeyer, Limited, of 19-23, Oxford Street, W. and Church End Works, Willesden, London, N.W., who have now been manufacturing photographic apparatus for over fifty years, are exhibiting at the Photographic Exhibition (Stand No. 30) their new lens, the Dallmeyer F/4.5 series XV. Serrac, which is specially designed for high speed instantaneous work, combined with critical definition. The series II F/6 stigmatic lenses, also the series IV. F/6.3 Carfac lenses are on view.

New large Adon telephoto lenses, working at the apertures of F/4.5, F/6, and F/10, and thus allowing of telephoto snapshots, are to be seen fitted to the Ledon reflex cameras, while a special display is made of the Naturalist reflex camera fitted with the Grandac rapid telephoto lens. This camera has been used by many of the leading naturalists and is well worth investigation by anyone interested in Nature photography.

Dallmeyer patent portrait lenses which range in apertures from F/3 to F/6, fitted with this firm's patent diffusing arrangement, can be seen at the stand, while one of the latest improvements made to these lenses is their mounting in special aluminium mounts, thus reducing the weight.

Among the many other lenses exhibited are the Dallmeyer process lenses and prisms, negative, cinematograph, taking and projection, wide angle, Bergheim soft focus, and their original rapid rectilinear lenses. The new correspondent's camera, which is now finished in black with nickel plated fittings, Carfac collapsing and Penric roll film cameras, are exhibited.

Something new in shutters is the bisc, which is of the light detachable type. High efficiency is claimed for this shutter, owing to its unique construction, only two blades of a special design being used; silence and freedom from vibration are two important features.

The flap shutter, which contains no perishable rubber, being fitted with an antinous release, also the studio attachment, are of special interest to the professional photographer. Autocatches, time valves, telephoto calculators, focussing magnifiers, hoods, colour screens and telescopes are also on view, while the new book on "Telephotography," by C. F. Lan-Davis, F.R.P.S., is on sale at this stand.

EVENTS AT EALING.

Last week was a busy one for the management of the Broadway Cinema, when "Lunina," "Aching Hearts" and "A Husband Outwitted" were featured. Mr. Capua, the managing director, has decided to open his theatre on Sundays, and "The Messiah" was screened on Sunday last to good audiences. "The Midnight Wedding" is being starred for the first part of this week.—"Antony and Cleopatra" paid a return visit to the Walpole, and played to enthusiastic audiences. "The Lady of Monsoreau" was at the head of the programmes for the latter part of the week "Sixty Years a Queen" pays a second visit this week.—The management of the de Luxe is sparing no pains to keep the programmes "up to standard." Last week "The Shattered Crown" was the feature for the first part, and "Cora, the Temptress" for the second. Special music was excellently rendered under the supervision of Mr. Clift Summers, who is to be congratulated on the fine orchestral performance.—Patrons of the Kinema will have the satisfaction of seeing this week "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," and Mr. Holloway will no doubt be well rewarded for his enterprise. Another big feature is announced in "The Lights o' London."

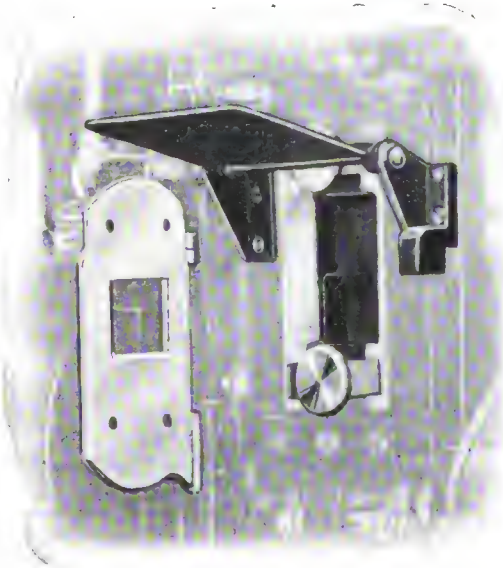
THE CINEMATOGRAPH IN EDUCATION.

We have pleasure in presenting our readers this week with a special Educational Supplement—the first, we believe, which has appeared in connection with any journal devoted to the interests of the moving picture industry—a feature which we hope to issue regularly once a month.

We have on every possible occasion endeavoured to keep the educational element of cinematography prominently before the Trade, believing, as we do, that in the end this question will loom largest in Trade politics—ousting, indeed, the Sunday opening question, or any other matter which so prominently occupies the attention of the Trade organisations. Indeed, it is no exaggeration to state that the future of the business is very closely associated with the success or failure of the movement in favour of educational cinematography.



It is hardly possible to overestimate the importance of securing the sympathetic co-operation of the teaching profession in the endeavour to secure recognition of the usefulness of the cinema in education, and in this connection it is interesting to note the opinions expressed by Sir James Yoxall, the secretary of the National Union of Teachers. He emphasises the fact that educational authorities and teachers will hardly think it worth while to install teaching by the cinematograph in a school for the sake of the casual, indirect education to be derived therefrom. In other words, it is essential that all our efforts must be concentrated on an attempt to work in conjunction with the educational authorities, and not to depend on an occasional display of semi-educational films to languidly interested audiences. To again quote Sir James Yoxall, if films are to be thought worth while, they must bear directly and specifically upon those subjects and schemes of instruction laid down in the Educational Code, and by the regulations of the Educational Authorities for teaching in schools. We believe that the authorities and the teachers are willing to do all they can for cine-education, once they are convinced of its usefulness and importance, and this in itself is a big step forward.

THE SILENT EMPIRE

"You must see it—You can't hear it."

—with absolute efficiency—the automatic Safety Shutter of the Silent Empire.

AT first glance the automatic Safety Shutter fitted to the Silent Empire is like all other similar devices, but in operation it is different—better—it is more sensitive, lifting immediately the machine is started and closing sharp when it stops, its effective working is entirely due to its simple design.

The heat shield is fitted with a tension spring so that it cannot be left open accidentally. It moves with the picture mask so that at no time is more than one picture exposed to the rays of the arc.

Here is reliability obtained in the surest manner by the simplest yet most effective means—Nothing that can get out of order one of the points of Silent Empire superiority.

The third of a series of four advertisements dealing with the distinctive features of the Silent Empire. These are fully described in a de luxe booklet, "Perfect Projection for the Picture Theatre." Write for a copy.

TRADE TOPICS.

Yesterday (Wednesday) the First Council Meeting of the Educational Kinematograph Association, whose offices are at 22-24, Great Portland Street, W., was held in the Board Room of the Women's Imperial Health Association, to consider and adopt the report of the Provisional Committee, presented on their behalf by the Honorary Secretary, Mr. Morley Dainow, to elect various officers, and to deal with other matters. After dwelling upon the growth and powers of the moving picture, the report goes on to say:—"The fact that the cinematograph has won its way into becoming the chief amusement of civilised nations makes us think that this enormous power of attraction might be used for other purposes than that of mere entertainment. It must be said, to the great credit of the cinematograph industry, that some of its promoters have fully realised this. Messrs. Pathé Frères, Mr. Charles Urban, THE BIOSCOPE, and a few representatives of moving picture firms, have spent large sums of money in producing and encouraging the production of films which will serve a deeper purpose than that of mere pleasure giving. The cinematograph can be used to teach ordinary school subjects like History, Geography, Nature Study. It can be used to help children and young people in understanding life, morally and industrially. It can be used in technical and special instruction. Lastly, the cinematograph can be employed as an instrument in the general education of the people. . . . In order to develop the cinematograph so that it can be used in accordance with the conditions of the most efficient education and the highest citizenship, there is need of a body of educational and public workers to meet and draw up a plan. This idea inspired a meeting which was held in London on January 29th, at which Sir Albert Rollit presided, and which was addressed by the Hon. and Rev. Dr. Lyttelton (Headmaster of Eton), Mr. A. P. Graves, Mr. C. S. Cobb, M.V.O. (Chairman London County Council), Dr. Kimmins (Chief Education Inspector, London County Council), Mr. G. Bernard Shaw. . . . . At this meeting it was decided to form an Educational Kinematograph Association. This resolution was cordially supported by letters from the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Rev. F. B. Meyer, Col. Sir James R. Dunlop Smith, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., Charles Bathurst, Esq., M.P., Prof. John Adams, the Bishop of St. Asaph and others, and a Provisional Committee was appointed to draw up a scheme for the right use of the cinematograph as a moral, spiritual and intellectual influence. The Committee feel that at present this instrument wields its great influence over its vast public—an influence good or bad according to the standards of morality and taste taken by the controllers of the cinematograph industry. But however well intentioned its promoters may be, the best possibiltiies of the cinematograph are certainly not being developed. What is needed is a vigilant watch over the moral and hygienic conditions of the picture houses, and a complete educational plan for guiding the future of this new force in the best interests of the highest citizenship. If these needs be satisfied the whole nation may one day bless this new invention for its beneficial effects, instead of succumbing to the sensuous or sensational appeals to human nature suggested by its ill-regulated use. It is hoped that the formation of the Educational Kinematograph Association will satisfy this twofold need."

Among the members of the Council of the Association are the Duchess of Marlborough, Rt. Hon. Sir Horace Curzon Plunkett, Rev. Hon. Edward Lyttelton, Archbishop of Armagh, Sir Albert K. Rollit, Hon. The Lord Provost of Glasgow, Rev. M. J. Rendall (Headmaster of Winchester), Dr. C. W. Kimmins, Professor J. W. Gregory, Professor R. A. Gregory, Canon Sutcliffe (representing Cardinal Bourne), Sir John Kirk, William Archer, M.A., Canon H. D. Rawnsley, G. Bernard Shaw, etc.

We had the pleasure of a call on Tuesday last from Mr. Joseph Fisher, of Fisher's Elite Bioscope, Limited, Cape Town. Mr. Fisher only landed in this country per s.s. Balmoral Castle that morning and left per s.s. Olympic for New York, on an extended tour throughout the States, after which he will return to this country before re-embarking for home. In addition to the 5s. per 100 ft. duty on films imported into South Africa, as stated in THE BIOSCOPE last week, Mr. Fisher informs us that there is a further 15 per cent. impost on all machines.

Fishers, Limited, are the proprietors of the Grand Theatre, Cape Town, which has a seating capacity of between 800 and 900, and although the last firm to sign on with the Trust are among its four first-run customers. In Mr. Fisher's opinion the formation of the African Film Trust was the finest thing for the industry out there that could have happened

Hepworth's "David Copperfield" has been an "immense" draw—so much so that any film of that firm, especially when featuring Miss Alma Taylor, is sure of instant success. Fishers, Limited, have arranged, temporarily, with the British Medical Association to give a special programme of films, showing the latest methods of hygienic living.

The latest cartoon films to appear are the novel series, entitled "Kine Kartoons," executed by Mr. Gandolphi, and produced by Barker Motion Photography, Limited. The first few numbers of this series, which we inspected the other day, deal in a humorous manner with such subjects as "How a Budget is made" (showing Lloyd George deriving his inspiration from an animated mangel-wurzel), "The Dress Germ" (offering an ingenious bacteriological explanation of various phenomena in modern dress), "How I Killed My First Jaguar, by Colonel Teddy" (depicting the manner in which the ex-president of the United States makes a successful "kill" by causing his prey to commit an involuntary suicide), and "Broncho Billy Loops the Loop" (illustrating some surprising aeronautical feats by a cowboy). The cartoons are very well drawn, and they are set in motion by means of exceedingly clever trick effects. The extent of their animation is, in fact, one of their most notable and most unique features. The Barker "Kine Kartoons" are already proving a popular item upon the programme at the Palace Theatre, W., and also at the Empire, Leicester Square. Mr. J. W. Smith tells us that a new edition about 500 ft. in length, and containing three subjects, is to be produced each week. The films are to be rented direct to exhibitors by the manufacturers, and exclusive rights will be granted to the theatres showing them.

The mill hands of the busy town of Bury, Lancs., have just been delighted with a visit from that accomplished artiste, Miss Florence Turner, who, in addition to appearing at a special matinée at the Art Picture Hall, has had a very unique experience. This consisted of the enacting of scenes in a film drama at the huge weaving sheds of the C.W.S., where the hands joyfully entered into the spirit of the affair, Miss Turner appearing as a real "Lancashire lass" at the loom. The huge Co-operative mill formed an admirable setting, and a very fine result is expected. During their short visit, Miss Turner, "Jean" and Mr. Trimble, manager for Turner Films, Limited, became general favourites with the inhabitants. Mr. Jack Raymond, who is one of the principals in the play, also accompanied the party.

Mr. George H. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, Limited, writing from the London offices, wishes us to state that the Company are not, and never have been, in the market for scenarios, and requests writers to kindly refrain from sending same to his offices. The firm will not, in any case, hold themselves responsible unless stamped addressed envelopes are enclosed. Mr. Smith is, in fact, being inundated with plots daily, mostly minus stamps or envelope, and has some thousands on hand owing to this cause.

Mr. Gustave Kutnow, managing director of the Kosmos Kinema, Tunbridge Wells, is entertaining the members of the Kent district branch of the Institute of Journalists on Saturday, at his comfortable theatre. Mr. Kutnow is a popular figure in the famous old town, and has achieved a remarkable success for his hall. The recent showing of the "British Army" film forms one of the tributes to a genius for organisation, and was rewarded with crowded audiences.

We are informed that the Edison Company has acquired the entire film rights of "Fantasa," a burlesque which has achieved an unusual success in the United States. It is said to contain many scenes which will lend themselves to the reproduction of new and original effects on the screen. The production will be under the direction of Mr. Charles M. Seay, and is of such an elaborate nature that it is likely to be treated at least in five reels.

Mr. Norman W. Smith, who has had control of the advertising department of Messrs. R. Prieur and Co., Limited, for some time past, is sailing for India on the 28th inst., having signed an agreement for three years with the Far-Eastern Film Company. Mr. Smith is taking with him "The House of Temperley" and other big features, and we cordially wish him success in his new appointment.

The Mexican Film Company, whose temporary offices are situate at 99a, Charing Cross Road, W.C., are handling a new exclusive, entitled "A Mexican War Conspiracy." In view of the much-discussed position in Mexico, this film should prove an excellent draw. Mexico's fighting force provides some splendid scenes, and in addition, a very strong plot makes the film doubly attractive.

Mr. George Brown informs us that "At the Mercy of Niagara" is booking up exceptionally well, especially in the North. The film is being handled by the Invicta Exclusive Film Company, 75, St. Martin's Lane, W.

Quite a novel and very topical note has been struck, as will be seen from our advertising pages in the present issue, by Mr. Cleland Hollanby, of the Williamson Kinematograph Company, Limited. The use of such a variety of sporting terms in one advertisement is certainly extremely ingenious, and cannot fail to arouse attention. Originality is invariably welcome, and we congratulate the Williamson Company upon a novel idea, and one, withal, well and effectively displayed.

No one who has witnessed the fine film version of Richard Harding Davis' novel, "Soldiers of Fortune," which is being controlled by the City Exclusives Company, can fail to be struck by the remarkable similarity of events now taking place in Mexico, as reported in last Monday's issue of The Times. Although Mr. Davis' book was written some years ago, his accurate grasp of local conditions is borne out by the latest reports of the actions of Generals Villa and Carranza, and which testify to the realism of one of the most striking films of recent years.

The Herts Exclusive and Feature Film Agency have opened offices at Town Hall Chambers, St. Albans, and intend specialising in exclusives and features. Mr. Montague J. Thorpe, the managing director, informs us that the company have already arranged terms with many of the leading Trade houses for the exclusive rights of several big productions for Herts., Bedfordshire, and Buckinghamshire.

The Bioscope, Film, and Supply Company, Limited, have purchased the entire stock, goodwill, etc., of the Brockliss Cinemachinery, Limited, and are transferring the business to Cinemachinery House, 7, Lisle Street, Leicester Square, W.C.

The Tyler Film Company, Limited, inform us that their fine production, "Mystery of Souls," has been withdrawn from the open market, the exclusive rights having been purchased by the Central Film Agency, Manchester.

We hasten to extend our apologies to the Imperial Animated Picture Company, Bradford, for one or two errors regarding that firm which appeared in the 1914 edition of THE BIOSCOPE "Annual," wherein their address was given as 44, Agar Street. This, of course, is entirely incorrect, the only address of the company being Thorpe's Chambers, Hustlergate, Bradford. In addition, we desire to call special attention to the Imperial Company's correct telegraphic address and telephone numbers, viz., "Access, Bradford" and 4651 Bradford, respectively.

A demonstration was given at Gamage's on Tuesday last of the "Drawing Room Cinephone," the invention of Professor Constantini, of Paris, which is being handled by the Talking Cinema Syndicate, Limited, of Glasgow, and which was shown at the Glasgow Exhibition in February last, as recorded in THE BIOSCOPE.

In the Company's Winding-Up Court on Tuesday, Mr. Justice Astbury had before him a petition by the New Agency Film Company for the compulsory winding up of the Big A Features, Limited.—Mr. Rowlands said this was a petition by a judgment creditor for £274.—His Lordship asked if the Company appeared.—Mr. Rowlands said they did not.—Discussion arose as to the serving of the notice as to the petition, resulting in his Lordship directing the case to stand over for a week.

Streatham picture-lovers are made to realise the value of a really sympathetic musical accompaniment to the films at the Streatham Empire Picture Palace, where Mr. Milton Wellings, the well-known composer and pianist, is responsible for this important side of the entertainment. Mr. W. J. Hall is the clever manager of this popular house, which is regularly patronised by the "best people" of the neighbourhood.

We regret to hear that Mr. L. Schlentheim has been seriously indisposed for some little time. Though quite unable to attend at his office, we are glad to state that his condition is slightly improved.

The Hepworth Manufacturing Company have just sold their latest big exclusive, entitled "The Great Poison Mystery," or "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve," which was reviewed in our issue of May 7th, to the Feature Supply Company, of 29a, Charing Cross Road. The purchasers, who are now hard at work preparing posters and other publicity matter, will shortly be offering the film to exhibitors, who will doubtless find it a very welcome attraction with which to strengthen their summer programmes.

We were pleased to welcome Mr. Paul Oesterreicher, of Vienna, the other day, and to hear that he is upon a special visit to the Metropolis with the object of capturing as many as possible of the British agencies for the Austrian capital. We wish him the best of good luck, and noting that his visit expires upon May 23rd, hope that the next day or two will bring about some important business relations.

Western Import Staff Dinner.

Mr. Roy E. Aitken was on Friday last the guest of honour at a dinner of the European staff of the Western Import and Allied Companies, at the Hotel Florence, London Mr. Aitken sails for the States on Thursday, May 28th, after a stay here which has resulted in still further widening and establishing the Western Import organisation on the European Continent and the occasion was by way of being both an au revoir to the chief and a celebration of the remarkable progress made by the Company since its comparatively recent establishment in Rupert Court.

The extent of the Gerrard Street organisation was illustrated by the fact that a company of close on forty persons—all active members of the various staffs—gathered under the presidency of Mr. T. E. Davies, supported by the following chiefs of the staffs:—Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, Western Import Company, Limited; Mr. J. Haik (Paris manager); Mr. M. Dellbrugger (Berlin manager); Mr. F. A. Bracher (New Majestic Company); Mr. H. Kingo-Armstrong (Exclusive Supply Company); and Mr. E. Foster, Manager of the Dominion Film Company—an organisation formed by Mr. Aitken during his present visit.

The toast of "Mr. H. E. Aitken and the companies in which he is interested," was proposed by the Chairman, who described Mr. Aitken as the Premier of the Western Import State, and a gentleman who by all with whom he had come into touch was recognised as possessed of a wonderful personality and great ideas.

Mr. Roy Aitken, replying, remarked that this was the first occasion he had had to speak for his brother, one of whose first qualities was the ability to take care of himself. He frankly professed himself an enthusiast for "H.E.," whom he thought, as they would say in New York, "pretty near all right." Sometimes in the early days, when things were going badly, he himself would say in the morning "Let's sit around and talk things over," but H.E.'s invariable answer to that was "No; let's go down to the office."

Later in the evening Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, on behalf of the staff, asked Mr. Aitken to accept a gold cigarette case, which he hoped would serve to remind him of the London staff when he was back in New York. What the staff thought of Mr. Aitken was shown by the fact that as soon as the idea was mooted there was a rush to subscribe, and everyone there that evening was associated with the gift, and in the hope that successful as Mr. Aitken had been in the past, he would be still more successful in the future.

Mr. Aitken, in his reply, said it was not until he had faced the gathering there that evening that he realised how the Western Import had grown. It was difficult now to recall that he started in a single office in Rupert Court only three and a half years ago. At first he was the manager, operator, book-keeper and salesman rolled into one, and he recalled that his first employer was their chief operator "Arthur" (Mr. A. Lagden). Then Miss Millgate came, and next Mr. Mainwaring, and he was proud that all three were still with the Company. At that time if they heard a footstep on the stairs one rushed to the door to see if it were a buyer and another hurried to see if the projector were in working order. Anything that "sounded like an order" was very welcome indeed to them then. Remembering those times it was very pleasant to reflect on their very different circumstances to-day. One of his early ambitions was to see Western Import offices in France and Germany, but the realisation seemed a long way off, yet to-night they had their Paris and Berlin managers with them. From his experience in America he could say they had a staff in this country which could not be beaten for enthusiasm, and the determination to do the best for the Company. In America they realised that the English staff could only make good if they sent them good films. It took lots of time, lots of thought, and lots of money to make good films, but they had not spared either, and he believed they had as good a programme as any on the market and was getting better every week. Concluding, Mr. Aitken remarked they would all agree that in thinking of the dinner Mr. Mainwaring had had a very happy inspiration. By meeting out of business hours they all learned new ideas and so he said "do it again."

The evening concluded with a musical programme, to which Messrs. George Salisbury, T. Edward George, and many members of the staff contributed.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS

The beautiful weather which just now is being experienced at Scarborough does not tend to the filling of picture palaces, but, nevertheless, with good programmes provided, business is by no means slack. There are now half a dozen picture palaces, and two more on the way, and the managers are never late in securing the newest stuff.

I notice that the new cinema on the North Side, in North Marine Road, is all but finished, and as it will be the only place of entertainment of its kind that side of the Castle Hill, business should be very brisk on the cool evenings in the summer months. In fact, with good cooling and ventilating arrangements it should be an excellent retreat from the heat for the visitors who throng this part during the hot days. There is only one place of entertainment near at hand, and this is the Floral Hall, where no pictures are shown. There is a nice balcony or verandah at the front, going the full width of the building, from which a fine view is obtained of the picturesque Peasholme Lake. The North Side Cinema has been a long time talked of, and now it is almost accomplished. I hope to have more to say of it in due course.

A controversy is still going on between the Borough Magistrates and Mr. H. A. Whitaker concerning the plans of the Grand Picture House at the South end of the Foreshore. The licence was only temporarily granted, and at the Police Court on Friday, before the Mayor and other magistrates, Mr. Tasker Hart (solicitor) again made an application on behalf of Mr. Whitaker, for the music, cinematograph and dancing licences for the Grand.

Mr. Whitaker said that the conditions imposed before the magistrates on granting the temporary licence had been complied with.

The Borough Engineer said that there were certain matters which had not been carried out.

Mr. Whitaker explained that the existing girders had been strengthened, and was therefore granted the use of side seats previously prohibited. Only a temporary licence was again granted.

By the way, Grand Picture House fare is quite equal to anything in the town. Mr. Parnell, who manages affairs for Mr. Whitaker, had "The Curse of War" for the first half of last week, as well as the pictorial adaptation from Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop," which was a great success. There was also a good film of the York Military Sunday. "Justice" and "A King's Romance" were two other stirring subjects for the latter half.

The Picture House, Vernon Place, is still no less popular than the rest, and Mr. Fred Cardwell is providing well varied programmes, selected from the lists of the leading companies.

Pictures are also being shown at the Aquarium, where they made their appearance many years ago for the first time in Scarborough, but the exhibitions will cease at Whitsuntide, owing to the action of the Licensing Committee in refusing the licence on account of a liquor licence being held.

At the time of writing, Mr. Quinton Gibson has "Kindness Repaid" at the Picturedrome, Newborough, as well as "In the Grip of the Eagle's Claw," and I noticed there were big crowds going in on Saturday night.—Messrs. Q. Gibson and E. L. Garside were showing "The Lonely Princess" amongst others at the Theatre Royal Cinema, and a good programme of variety turns.

The top-liners at Mr. Will Catlin's Olympia (South Foreshore) this week have been "Detective Finn" and "Rogues of Paris," one in each half of the week. Miss Asta Nielsen's admirers were delighted with this charming lady's portrayal of the part of "Helen," in "The Cry of the Child." Keystone comedies are still going strong, and "Some Nerve" was one of the best yet shown.

Mr. Will Catlin's other picture palace, the Palladium, is admirably managed by Mr. Catley, who continues to secure all the release films and exclusives it is possible to get. "A Terrible Night at Sea" appealed strongly to Scarborians, but it was not the only good picture in the programme, which also included "The Expert's Secret," "Polidor and the Lions," etc. In the latter part of the week Mr. Catley did well with such pictures at "Half a Chance," "The Runaway Freight," "A Story of Crime," and "Insect Mimics." There were few empty seats in the first half of this week, when Sir Charles Wyndham was seen in "David Garrick," supporting which were "A Romance of Old Brittany," "[illegible] a Million" and others.

"Beauty" Comedies ARE FAST BECOMING POPULAR. ARE YOU GETTING THEM?

A Flurry in Hats.

A "Beauty" Comedy of Complications in Bonnets.

Hattie wants a new bonnet, and asks her husband, Knox Dunlap, to buy her one. Knox, however, refuses. Hattie complains to her father, who induces Knox to "buy the wife a little Easter present." Hattie's mother is much pleased with her daughter's choice of a hat, and immediately wants one like it. Capt. Hood refuses to listen to her plea, so Hattie gives her parent her own hat. When Knox learns that his wife has given the hat he bought for her to her mother he demands the money paid for it from Capt. Hood. The Captain "comes across" reluctantly. Hattie immediately buys another hat, this time on credit. Mother Hood regrets taking Hattie's hat and returns it by Bridget Stetson, the cook. The same day she buys another hat of the identical shape and colour. Bridget takes a peep into the hat-box when she arrives at Hattie's, and sets out to buy a duplicate. Capt. Hood, repentant at his refusal to buy his wife a hat, goes out and purchases a replica of those already bought by Hattie and her mother. Knox also takes a similar view of his own conduct, and does the right thing by purchasing his wife another bonnet. All march into Capt. Hood's home with their purchases at about the same time, and, to clap the climax, Bridget struts in with her "creation," which is precisely like the ones already bought. The seven hats, the band-boxes and Bridget go flying out the front door as the scene dissolves.

Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

The Executive Committee of the Association met at the offices, Broadmead House, Panton Street, Haymarket, S.W., on May 13th, when there was a large attendance.

The minutes of the previous meeting (April 22nd) were read and confirmed.

Amongst the correspondence read by the Secretary were letters from—(a) Mr. William Clayton, Hon. Secretary of the Yorkshire District, informing the Committee that the branch would be pleased to entertain the Executive to lunch on the occasion of the annual meeting on May 26th, and expressing satisfaction that Leeds had been selected. Secretary to thank the branch cordially; (b) Mr. H. Cluett Lock, secretary of the Renters' Association, informing the Committee that renters were not disposed to consider question of contract form and sending thanks for resolutions received. Secretary instructed to bring forward question of contracts later.

The balance sheet for the year ending March 31, 1914, was presented by Mr. F. Stoy, the auditor. On the motion of Mr. J. Harrison, seconded by Mr. A. Cunningham, the balance sheet was received and confirmed.

The Secretary presented the annual report. The Chairman moved that the first paragraph be redrafted, and that the following addition should be made to the last paragraph:—

"Your Committee desires to express its great appreciation of the very excellent work done by your secretary, Mr. Gavazzi King, on behalf of the Association during the past year, which has so materially helped to raise the Association to its present position."

Mr. A. E. Newbould seconded, and this was agreed. Mr. A. Cunningham moved and Mr. J. Harrison seconded, that with the aforesaid amendments, the reports be taken as read and duly accepted. Confirmed and ordered to be printed.

On letters from Messrs. Marsh, Pearson and Akenhead (solicitors to Mr. M. J. McVittie) being read, Mr. J. Harrison recounted the proceedings which had taken place with respect to Mr. M. J. McVittie and the Oldham local authority. He urged the Committee to give Mr. McVittie assistance in the legal proceedings with which he is faced through the determined attitude of the local authority to punish him for asserting his plain rights under the law.

The date of the annual meeting was altered by agreement from May 19th to 26th. It was decided to hold a conference following the annual meeting, at which Mr. F. W. Ogden Smith would open a discussion upon "The Trade—Past and Future." The meetings, it was agreed, would be held at the Grand Central Hotel, Leeds.

Particulars of a case were submitted to the Committee on behalf of a member, who complained that he had been supplied with a film which was in such a defective condition as to be a source of danger and disappointment to the audience. He asked for advice as to proceedings against the renting firm. The Secretary was instructed to refer the member to the case already taken by the Association on this point. The Committee and its solicitor were of the opinion that proceedings would be successful.

In response to an application from Mr. C. Arthur Pearson re fund for the blind, the secretary was instructed to reply that whilst sympathising deeply, action in this matter must be left to individual members.

Letters from Mr. M. W. Shanly were also laid on the table referring to films screening the worn-out horse traffic and other appeals. The committee was of the opinion that such films were unsuited to the exhibitor's ordinary programme.

Twenty-two members were enrolled.

We note with pleasure that our Teutonic contemporary, Die Lichtbildkunst is devoting a considerable proportion of its space to the art of cinematography as an essential portion of present day photography. We must compliment the publishers upon a well printed magazine, and the literary staff upon the excellence of its contents. The question of educational films is, in the issue before us, succinctly dealt with by Herr Philipp Nickel, of the Noris Theatres, Nurnberg, while an excellent article on projection matters is contributed by Rector Hermann Lemke. A series of film programmes for tutorial purposes closes an interesting and informative publication.

Our compliments to our Yorkshire contemporary, Amusements, published in the City of Hull, upon the attainment of its twenty-first birthday. As is only natural, the present issues contain a large quantity of "picture" news, and we are pleased to see that the journal is well supported by the enterprising exhibitors of the famous seaport.

Mr. Alan R. St. John, the well-known film expert, has removed his offices to 72, Oxford Street, W. The new telephone numbers are Museum 2740, 2741, 2742.

PROSPECTUS.

The Company has been formed to carry on all or any of the objects specified in the Memorandum of Association, and more particularly to acquire the patent rights present and future of the invention of Walter Hillier Anderson, described as "Improvements in Cinematograph Apparatus" and certain Letters Patent granted and about to be granted in respect thereof and the benefit of the Option Contract A hereinafter referred to.

The invention of "Improvements in Cinematograph Apparatus" in respect of which this Company will acquire the Patent Rights for the World possesses many advantages over all other Machines for projecting Cinematograph films. A Report upon the apparatus has been made by Mr. A. T. Wright, who is recognised as an authority in the Cinematograph World, and this Report deals in detail with the features in respect of which the apparatus is claimed by the Inventor to be superior to all other machines on the Market. Copies of this Report made for the Directors of this Company and other Reports made for the Vendors are included in this Prospectus and form part thereof. The attention of Investors is particularly drawn to the last paragraph in the Report of Mr. T. McDonald, where he states: "I am fully convinced that when the Anderson Machine is placed on the Market it will render other designs obsolete and will revolutionise the entire manufacture of Cinematograph projectors."

In particular it is claimed for the Apparatus by the Inventor that it has considerably less flicker than any other Cinematograph projector yet produced, with the result that a much clearer and more sharply defined picture is thrown upon the screen. Other advantages claimed by him are freedom from risk of fire, considerable increase of light in the picture with less consumption of current resulting in the production of a far more satisfactory picture than that produced by existing apparatus, accompanied by a great saving of expense.

The field which is therefore open to a Company owning the rights over these machines is enormous, and it is a reasonable estimate that at least 2,000 of the Company's machines could be easily sold per annum, realising a profit on the basis of a conservative estimate of £10 net per machine. The Company does not propose at the outset to manufacture Machines itself but to enter into arrangements with Manufacturers of Cinematograph apparatus for the production of the projector, the subject of the Company's Patents. It is also proposed to form other Companies to work the invention.

The Directors are satisfied that there will be no difficulties in securing satisfactory Contracts for the manufacture of the Apparatus, and negotiations are now on foot for that purpose.

The Directors have entered into negotiations with J. D. Walker's World's Films, Limited, and Hibbert's Pictures, Limited, who control American Express and Films, Limited, for granting to them the sole right of sale of the apparatus the subject of the Company's Patents for the British Isles. The Directors believe that these negotiations will result in a contract which will prove of considerable advantage to the Company.

Of late years the moving picture business has rapidly gone ahead and the Cinematograph Theatre is on all sides acknowledged to have established itself as one of the leading features in the National life of most countries. The Cinematograph Trades Directories disclose the existence of many thousands of Picture Theatres in the United Kingdom alone.

In Great Britain it is estimated that licenses have been granted to upwards of 6,000 picture shows which give continuance performances, and the number is growing daily. It is estimated that the weekly attendance at British picture theatres amounts to 8 millions of people. There are in the United States alone, according to statistics just recently compiled, over $100,000,000 invested in the picture business, there being some 16,000 theatres which give regular daily performances, and a large number of halls, churches, schools, and clubs, where moving pictures are displayed.

It is difficult to secure statistics of the countries on the Continent. But it is estimated there are considerably more permanent picture shows on the Continent than in the United States and Great Britain together. In Australasia there are over 2,000 permanent picture theatres.

In the opinion of Expert operators and experienced business men connected with cinematography who have examined the apparatus the invention is of great commercial value, and possesses numerous and substantial advantages. It may be claimed that the moving picture business is yet in its infancy. Machines are being installed in schools, institutions of all kinds, and in rapidly increasing number of homes throughout various countries. The cinematograph machine is the very heart of the moving picture enterprise, and there is therefore a certain sale awaiting the Company's Machines, and shareholders ought to be able to expect a good return upon their investment.

Letters Patent have been acquired in relation to the apparatus in Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, the Commonwealth of Australia, and New Zealand, and have been applied for in Canada, the United States of America, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and Messrs. J. E. Evans-Jackson and Co., of Bath House, Holborn Viaduct, the well-known Patent Agents, have reported upon the British Letters Patent as follows:—

57-60, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.,

We have carefully examined the Specification and drawings of Patent No. 28917 of 1912, granted to W. H. Anderson, and have further investigated the state of the art for the past fifty years, as disclosed by the printed specifications of Letters Patent granted in Great Britain, and we do not find in any specification of prior date to the Patent of Anderson, any matter anticipating the combination forming the subject of the claims in the said specification. We are therefore of opinion that the invention is new, and novel, and forms good subject matter for Letters Patent.

(Signed) J. E. EVANS-JACKSON & CO.

The Inventor by an Agreement dated May 20, 1914, and made between the Company of the one part and himself of the other part agrees to serve the Company in an advisory capacity for the period of ten years from the date of the formation of the Company at a salary of £500 per annum and a commission equal to 3 per cent. upon the net profits of the Company over and above 10 per cent. during each year, and he will be under obligation to devote the whole of his time, attention and abilities to the business of the Company and not to be engaged, concerned or interested during that period in any business or enterprise in competition with this Company. The Inventor also agrees by the same Agreement to communicate to this Company all such improvements and further inventions in the said Inventions which he may make at any time within a period of ten years.

The preliminary expenses of and incidental to the formation and floating of the Company down to the first general allotment of Shares, inclusive of legal charges, the cost of this Prospectus, and the publication, printing, postage, advertising, and circulation thereof, but exclusive of brokerage, stamp duties on Contracts, and the transfer of the property to the Company, are estimated at £1,000. Grescole Syndicate, Limited, has contracted to pay such preliminary expenses in consideration of a payment to the said Syndicate of the sum of £1,000 by a Contract dated the 20th day of May 1913 and made between Grescole Syndicate, Limited, of the one part and this Company of the other part (being Contract C) below mentioned.

The consideration payable by the Company for the purchase of the Letters Patent and rights to be acquired has been fixed by Grescole Syndicate, Limited, of 43, Coleman Street, in the City of London, who are the Vendors to and promoters of this Company under Contract (B) below referred to at £20,000 payable as to £6,000 in cash and as to £14,000 by the allotment of 14,000 fully paid shares of £1 each in the capital of this Company.

The Place of the Cinematograph in Education.

INTERVIEW WITH SIR JAMES YOXALL M.P.

Than Sir James Yoxall, M.P., the well-known Secretary of the National Union of Teachers and Editor of The Schoolmaster, there is no man, probably, who knows more about both the theory and the practice of education.

Feeling that his views upon cinematography as applied to education, and the possibilities thereof, would be of greater value to our readers than any we could obtain, we accordingly approached Sir James in the hope that he would permit us to incorporate an interview with him upon this subject in our first Educational Supplement. He was kind enough to accede to our request, and in consequence we have the privilege of handing on to our readers the following exceedingly interesting remarks which he made to us in the course of a short chat.

SIR JAMES YOXALL, M.P.

"If the idea is that films can be used in schools frequently as methods of teaching," said Sir James, "they must be adapted to the things which have to be taught. The duration of a child's school life is brief, and a great number of subjects occupy the time-table. Practically, there are no odd half hours, still less hours, in the school week which could be given up to the pleasant, but indirect, method of education which most of the films supposed to be suitable for schools that I have seen so very well afford. Moreover, this class of film can, or might be, seen by the children at the picture palaces in the evening, and children do manage to get to the picture palaces in very large numbers once a week, or even more often.

"In order that films may be used regularly in schools the makers will have to prove to educational authorities, as well as to teachers, that it is worth the while to spend the money and to give the time which are required. I do not think that educational authorities and teachers will think it is worth while to instal film teaching in a school for the sake of the casual additional indirect teaching to be had from the kinds of films to which I have already referred. Educational authorities and teachers know that it is worth while for a school to be supplied with books, maps, diagrams, etc., which bear directly and specifically upon the things taught in that school, and the inference I wish to be drawn from this is that films also, if they are to be though worth while, must bear directly and specifically upon those subjects and schemes of instruction which are laid down in the Education Code and by the regulations of the Educational Authorities for teaching in schools.

"Assuming that a manufacturer of films desires to supply these direct and specific aids to education by means of his films, he must get the latter specially planned and prepared, not merely selected from his large existing stock of what seems to him to be suitable. And such films would have to be planned and supervised in their execution by people who know what is required in the schools, and who would give to their choice the same care as, for example, that great schoolmaster, Dr. Thring, bestowed upon his selection when he chose the large photographs of classical buildings, landscapes and statuary with which he hung the rooms of the classical forms at Uppingham. In short, the casual-comer, the already-in-stock, the what-appears-to-the-film-maker-suitable, and the merely 'interesting' are not sufficient in the way of films for school work. They may come in occasionally, where a school is equipped cinematographically, as treats and relaxations from the more severe, direct, regular teaching by film, but they cannot replace this, and, if they are not adopted by educational authorities and teachers the film-makers must condemn themselves for their own lack of enterprise, and not try to make out that it is the parsimony of educational authorities and the stupidity of teachers which are to blame.

"English history and British and Empire geography are taught in every public and elementary school more or less according to schemes—this part for the first and second years, the other for the third year, and so forth. I have never seen a film which would fit in with one of these schemes, and the film-maker must not ask the teacher to make the school scheme fit in with already existing films. I have seen films which showed delightful episodes and developments in the growth of flowers, but none of them, so far as I know, would have fitted in exactly with any course of school lessons on botany. And so I might go on, but I have said enough to illustrate my arguments.

"What I will add is that I believe that cinematography has not merely come to stop, but to develop and become a mighty engine of instruction and civilisation. Nothing I have said in condemnation of what films, supposed to be suitable for schools, are now, should be construed as opposition to, or depreciation of, what films for schools might be, and will be, I do not doubt, in the future."

SOME EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

The education department of the great firm of Pathé Frères is magnificently organised, and is under the control of an experienced educationist who has many valuable practical schemes to offer both to schoolmasters and to theatre proprietors.

The "Pathé Educational Course" comprises twenty-one educational programmes of carefully selected films. These are sent week by week for showing at children's matinées at a very low charge. Specific programmes made up of films entirely upon such subjects as animals, birds, fishes, insects, travel, etc., are also available for selection from Pathé's catalogue. Then there is the "Medical and Biological series" of four programmes, comprising some of the most wonderful scientific films ever produced. These are offered for showing at special performances to doctors, dentists, medical officers, hospitals, colleges, etc.

Among the very latest productions offered by the Department is the travel series of six films, "Wonderful Nights with Peter Kinema, in which a large number of Pathé's best travel pictures, dealing with countries throughout the world, are connected together by a fanciful story, showing how Peter Kinema, a Peter-Pan-like being, vizualises a small boy's geography lessons.

Other forthcoming notable Pathé films are "The Wonders of Marine Life" (three reels), a fascinating production gathering into one complete picture story the science of Oceanography; "The Praying Mantis"; "Herring Fishing in the North Sea"; "Strange South American Animals"; "A Trip in Southern India"; "Mountains and Torrents of the Caucasus"; "Temples of Nikko, Japan"; "Visit to a Potash Salt Mine"; "Winter Scenes in the Chamonix Valley"; "Fjords and Mountains of Norway," etc., etc.

The Eclair Company, whose educational department is managed by a gentleman with a long practical experience of education, regularly produce one or two travel or scientific films each week. Among the most notable of their recent and forthcoming pictures are "Interlaken, Switzerland"; "The Opossum, Flying Bat and Agouti"; a wonderful study of "Carnivorous Plants"; a well-arranged picture dealing with "The Common Viper"; "Durazzo," the obscure capital of Albania; "Venice, in a Gondola"; "Lake Como"; "The Gnat" (Culex); "The Water Hen," and many others. This firm also manufactures a remarkable portable fireproof projection machine, entitled "The Kineclair," which is particularly suitable for use in schools.

The Motograph Film Company has several remarkable pictures of great educational value to offer, amongst which are their "Cinema College" series, an admirably arranged course of pictorial lessons on "How Wild Animals Live"; "Nature's Zoo," a series of wonderful wild animal and travel studies taken by the well-known naturalist, Mr. Cherry Kearton, and including pictures of India, America, Borneo, Africa and British East Africa; a unique picture of "Big Game Hunting in the North Pole Icefields"; an informative "Trip Through India"; and a very interesting series, "J. C. Bee Mason and His Bee Films."

These few films, selected from amongst the latest productions, represent, of course, only an exceedingly small fraction of the total number of educational pictures available.

NOTES AND NEWS.

The latest addition to the rapidly growing list of educational matinée adherents and experimenters in England is the Rochdale Education Committee, which has decided to close the Council schools in the Milnrow district a little earlier than usual on certain days in order to allow the children, teachers, and managers to attend the matinée performances of Pathé educational films given at the Milnrow Empire Cinema.

For some time now fortnightly film lessons have formed a regular part of the curriculum at the Balham High School and other secondary schools in the district. The films are selected by the teachers, who give special lectures upon them a day or so before their exhibition, the cost of the method being completely covered by the children, who pay twopence each per lesson.

Among other schools at which education by cinematography has taken a permanent place are Oundle School and the schools of Nettlebed, Oxford.

JEAN HENRI FABRE,
The famous French entomologist who has superintended the production of Pathé's "The Wonders of Insect Life."

The fourth International Congress of Education and Public Instruction will take place at Leipzig from September 25th to 29th next. The well-known publicist, M. Arthur Melini, has been commissioned to draw up a report on the question of "The Cinematograph in the School."

The rapidity with which the educational and scientific use of the cinematograph increases in America is so great that it is difficult for the chronicler to keep pace with it. The last two or three numbers of our excellent New York contemporary, The Moving Picture World, contain any number of significant news items, amongst which are the following:—Both Harvard and Cornell Universities have adopted educational moving pictures.—Moving pictures of the brains of insane and normal men were shown at the annual meeting of the Medical Association of Pennsylvania. The films which have been introduced into the study of medicine by the faculty of the University are under the direction of Dr. C. K. Mills and Dr. T. H. Weisenberg.—The California State Board of Education has endorsed a plan for the use of the schools of the State as civic centres where moving pictures may be shown. The plan provides that the reels be selected by the Board, and the expenses borne by the individual districts.—Atlantic City has equipped a special moving picture department in its recently erected large school building.—In connection with its programme for the school year, the Board of Education at Dayton, Ohio, announces that "a summer school with modern playgrounds, free text-books and moving pictures are deemed proper essentials for satisfactory work."—The President of the Chamber of Commerce at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, presented to the Board of Education the question of adopting moving pictures in the following words:—"The great popularity of moving pictures and their possibilities as an educational factor, convince me that this form of amusement and instruction, properly regulated in the well-lighted and comfortable halls of our public schools, should be more widely adopted in considering the extended uses of our public buildings."

Most people are familiar with the marvellous studies of insect life, so extraordinary in their intimacy and detail, of Jean Henri Fabre, and it is, therefore, exceedingly interesting to learn that this great French entomologist has arranged and superintended the production of a film dealing with "The Wonders of Insect Life," for Messrs. Pathé Frères. It was in spite of terrible disadvantages and life-long poverty that Monsieur Fabre, who is a self-made scientist, carried on his laborious and infinitely patient observations of Nature's smaller creatures, his knowledge of which has made his name so famous throughout the world. No man, surely, ever possessed more fully than M. Fabre that genius which is the art of taking infinite pains, and it is pleasant to know that his prodigious labours, so modestly and quietly carried out, have now secured universal recognition.

M. Fabre's son is permanently on the staff of Pathé Frères at Paris.

EVENTS AT EVESHAM.

Mr. Beach, of the Electra Playhouse, did fine business with "In the Wilds of Africa." For the latter part of the week he made a special number of Whimsical Threads of Destiny." This is the "anniversary week, and witnesses the initial production in Evesham of "By the Cross."

LEAVING FOR LONDON.

On Monday last Mr. G. E. Redman, who had been manager of the Kinema Palace, St. Leonards-on-Sea, since its opening, left the town to engage in the film business in London. Mr. Redman will, however, continue at week-ends to reside in the pleasant coast resort where he has become a popular local figure.

SATURDAY AT HENDON.

We are advised, for the benefit of our readers who may contemplate a visit to the London Aerodrome on Saturday next that further entries have been received for the Aeriel Derby and that the enclosures will be opened at noon. In anticipation of a record gate increased accommodation is to be provided and special transit arrangements are being planned from all parts.

SUPPORT FOR EDUCATIONIST.

We are pleased to note that a goodly measure of influential support is being accorded to the educational film lectures given by Mr. Edward Stokoe, the headmaster of the Tolworth Council Schools. His recent Saturday matinées at the Coronation Hall, Surbiton, created a splendid impression and have inspired special articles by the local Press. Picture theatre managers and proprietors who may desire Mr. Stokoe's services are requested to address communications to 6, Guildford Avene, Surbiton, Surrey.

JOTTINGS FROM ULSTER.

Mr. Dawson, of the Frances Street Cinema, Newtownards, recently scored a big success with "Sexton Blake." In no town in Ulster has this famous detective hero such a following, and, needless to add, with a capacity of 350, the hall was packed twice nightly. The remainder of the programme was of Pathé's one-reel subjects, and was delightfully diversified.—Kinema House is the name given to what the management describe as the newest and most up-to-date picture house in Belfast. Their claim is fully justified, for in picturesque design and the luxury of its appointments it could scarcely be beaten. Built externally in the Shakespearian style, the hall is approached through a small but magnificently decorated vestibule, in the centre of which is a miniature cascade—the fall of water rendering the air delightfully cool. A pronounced and beautifully graduated slope in the floor of Kinema House gives a perfect and unobstructed view from every one of the 550 comfortable plush tip-ups, whilst the "time o' day" is very clearly indicated above the screen by an electric clock.—It will be recalled, writes our correspondent, that some months ago I intimated that a site for a cinema was being looked for at Bloomfield, Belfast. Considerable time has elapsed but at last the site has been selected and plans are in course of preparation. The new theatre will be erected on an excellent site at the Holywood Arches.

MANAGERIAL CHANGE.

Mr. E. Cawse-Morgon, who has successfully managed the Electric Theatre, Canterbury, for the past two years, is leaving to take up an appointment as assistant manager of the exclusive department of the Western Import Company. During his stay in Canterbury, Mr. Morgon has made many friends, and last Friday, the occasion of his farewell benefit, the house was packed to its fullest capacity. The band of the East Kent Yeomanry gave their services, and during the evening played some excellent selections.

PROGRESS AND A REMOVAL.

Some little time ago we made mention of the removal of the offices of Mr. T. R. Arton to larger premises in Charing Cross Road, W.C. A comprehensive and well designed catalogue has now been issued of the huge stock of non-flam and celluloid films, and particulars of the various lines emanating from this well-known house, which cannot but be of interest to all in the business. A special feature is made of publicity matter, a large stock of posters for all makes being kept in stock. The amount of film upon the shelves of the firm and at the fireproof stores is said to be just over 2,000,000 ft., and includes a list of really good feature subjects. A notable innovation of recent date is that of a variety booking agency in charge of a manager of wide experience. Those who run both classes of business can, by this arrangement, be supplied from the establishment. It might be mentioned en passant that the Agency is fully licensed according to London County Council requirements.

ON THE SOUTH EAST COAST.

Considering the many attractions at Folkestone business is particularly good. "True Irish Hearts," the principal film at the Playhouse, was much appreciated.—The Electric did well with "The Black Mafia."—The W. W. Jacobs series is becoming very popular at the Central, George Lane. "Beauty and the Barge" proved an immense attraction.—"Sixty Years a Queen" has been responsible for good houses at the Town Hall, with three exhibitions daily.—Cheriton Electric showed the special film of the "Decrepit Horse Traffic." Mr. W. Rendell gave a short descriptive address and many prominent people attended.—Ramsgate is recording good houses. Mr. Reg. V. Crow had a record last week at the King's Theatre, an exceptional programme being provided, which included "David Garrick" and "A Gamble for Life."—"In Peril of the Law" and "In the Hand of the Law" were exclusives shown at the Queen's.—Shanly's are showing an additional feature in each programme, "Fantomas" and "The Trap" were amongst the best.—"The Golden Pathway" and "In the Shadow of the Throne" head the list of good things provided by Mr. Fumagalli at the Cinema, Broadstairs.—At Margate, Mr. C. W. Stanley is to be complimented on the excellence of the fare at the Parade Cinema. "The Life of Carpentier" and "Street Singers" were popular features.—Mr. C. W. Ellis is going ahead at the Clifton Cinema. "The Human Torpedo," "The Black Mafia" and "Mid Kentucky Hills" were much appreciated.—"In Peril of the Law" and "In the Hand of the Law" were principal attractions at the Lounge, Cliftonville.

PHŒNIX EXCLUSIVES.

The Phœnix exclusive, "Pearls of Death," is proving a useful and attractive number, receiving a good share of bookings. Amongst other towns, it is being shown this week at Bristol, Lowestoft, West Bromwich, etc. The next Phœnix exclusive released will be "Stolen Honours," about the same length as "Pearls of Death" (approx. 3,000 ft.).

RIGHTS FOR THE WORLD.

We present our compliments to that enterprising firm, the James McEnnery Syndicate, upon the acquisition of the world's right of Mr. Laurence Cowen's film-drama, "The World, the Flesh and the Devil." We hear also that Mr. J. McEnnery left yesterday (Wednesday) for the States by the S.S. Olympic for the especial purpose of exploiting the film in America. We wish him a safe voyage and feel assured that he will speedily effect extensive arrangements for this release.

CANTERBURY CHIMES.

Plans have been passed for a particularly fine theatre to be erected at Lower Bridge Street. This will be known as the St. George's Theatre, and will take the place of the existing cinema controlled by Mr. John H. Wills. Building operations are to commence early in June on a handsome picture theatre erected entirely by local enterprise. The site contains a frontage of 92 ft. with a depth of 72 ft. There will be a café lounge fitted with a complete view of the screen, the total accommodation in the theatre being 650. The architects are Messrs. Jennings and Gray, of Canterbury.—"Mounted Officer Flynn" proved a popular number at the Cinema. The "Warwick Chronicle" and local topicals are always interesting. "The Great Python Robbery" and "Tower of Terror" are top of the bill this week.—"Wamba" and "Her Children" were much appreciated by good houses at the Electric, St. Peter's, the lighter element being well supplied by "The House of Distemperly" and "A Misplaced Foot." "The Millionairess" is billed for this week.

NEW YORKSHIRE SYNDICATE.

We hear that Baildon, one of the quaintest of Yorkshire's moorland townships, is to have another picture house. On Thursday evening last at Bradford a meeting was held by a number of Bradford gentlemen, who decided to form the Baildon Picture and Café Company, Limited, with a capital of £7,000. Mr. Haggas is the secretary, and a site has been secured in the Market Place. The whole will be cleared and the theatre is to be erected on the most up-to-date lines. Plans have been prepared by Messrs. Kirby and Botterill, architects, of Bradford. The seating capacity in the theatre will be 600, and in the cafe 250. The auditorium is to be about 90 ft. in length by 45 ft. in width. There will be an ornate semi-circular roof, and the entrance, which will be between two new shops, will be 20 ft. wide, and will give access to a comfortably furnished lounge. Cafe accommodation will be provided both on the ground and first floors. The latter will be on the lines of a Continental café, giving a fine view of the moors, which are visited by thousands of holiday makers throughout the summer. In all probability, though this is not quite decided, there will be stage and dressing accommodation. The lighting will be by electricity, generated on the premises, the heating by low pressure steam radiators, and the ventilation mechanical, while the seating will be tip-up chairs throughout. Building will be commenced as soon as the plans have been accepted by the Council, and the place is expected to be open for the coming winter.

A TRADE CHANGE.

Mr. Will H. Noel has, we hear, left the G.C.A., Limited, Shaftesbury Avenue, in order to take up a new appointment with the Yorkshire Sales Agency, in Gerrard Street, W.

SPORTING REMINDER.

A particularly breezy reminder comes to hand from Cherry Kearton, Limited, regarding the Warwick topical of "The Derby." The leaflet is quite in the approved sporting style and gives some facts which should appeal to those on the look-out for an interesting resume of the great racing classic.

AN "APEX" ARRIVAL.

Apex Films, Limited, announce the acquisition of a very fine three-part drama entitled "When the Light Went Out." Some of the very best of Continental artistes, it is said, appear, and the story, a stirring tale of the sea. A really striking cover adorns the souvenir which has been prepared for this feature.

FOR THE CAMERA MAN.

The May issue of the Photographic Dealer contains a well-written account of the Photographic Arts and Crafts Exhibition held at the Horticultural Hall, S.W., and presents a really admirable guide to all that is best in the show, the illustrations being a special feature of this notable issue of a popular magazine.

SHOWMEN AND A STRIKE.

At Keighley a strike of engineers at the local machine shops is in progress, and Mr. W. H. Weatherhead and his colleagues of the Cosy Corner Picture House have made a donation to the fund organised for the benefit of non-unionist workers, the sum of £5 being forwarded by chepue by Mr. Weatherhead, and gratefully acknowledge by the committee.

STAGING A WAR PICTURE.

The value for good effects for a military drama has been exemplified by last week's presentation at the King's Hall, Stourbridge, of "The Curse of War." The film was only released during the week, and Messrs. Pathé Frères' representative came down specially to the theatre in order to note how the stage effects were worked. These reflected great credit on the ingenuity of the manager, Mr. H. I. Wharton, and of his stage-manager, Mr. F. Gittens.

DOINGS AT DERBY.

The huge building to be known as the Hippodrome is being pushed rapidly forward at Derby, and when completed will form one of the largest and best equipped variety and picture houses in the Midlands. In addition, an excellent site has been secured in St. Peter's Street for another up-to-date picture house.—Although the Alexandra has a seating capacity of 1,200, Mr. F. W. Walker often finds the accommodation severely taxed. The programmes, which include a taste of variety, are quite up to date. This week the exclusives "Lasca," "The Cry of the Blood" and "The Story of a Crime" appear. A delightful comedy, entitled "Always Tell Your Wife," was a popular item provided by Mr. J. H. Pearman at the Cosy last week. "The Road to Ruin" has made a most auspicious beginning of a six-days' run.—Mr. J. M. Allen features "The Grip of Circumstances" and "Fitzhugh's Ride" at the suburban Normanton Palace.—"The Heart of Kathleen," "Race With Death" and "On Secret Service" are the specials at the Victoria Electric.

COMPLIMENT TO ECLAIR.

From Eclair House we learn that Sir Thos. Lipton, who is fitting out a cinema equipment in connection with his visit to the States in the autumn, has paid the Eclair Company the compliment of adopting the Eclair film camera. This is the second time during the month that this camera has been selected on the advice of an expert. Naturally, Mr. Ratisbonne is gratified at the compliment.

A HOME COUNTY CIRCUIT.

The directors of the Hoddesdon Cinema, Limited, are now controlling four theatres, namely, the Hoddesdon, Royston, Bishop's Stortford and Cheshunt houses, Mr. A. J. Hatrick being the managing director of the company. This circuit has of late shown a very fine list of exclusive and other films, including "The Diver" and "Escape of Jim Dolan." Forthcoming features include "Moths," "The Great Leap" and "True Irish Hearts," so that patrons have some good things in store.

A ROYAL COMPLIMENT.

Mr. Herbert G. Ponting has received a handsome souvenir as a memento of the recent presentation at Buckingham Palace, before the King and Queen of Denmark, of his lecture and cinema record of Captain Scott's Expedition. We hear that some very tempting offers have been made to Mr. Ponting to take the lecture throughout the Colonies, but for the present he prefers to remain at the Philharmonic Hall. A Parisian season was, however, inaugurated on Saturday afternon last, when Mr. Ponting's lecture (translated into French) was delivered at the Rejane Theatre by Mr. Victor Marcel. There is every indication of as great a success for the display in Paris as there has been in London.

PROSPECT AT BRIGHOUSE.

Mr. S. J. Henry, lessee and manager of the Town Hall Pictures, Brighouse, and one of the most popular members of the Trade in Yorkshire, mentioned, in the course of a conversation with a BIOSCOPE representative last week, a scheme for a new theatre, the site for which has already been chosen in Commercial Street. Building operations will be commenced in June, and the house will, it is hoped, be open for Christmas. The frontage will be in white stone, there will be accommodation for 1,200, and a 30 ft. stage will be provided, to permit of vaudeville and other entertainments being included. A glass-covered waiting space the full length of the theatre will be provided to accommodate he queues. At the Town Hall Mr. Henry is at present working the Sherlock Holmes series with great success.

ATTRACTIONS AT WORCESTER.

The great attraction at the Arcade Cinema during last week was the film depicting life of the British Army. On Monday and Thursday afternoons the band of the Worcestershire Regiment played selections during the performance, while on the Wednesday the band, together with the headquarter's company of the 8th Battalion, Worcestershire Regiment attended. This film has been the means of arousing great interest in the city in connection with the Army. Mr. Milton has added another to his laurels in being the means of arousing such interest, and it is very gratifying to see the way in which the military authorities helped him during the week.—The Empire Hall has for several years past made a practice of discarding the "twice nightly programme" during the summer months, and on Monday last commenced a continuous programme.

A GLASGOW REOPENING.

At an early date the old West End Picture House, at Charing Cross, Glasgow, will be reopened. The building is at present in the hands of the painters and decorators, the entire premises undergoing a complete renovation.

NEW APPOINTMENT.

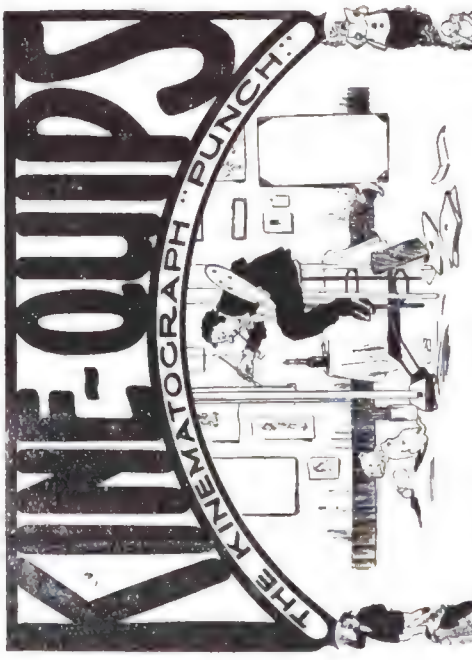
We note that Mr. John Pearson, of the Tyler Apparatus Company, Limited, has just been appointed manager of the apparatus department at 15, Gerrard Street, W., and will be pleased to greet old and new friends at that address. Mr. Pearson, during his service with the company, has installed Tyler "Indomitable" machines, and the "Cinfonium" at a large number of theatres in all parts of the kingdom.

INITIAL EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

An interesting little ceremony took place the other day at the Theatre Royal, Bury St. Edmunds, when Mr. Alec Wilkinson, the popular actor-manager, was presented with a gold vesta case to commemorate the success of his initial efforts in the city. On giving up the management of the Gem, Great Yarmouth, Mr. Wilkinson was, it may be mentioned, the recipient of a handsome clock, presented to him by the staff as a mark of their esteem.

BUILDING IN UDDINGSTON.

At the end of the present month the Scottish Cinematograph Company will commence building operations for their new theatre at Uddingston. The new house will be on the most approved principles, and is to be situated in the centre of the town adjoining the car terminus. Business in the old hall continues good, and excellent programmes are being shown. The Bijou, Glasgow, belonging to the same company, is also about to have a first-class entrance hall constructed, an adjoining shop being acquired for the purpose.



AN AID TO THE SHOWMAN.

Throwaways are always welcome because they are always helpful. The other day we had to compliment Eclair House on the preparation of an ingenious revolving panel to be used by exhibitors when showing "Protea II." We now have before us another dainty throwaway, to be used in the same connection. It consists of a coloured sheet with eight views taken from the film, with a description under each, the whole of the reading matter forming a synopsis of the film. On the back of the sheet is a space for the imprint of the exhibitor, the whole forming a very concise sheet of advertising matter. Exhibitors can obtain these throwaways from Eclair House at 10s. per 1,000.

CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

"The Two Divers" and "The White Feather" have been the chief films at the Rectory Hall, Guernsey, where also has been introduced the "Topical Budget." The Keystone comics created roars of laughter.—At the Opera House, Jersey, a series of special educational matinées have been held. At the evening shows "The Cast of the Die," "Through Flaming Paths" and "Reinstated" have been screened.—At the Alhambra, Jersey, "The Honour of Lady Beaumont," "Lily, the Housekeeper" and "A Lad from Ireland" have formed a strong line in the programmes.—"Bull Fighters of Spain," "Hearts and Flowers" and "The Message of the Sun Dial" have been shown at West's Picture Palace, Jersey.—Mr. Albany Ward has secured yet another place of entertainment in Jersey—i.e., the Olympia, formerly used as a skating rink.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY.

The directors of the Eastman Kodak Company, of New Jersey, have declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent. on the Common Stock, payable on July 1st, to stockholders of record on May 29th. This is in addition to the usual quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent. (being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum) upon outstanding PreferredStock, and of 2½ per cent. (at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum) upon outstanding Common Stock, payable on July 1st.

WORTHY OF EMULATION.

Our Glasgow representative informs us that Mr. James Hamilton, treasurer of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Branch of the Exhibitors' Association, has just had printed at his own expense 1,000 copies of the extract from the report of the Chief Constable of Blackpool, as published in THE BIOSCOPE last week. Members of the Association were each supplied with parcels of the leaflets for distribution to their clients, and copies have also been sent to the various authorities in Glasgow.

ENTERPRISE AT ARBROATH.

Mr. Arthur Dean, of the Palace Theatre, Arbroath, Scotland, is making sure of his houses by supplying his patrons with special programmes. Last week "Sixty Years a Queen" was screened, and this week the attraction is the "Miracle." The production of the former film saw a new record created, and this "The Miracle" is expected to at least equal. The orchestra, under Mr. Herbert A. Dowson, renders special music. The Palace is the oldest theatre in Arbroath and, writes our Glasgow correspondent, a first-class house in every way.

AN ARTISTIC APPEAL.

Another very beautiful souvenir has come to hand from the Kinema Exclusive Company, and is specially designed in connection with their great detective feature based upon the exploits of Mons. Lecocq, the world-famous French criminologist. The film, entitled "The Tragedy of the Pepper Box Inn," is a magnificent Eclair production, 3,000 ft. in length, and the souvenir, with its artistic illustrations and red Jap vellum cover, forms a book well worthy of the subject. The Kinema Exclusive Company hold the exclusive rights for the United Kingdom.

BRIEFS FROM BOOTLE.

Crowded audiences expressed their appreciation at the Bootle Picture Palace, of "Round the World in Two Hours." It is interesting to note that forty-five minutes after the photographing of the scene showing Mr. W. Green's commencement from the portals of the Palace on his "tour of the world," the film was ready for the machine. The excellent Red Imperial Orchestra which plays at the Palace is the largest in Bootle.—The management of the Apollo have departed from the custom of interspersing the variety turns with pictures. "The Golden Beetle" and "The Gamble for Life" proved irresistible attractions at the Sun Hall, where Mr. J. L. Greene is making a special line of exclusives.—The designation of Waterloo's oldest cinema has been altered from the Winter Gardens to the Picture Playhouse.—Amongst the attractions booked by Mr. Michael Pearson, the enterprising manager of the Aintree Palace, are "Napoleon's Last Campaign," "Old Curiosity Shop," "In Mid-Atlantic" and "The Red Club."—The completion of the new Rice Lane Picture House is being rapidly proceeded with. It is intended to provide continuous entertainments from 6.30, and Mr. Eric Thornber has been appointed manager. Variety turns have been introduced into the programmes at the Seaforth Palladium with success.

NEW BRAND COMING.

We hear that the Western Import Company, Limited, will shortly be showing a new brand of films, which will be termed the "Royal." Messrs. George Reehms, Walter Stull and Robert Burns, a trio who have scored no inconsiderable success in the "Komic" films, are among the artistes named to appear in the new releases. The Komic films, of course, will be continued by the Mutual Corporation, and will be, as usual, handled over here by Western Import.

HARROW HEADLINES.

Sparing no effort to entertain their public, Messrs. Tipping continue the best of programmes at the Station Road Cinema. This week Max Pemberton's "Kronstadt" is the star film in a list full of strong attractions. "She Stoops to Conquer" is to be shown next week, and has aroused much anticipation in the district.—At the Harrow Picturedrome, this week's features are "Court Intrigue in the Reign of Henry VIII." and "Her Scorn Repaid."—At the Wealdstone Cinema, considerable success has been achieved by the management, and during last week "A Gambler's Wager" was an item responsible for full houses. The programme now running includes "David Garrick."

A REMOVAL AT LEEDS.

"'Tis not in mortals to command success," says Addison, but notwithstanding this, Mr. John Lambert, of the Wellington Film Service, Limited, of Leeds, has seen his business reshaped to such an extent that the little private business had first to be expanded into a limited liability company, and now, after a short career, removed into more substantial and roomy premises. The new warehouse is in Aire Street, and therefore still in the heart of "Cinematown." Within immediate touch of all the railway termini and of the Central Telegraph Offices, the facilities for communication with clients, and dispatch, will be of an exceptional nature. Unfailing courtesy and attention to the needs of exhibitors have built up the Wellington Service, and these factors—combined with the best of "the goods," should ensure for the firm a bright future.

BUSINESS AT BRISTOL.

The managers of the various Bristol picture halls have decided to hold a picnic on June 21st, and are arranging a "distinct novelty" for the occasion. Details we hope to receive later. Calling in at the Coliseum, writes our local correspondent, I was just in time to hear Mr. Tom Powers give his very interesting film lecture, and I understand he has proved a big draw. Mr. Powers stated that he thought the Coliseum one of the cosiest halls he had seen, and spoke in terms of especial praise of Mr. Claude Simmonds, the manager.—The Clare Street Picture House is maintaining its popularity, "Lawyer Quince" proving a big success.—Mr. Horace Livermore, at the Palace, has been showing "The Miracle," with full band and choir, and large audiences have been the result.—At the Queen's Hall, the "Sherlock Holmes" series finds favour, the star film this week being "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale." Mr. Gristwood, we regret to hear, is leaving the hall. He has proved a most popular manager, and will, indeed, be hard to replace.—One can always see a tip-top programme at the Cinema, Castle Street, and under the management of Mr. Alec Grant this theatre is considered one of the most successful in the city.—The Knowle Picture House attracts large audiences, and Mr. Webster spares no pains to give his patrons what they require.—At the Premier Theatre, Horfield, business has been very good since opening, and Mr. Justin is well pleased with the success the house has attained.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

Kensal Rise Palace has been going very strong with "The Rosary." This was presented a few weeks ago, and proved so popular that a "repeat" was arranged for last Monday for three days, which were extended to a week. A feature found specially agreeable to the audience has been the singing of the song of the same name during the screening of the film. The seating accommodation, which is 800, has been taxed to its utmost. The house is nearing the end of its first year, having been opened in July, 1913, and has been latterly under the management of Mr. W. H. Parker.

The King's Palace, Kensal Rise, has just come under the management of Mr. Dudley Benda, lately holding appointments at Enfield and Palmer's Green. The house, which belongs to the Acme Picture Palace Company, Limited, is a large one, holding over 1,000, the auditorium being approached by a handsome vestibuled entrance hall. Star films last week were "Fighters of the Plain" and "The Red Spiders."

Mr. H. Gambitski, manager of the Grand, West Kilburn, believes in backing up a good entertainment by cultivating personal relations with the patrons of his house. A pleasant greeting and such a compliment as the occasional presentation of fans to ladies or cigars to gentlemen have been found useful for this purpose. In addition to strictly managerial duties, Mr. Gambitski possesses a knowledge of the technical side of cinema work. Last week "The Miracle" was presented, and proved a great attraction. The house holds between 400 and 500, and its children's matinées on Saturdays are a very successful feature.

A very appreciative audience occupied the Prince of Wales Playhouse, Harrow Road, on Friday evening. On Friday evenings old age pensioners are admitted free, and reductions are made to national reservists and boy scouts, a policy which is decidedly popular. Star films last week were "The Mystery of the Old Mill" and "The Curse of War." For next week Mr. E. Sandon, the manager, has arranged to show "The Lights of London."

The Stockwell Palladium, in Clapham Road, is making astonishingly rapid progress towards completion, although it was started long after the Majestic, High Street, Clapham. The latter house has of late suffered delay in its finishing touches owing to the builders' strike in London. At the approaching opening of the Majestic, the proprietors are giving a large number of free admission tickets to applicants who write for the same.

Thanks to Mr. C. Stretton Walker, the busines manager of the Brixton Palladium, the forthcoming representation at that house of the British Army film is to be made the occasion of a patriotic demonstration in order to secure recruits for the services, regular and auxiliary. Many public men of Lambeth have promised their support, and it is fortunate that the Vicar of Brixton is among the number. Regulars, Territorials, and Boy Scouts will do their part in creating enthusiasm.

In the adjoining borough of Camberwell the organisers have been counting up the number of possible recruits forthcoming as the result of their admirably arranged Colours Week given in conjunction with the screening of the Army film at the Peckham Hippodrome. For service with the regulars there were over 100 youths who offered to enlist, while nearly 400 applications were received for particulars of the conditions of service. The National Reserve secured forty adherents, while the Red Cross detachment gained thirty-one new members. Particulars of numbers of recruits sent to the Territorials are not yet available.

Brixton is maintaining its reputation for high-class films. "The Tragedy in the Clouds" was the top-liner at the Palladium for the first three days of this week, and for the second half "The Grip" will provide another exclusive.—"The Cry of the Child" at the Pavilion during the three days ended yesterday, and "True Irish Hearts" will be among the attractions to-day (Thursday), Friday, and Saturday.

The coloured films comprised in "Romance of Old Brittany" were the leading attractions at the Queen's Hall, Newington Butts, up to yesterday (Wednesday). During the remainder of the week "Branscombe's Pal" heads the programme.

Balham residents have had a fine choice of programme this week. Pyke's Theatre screened "The Suffragette," to be followed till Saturday by "Caprice."—The Palladium's chief item is "The Lady of Monsoreau," while for next week "The Lights of London" is announced.—Capital catering for the patrons of the de Luxe has been shown by Mr. W. Cutler, who last week introduced a novelty in the violin solos of Mr. Kovarick, the Hungarian, whose success has led to an extension of his visit to next Saturday. "Her Dreadful Secret" was the top line till yesterday, and the chief films until Saturday evening are "The Missing Clue" and "The Return of the Emigrant."

Variety is introduced in the programmes at Streatham Empire this week by the visit of Miss Norah Desmond, the soprano, while the leading films are "The Tudor Princess" and "The Staircase of Death."

"A Romance of Old Brittany" is staged at the Central Hall, Upper Tooting.—Farther south, the Broadway Palace showed "Give us this Day—," and to-day (Thursday) it is followed by "Classmates."—At the Pavilion, "The Battle of Manilla" and "The Accusing Skeleton" are the main items.—Throughout the week the British Army film has been shown twice nightly at the King's Hall.

Mr. G. Martinengo is providing an unusually strong programme at the Picture House, Crouch End, including "The Lady of the Camelias." Matinées are given on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30 p.m. The gardens adjoining this fine theatre are being prepared, and will be opened shortly for open-air pictures.

Asta Nielsen in "Up To Her Tricks" and "The Witch of Salem" were responsible for large crowds at the Crouch End Hippodrome. The variety programme last week was provided by Miss Edith Williams, Miss Clare Wood, and Mr. Charles Wreford. Matinées are held on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

Mr. Courtney Crocker, manager of the Electric Coliseum, gave his patrons a fine show last week, "The Bride of Mystery" and "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" topping the bill. A capable orchestra, under the leadership of Herr Goodowski, plays suitable accompaniments. On the 28th there are to be special performances in aid of the Stoke Newington Hospital Saturday Fund, under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress of Stoke Newington.

The popularity of the Amherst Hall, Kingsland, increases each succeeding week. Excellent business was done with "A Million in Jewels" and "For the Freedom of Cuba."

The Tottenham picture palaces are doing very well indeed. Mr. Harry J. Benjamin finds business particularly good at the People's Palace. This theatre is capable of seating 650 persons, and the programme includes one or two variety turns. The prices of admission are 3d., 4d., and 6d.

Mr. Hooberman is showing his usual good programme at the Corner Picture Palace, Seven Sisters Road, and as a result is doing satisfactory business. — "The Witch of Salem" proved a successful top-liner at the Canadian Rink Cinema. —Excellent business has been done at the Central Hall Picture Palace, Stamford Hill, with "Master of the World."

Seating accommodation at the Clapton Cinematograph Theatre was at a premium last week. The programme shown by Miss Florence Johnson included "Secret Service" and "The Invincible Hand." The Sunday shows are given in aid of the Haggerston Medical Society.

Sunday pictures at the Dalston Theatre and Hackney Empire are "going strong."—A special attraction at the Kingsland Picture Theatre was the appearance of Miss Dorothy Milne, who recited to the picture, "Papa's Letter."

AT BREEZY BLACKPOOL.

The management of the Palace Electric, on the Central Promenade, prepared a specially strong programme for their patrons last week, when the "Perils of the Sea" proved a popular star. This week "Jim the Fireman," "The Little Burglar" and "Stanton's Last Fling" top the bill. Keystones provide the comic element in "The Champion" and "Piedro as Dog Charmer."—Mr. Sellars, manager of the Picture Theatre, Warbreck Road, finds business very good, and it was a wise move on his part to feature "Sapho" last week, this being the first time the film had been shown in Blackpool. Another winner was "Black Nissen."—At the Royal Pavilion, Tyldslev Road, capital programmes are to be seen. There is a full performance each afternoon and evening, and the programmes are changed twice weekly. This week the leading attractions for the first three days were "Baboon's Vengeance" and "Snatched from Death." The principal subjects for the rest of the week are "The White Lie" and "The Wolf of the City."—"A Winter's Tale" proved an exceedingly good draw at the Central Cinema last week. The Mayor and Mayoress were in attendance on Tuesday evening, and they were accompanied by the ex-Mayor and Mayoress, the occasion being a benefit performance in aid of the Blackpool Bohemians' Benevolent Fund. Orchestral items were given under the direction of Mr. T. Cheetham.

Manchester and District Notes.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The next few weeks will see quite a number of new picture theatres open in Manchester, and those either in the early stages of construction or merely proposed are more numerous still. One of the earliest to be opened is an entirely new hall, owned by Mr. B. Rhodes, which will be known as La Scala. It is hoped to have it ready by about Whitsun, and will undoubtedly be one of the largest in the neighbourhood, arrangements having been made to seat 1,800 people. The position is good, being just off Oxford Road. About the same time, in the next turning, Rosamond Street East, Mr. Blinkhorn will be re-opening the Paragon, which has been considerably improved and enlarged to accommodate 1,200. Then there is the Royal, a new building in Princess Road, expected to be ready in about six weeks. I understand this hall has been very elaborately fitted, and will possess seats for 700. In addition to these, a piece of land has been acquired directly behind Owen's College for the College Palace. Among the special features of the latter, it is proposed to have a daily change of programme and popular prices of 2d., 3d., and 4d. Yet another for which space is being cleared is on the corner of Grosvenor Street, opposite All Saints' Church.

The Oxford Picture House is now under the management of Mr. Reed, with Mr. Smith as assistant. Their enterprise in securing an excellent topical of the Lord Mayor of London's visit to Manchester has been well rewarded by results. It is showing throughout the week exclusively here and at the Market Street Picture House, and consists of a fine series of pictures taken by Gaumonts'. It is approximately 1,200 ft. in length. The chief items recorded are the presentation ceremony, the luncheon party, and the Garden Party at Heaton Park. Apart from Manchester, it will also be shown at the Prince of Wales Picture House, Clayton Square, Liverpool, and the Picture Houses, Leeds and Halifax. The programme at the Oxford Picture House is an exceptionally good one this week, as, in addition, "She Stoops to Conquer" and "The Baby Spy" are included.

The Trocadero, Wilmslow Road, exercise great care in their selection of films, and invariably succeed in getting together an entertainment of more than ordinary merit. This is one reason why it is so seldom Mr. Spilsbury is in the position to grumble at attendances. Another is that the pictures shown are so greatly improved by the fact that a Perlantino screen is used. The Platt Picturedrome, Limited, 94, Wilmslow Road, Rusholme, the company owning the Trocadero, have for some considerable time past been the agents for Manchester and surrounding districts for the Perlantino Screen Company, and Mr. Spilsbury will be pleased to submit samples and show the screen in use to anyone interested. With regard to the entertainment provided this week, the two most important pictures are "Antique Brooch" and "The Filly." Among recent successes "Anne Boleyn" went extremely well.

The Princess, Raby Street, Moss Side, had, as usual, an audience of satisfactory size when I called. It is a popular house, and will no doubt easily hold its own when the several new theatres in the neighbourhood have been opened. Last week "The Opium Smoker," "One of the Bravest," and "Officer John Donovan" created most interest. This week, in addition to Keystone comedies, "Bride of Mystery," "Black Gang," and "Gamble With Life" are the pick of an excellent programme.

The Moss Side Electric Theatre, Darncombe Street, Raby Street, has and holds a clientele of its own under the able management of Mr. Fred Hargreaves. Last week good business was done with "The Secret of Adrianople," "The Dungeon of Steel," "The Corsican Brothers," and "Count and the Cowboys." This week the principal items of a good, all-round programme are "Thor" and "The Price of Thoughtlessness." Among the pictures recently shown those attracting most attention were found to be "David Copperfield," "Eileen, of Erin," and "Gunmaker of Moscow."

The Coliseum, Ardwick Green, has, as usual, this week an excellent selection of pictures. A fresh star picture every day in an entirely new programme is the novelty which is provided. Last week among the many were "The Chronicles of Cleek—Detective," "The Bride of Mystery," and "A Gamble for Life." This week the principal films are "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "At the Eleventh Hour," and "A Race With Death."

The Theatre Royal has been running last week and this "With Captain Scott in the Antarctic." Mr. C. H. Meares, who accompanied the South Pole Expedition, is delivering a lecture at each performance to Mr. Herbert G. Ponting's pictures.

LINCOLNSHIRE NOTES.

I notice the whole of the school children of Boston are again to pay a visit to the local picture houses. An application was made to the Boston Education Authority from the "Old Brigade" Committee to grant permission for a holiday to the school children of the town on Empire Day. It was stated by Mr. Blanshard that in the morning, instead of the masters giving lectures, they were to be taken to the three picture houses, the proprietors of which were showing special educational films, and admitting the children at a nominal charge, which would probably be paid by the "Old Brigade" Committee. The request was granted. This is an innovation that will doubtless prove exceedingly popular, and might well be copied by other authorities in the district.

Probably record crowds thronged the magnificent Scala Theatre, Boston, recently, when large numbers visited the town for the Fair. Mr. Marlow placed fine programmes before his appreciative audiences, and the delightful orchestral music (under the conductorship of Mr. A. W. Turner) is always greatly enjoyed. "Judith of Bethulia" was the top-liner during the first three days, and the week-end feature was "A Fortune in Flames." Harry Mayer's "Pen Laughs," Keystone and Edison comedies and dramas, with clever vaudeville "turns," made up a good list. Mr. Marlow starred last week "The Lure of Gold," "The Curse of the Indian God" and "Divorce."

Mr. Orbell, the proprietor of the Sleaford Picture Palace, in applying for the renewal of his licence for another year, at the Petty Sessions asked permission to exhibit religious pictures on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas Day. The Bench refused the application for any but weekdays. It is a noteworthy fact that in several neighbouring towns where opening of picture houses on Sundays is allowed, the police authorities speak in the highest praise of the benefit derived therefrom. Mr. Orbell has recently featured "The Burning Train," The Lost Millionaire," and "In Convict Garb."

Despite the numerous counter-attractions in Boston during Fair week, the manager of the new Quay Picture House has well held his own in popular favour. "Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show" was a very successful screening, backed by "Embarrassment of Riches." "The Great Gold Robbery" was the week-end feature.

The Picture House, Spalding, well maintains its popularity. Here are a few recent specials:—"The Secret of Adrianople," "Whimsical Threads of Destiny," "Sherlock Holmes" series, "Honesty" "The Gunmaker of Moscow," and "Between Man and Beast." Mr. Wood's orchestra gives high-class programmes at each performance.

Some interesting local views were shown at the Spalding Picture Palace, and created much interest. Three autochromes of fields of tulips growing at Spalding were thrown on the screen. They were the first efforts of a young amateur (Mr. W. H. Waldcock) and bearing in mind the difficulty of exhibiting these photographs in natural colours, came out remarkably well. Views of Mr. Pennington's new show and tea rooms have also been shown, and proved a splendid advertisement. The way these local view have been received leads one to the conclusion that the management of the various houses in the district might do well to give attention in this direction.

Last week I paid a round of visits at Lincoln, and was very favourably impressed with the splendid manner in which the respective managers were catering, both in the accommodation provided and the up-to-date programmes. At the Cinematograph Hall there is seating accommodation for 1,500, and it is frequently packed to the doors. Mr. Kadwell is in charge here, and has a record in the cinema industry, of which any man might well be proud. His genial personality has gained for him enormous popularity. "Orders Under Seal," "The Air Torpedo," "Old St. Paul's" and "The Crusaders" are the latest successes here.

TRAWLINGS FROM GRIMSBY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

As I mentioned in these notes a fortnight ago, the by-election at Grimsby caused a big run on the picture theatres for public meetings. The Gaiety, Tivoli, Paragon, were all used for this purpose. The first mentioned cinema probably holds the record for accommodating successive public meetings at an election time, for meetings were held there on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday nights, and they were all for the winning side. The cinema has also entered into the election in indoor and outdoor displays, while the time of those who waited outside the Town Hall for the declaration of the poll was pleasantly beguiled by an open-air picture entertainment.

An application was made at the County Police Court last Tuesday week on behalf of Mr. Alfred Buckle, for cinematograph and dancing licences for the new picture house in High Street, Cleethorpes—which is, I believe, to be known as the Coliseum. Deputy Chief Constable Osborn said he was not satisfied as to the completion of the building, and asked for an adjournment for a week. This the magistrates agreed to.

I notice that the Empire, Alexandra Road, Cleethorpes, has adopted the handy style of vest pocket programme which, I mentioned some time ago, was prepared by the Lyric management. The funeral of the late Sir George Doughty and views of the Mayor's Sunday church parade at Cleethorpes, had been two local topicals at this house, where "£1,000 Reward." Asta Nielsen in "Up to Her Tricks" and "Thor, Lord of the Jungle," have also been projected.

Pictures of the funeral of Sir George Doughty were rebooked for an extra three days at the Gaiety, "The Dissolution of the Government" was suitably boomed during the by-election, and other subjects have included "Cæsar," "The Devil's Daughter" and "Maria Marten." Mr. Blackman, who has come from Hull to take charge of the Wintringham Road house, under its new managements, is evidently out for big things.

Particularly interesting was the film "On Secret Service," which was shown at the Strand and Lyric. Other outstanding features in the programme during the past fortnight have been "Was She Justified?" "The Jew," "Detective Finn," "King of Seven Dials" and "She Stoops to Conquer."

The Picture Playhouse has been showing "Officer John Donovan," "The Chest of Fortune," "The Black Spot," "The Dowry" and "The Murdock Trial"; the Tivoli, "Orders Under Seal," "A Daughter of Satan," "A Woman of the People" and "Beauty and the Barge"; the Paragon, "Arizona," "The Bank Note Forgers," "Hawkshaw" and "A Woman's Intrigue"; and the Royal (Cleeves), "The Blue Rose," "The Street Singers," "Officer John Donovan" and "Heartease."

NEWS FROM HERTS.

In my last series of notes I referred to the fact that the London Road Picture House at St. Albans had had a spring cleaning and renovation. How thoroughly this work was done I was able to see for myself on Friday last, when I found Mr. Dawson in charge of this popular St. Albans cinema hall. Mr. Dawson, who has recently become a resident of the city, has made the building, inside and out, exceedingly attractive. This hall originally the St. Albans Polytechnic, has had a career of uninterrupted prosperity since its conversion into a picture house. Passing through a very spacious and charmingly decorated and furnished entrance, one enters the hall in which practically everything has been renewed. Comfortable tip-up seats have been put in every part of the house. Mr. Dawson has also installed a very handsome pipe organ by Parkinson, of London. Since Mr. Dawson's arrival two new Zar machines have been installed, and everything done to the place to make it as near perfection as possible. Particularly good business was done last week with the famous historical film, "Sixty Years a Queen," a matinée being given every afternoon. This, of course, was an exclusive exhibit. Big houses have also been secured for the Sherlock Holmes stories, this week's film being "Stolen Papers." I might say finally that Mr. Dawson has booked "Sign of the Cross" for an early screening.

A word or two about Watford, where some interesting things have to be recorded. The second Herkomer film to be shown in the town was "The White Witch," which Messrs. Giffen and Moore's booked for the Coliseum. This is the picture in which the late Sir Hubert von Herkomer himself appears, and the opportunity of seeing the great artiste in one of his roles was taken advantage of by hundreds of admirers of Sir Hubert's work. Other films shown at this house with every success have been "The Fall of Troy," "The Foreman's Treachery," "The House of Discord," and the famous comedy "Why Girls Leave Home."

Watford people had their first opportunity last week of hearing Mr. Eric Williams in his speaking pictures, "Hubert and Arthur," from "King John," and the vividly impressive story of "The Surgeon's Child." I was in the Central Hall to hear Mr. Williams in both these pieces, and the tense attention given to them indicated to what a degree the reality of the "human voice" grips interest. By the week-end there were large audiences to hear Mr. Williams in his famous pictures, and it now remains for other Hertfordshire managers to introduce him to their patrons. Two and three part pictures have had some successful runs at the Central, including "Old St. Paul's," "Up to Her Tricks," "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves," "The Forgotten Melody," "The Doctor's Honour" and "Thor, Lord of the Jungle." With such fare the Central has succeeded in drawing many people from the sunshine of the outer streets.

With films and music of the best quality the Empire has had its share of pay-box receipts. Two very well patronised exclusives were "Facing the Footlights" and "Facing Eternity," while the current programmes have included "Joseph and His Brethren" and "In the Springtime of Life." The "Entrance of Old Brittany" also met with great appreciation.—An exceptionally good music turn is promised this week at the Kinetic in the person of "Musicus." Mr. Palmer is again directing affairs at the Kinetic with renewed success.

Week after week the picture halls of the county bring before their audiences the pick of the film world. Hemel Hempstead people have a welcome to give anything good and at the Princess's Theatre the pictures screened have satisfied every taste. "Amid Raging Beasts," "The Escape of Jim Dolan," "The Musgrave Ritual" and "Jerry's Mother-in-Law" have been the most popular selections. Mr. Martin Harvey in "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," "Shadows of the Night, "The Wreck" and "The Curse of Greed" have been seen in this hall with the best pay-box results.—By special arrangement with the R.S.P.C.A., the traffic in old horses was given here, this item arousing great interest in the town. Other films here have been "The Banshee," "The Gambler's Penalty" and "Fighters of the Plains." The management announce that pictures adding an hour to the programme will be the rule in future, this making a three-hour run of pictures.—Another actor of fame has been introduced to another Hertfordshire audience, Mr. Dunkley screening "Humanty," the John Lawson film, at the St. Albans Cinema. Mr. Dunkley's other successful selections have been "Jerry's Ma-in-Law," "Amid Raging Beasts" and "A War-time Mother's Sacrifice." Last week's films included strong attractions in "From Out the Flood" and "Captain Kidd.""

Any reference to the picture houses of Hertfordshire would be lacking if the Hitchin Playhouse were not mentioned as one of the most successfully directed halls in the county. Mr. Parry generally has some pleasant surprise for his appreciative patrons, and in addition to giving them some first-class pictures lately in "In the Hands of the London Crooks," "Moths," "In the Shadow of the Throne," and "The Great Leap," he made a pleasing innovation the other week by introducing Mdlle. Saremas's Circus of dogs and monkeys. Since then Mr. Parry has beaten all records with engagements of Harry Tate's company in "Motoring." With films, the Playhouse has had good runs of "The Big Horn Massacre," "The Sea Dog" and "The Master Criminal."

At the county town, audiences in the People's Theatre have seen "In the Shadow of the Throne" booked as an exclusive for this house, "The Curse of Greed," "'Midst Raging Beasts" and "A Muddy Romance."—The two houses controlled by the Hoddesdon Cinema Company have had a run of high-class films during the past week or two.—At the Cheshunt Cinema the films have included "The Wreck," "Fruits of Vengeance," "Jennie Lee," "In the Coils of the Python," and "The Criminals," in addition to a variety turn.—The same pictures were shown at the Cinema at Hoddesdon, at which hall there were also "Children of Destiny" and "Two Old Tars."—At Hoddesdon, Mr. Hatrick put upon the screen in the current programmes "The Criminals," "The Diver," "Escape of Jim Dolan" and "'Midst Raging Beasts."

THE VITAGRAPH PROGRAMME.

The last week's issue of the Vitagraph studio contains some notable features, both in drama and comedy, though in the latter it is particularly strong, as "The Mischief Maker," though described as a drama, contains many delicate touches of comedy, and Cutey's efforts as an artiste introduces a novel effect which will be immensely popular. Some fine examples of mounting and stage management are shown, and the photographic quality throughout is as perfect as anything that this company has yet given us.

"The Mischief Maker" is a comedy of American society which gives a very elaborate picture of country life in the circle of the select, "Four Hundred," and the perfect staging and acting render this a play of unusual distinction. Peter Drake is a friend of Dolly Hoffman's family and on her return home from boarding school the friendship which began in their childhood becomes more intimate. Dolly invites her friend, Anita, to stay with her, and Peter, attracted by a new face, cannot quite make up his mind which of the two girls he really prefers. His attentions are so equally divided between them that Anita is almost justified in reckoning up her matrimonial prospects, and when a slight accident in the hunting field convinces the irresolute Peter that Dolly is the only girl he ever truly loved, Anita suffers some disappointment, which is not assuaged by the distinction of being Dolly's chief bridesmaid. Staying with this happy couple after their marriage she decides to plan a little bit of revenge, and manages to persuade Peter, on absurdly inadequate evidence, that Dolly is carrying on a flirtation with his friend, Billy. After having accomplished this, she slips a note under Dolly's door, saying that she is obliged to leave next morning by the 7.10 train to town. Peter takes the matter very seriously, and he also writes to his wife, referring to his solicitors, and also stating that he is going to leave her for ever by the 7.10 train. When Dolly receives the two notes she is clever enough to realise that Peter is at her mercy, and ringing up two friends she starts off in a motor car, and arrives in town in time to meet Peter leaving the station in the company of Anita. He realises that appearances are against him, and on his return home he accepts the inevitable, and appeals with a proper humility for his wife's forgiveness, which is not very difficult to obtain.

SCENE FROM THE "MISCHIEF MAKER."

The story is very slight, but quite sufficient to afford an opportunity for some really excellent acting and some interesting and picturesque scenes. There are several very good hunting pictures and scenes at the country club; a ballroom and the wedding celebrations are splendid examples of rich and elaborate mounting. Miss Edith Storey and Mr. Earle Williams both show a sense of style and distinction as the young couple, and Miss Rita Bori is effective as the mischief-making Anita.

No greater contrast to this light comedy could be found than the strong drama, "Tainted Money," by M. Pigott. This deals with the unscrupulous methods of a wealthy financier, who enriches himself by his manipulation of the wheat market, utterly regardless of the misery entailed on the very poor by the consequent rise in the price of bread. John Bennett's daughter Constance learns by accident of the widespread misery which helps to pay for the luxury by which she is surrounded, and with the aid of a settlement worker, David Spencer, she does what she can to mitigate the suffering and to enlist her father's sympathy on behalf of his victims. This is only accomplished after his rescue from an angry mob by David Spencer, but at last he enters heart and soul into a scheme for the betterment of the poor, turning their rage into gratitude and affection.

The play is full of strong, dramatic situations, and scenes showing the sufferings of the people from hunger and disease contain both pathos and power, in strong contrast to the extravagant luxury of the wealthy financier's establishment.

Mr. Charles Bennett gives a strong and consistent performance, and Miss Myrtle Gonzaley and Mr. George Holt obtain the full sympathy of the spectator of their admirable sincerity, as Constance and David Spencer respectively.

Scene from "Art for a Heart."

"Art for a Heart" is not only an ingenious and diverting farce, but serves a useful purpose as an object lesson in the highest form of art, for Mr. Wallie Van demonstrates how to paint a picture which in direct simplicity and utter incomprehensibility is at least equal to many of the most advanced creations of the Futurist school. Cutey is in love with a fair artist, but she will only marry an artist, and Cutey's utmost attempt has hitherto been limited to the back-garden fence. However, he fits out an expensive studio, and then goes to an exhibition to find out how to paint pictures. The most advanced school appears to him to be the easiest, and locking himself in his studio he evolves his masterpiece, using the entire contents of his larder in order to produce his effects. The result is extraordinary, to say the least ,and the committee of the exhibition to which it is sent award it the first prize, rather than attempt to criticise its merits or pronounce on its meaning. Cutey has a glib explanation already for Lilian, and she is quite satisfied that her future husband is a great artist. This merry little piece provides Mr. Wallie Van with a part in which he is seen at his best, and the production of his masterpiece will be greeted with well deserved enthusiasm. It is an admirable skit, and should certainly be seen.

Another excellent comedy is "Mrs. Maloney's Fortune," in which a worthy widow who makes her living at the washtub suddenly comes into the possession of a large fortune. Her attempts to adapt herself to a life of fashion and indulgence are not productive of perfect content, and the discovery that the rightful heir to the fortune is still living sends Mrs. Maloney back to a faithful old admirer, and a life of contented happiness. Miss Price plays the part with much humour, and is very ably supported, amongst others, by Mr. William Shea.

"Ginger's Reign" is a strong little drama, laid in a rough mining camp out in the Far West, and its scenes are full of picturesque incident and strong emotion, the quality of the photography and the magnificent open-air scenes being specially fine.

"The Way to Heaven" is a pretty story of sentimental interest, in which a little slum child loses her mother in a quarrel which takes place between the woman and her brutal husband. The child hears that her mother is in Heaven, and she sets forth with her doll, inquiring the way from various strangers. Chance leads her into a den of thieves, and in protecting the child from rough handling, the leader of the gang, nicknamed "The Fox," is seriously wounded. He manages to convey the child to a convent and by his last act places her where she will receive sympathy and loving care.

The story is one which will appeal to all lovers of children, the principal part being played by little Buddy Harris, who seems equally effective as a representative of either sex.

MOVEMENTS AT MORECAMBE.

Mr. A. H. Read's star attraction at the Winter Gardens last week was "The Water War," which was shown to excellent houses.—At the Alhambra the new management folowed up their success by screening "Napoleon."—"For Her Country" was top-lined by Mr. Ernest Price at the Royalty Theatre. In the second half of the week "Held to Ransom" proved a big draw.

NORTHERN NOTES.

Another attempt to obtain licences for Sunday opening has been made by the proprietors of picture theatres and halls under the jurisdiction of the Gateshead County magistrates, and again the effort has failed. The application was made at the Gateshead police court by Mr. Edward Clark, solicitor, who appeared on behalf of the proprietors of the Empire, Blaydon; King's Hall, Usworth; Globe, Washington Station; Alexandra, New Washington; Empire, Chopwell; Pavilion, High Spen; Pavilion, Blaydon, Globe, Crawcrook; Palace, Crawcrook; and the Gem, Winlaton.

Mr. Clark said he appeared before the licensing bench at the request of the cinematograph exhibitors, to request the magistrates to reconsider their decision come to in 1911, when they declined to entertain applications for Sunday licences. He was asking for a small licence only—namely, from 8 p.m. to 10.30 p.m. It was noteworthy that up to a little over a year ago Sunday openings were strictly barred right throughout the county of Northumberland, but in consequence of an application having been made, similar to the one he was making on behalf of the Gateshead County halls, a restricted licence was granted to a number of the Northumberland halls. The times were so arranged that the opening of the halls would not interfere with the religious services in the respective districts. With regard to the nature of the exhibitions which it was proposed to give on Sundays, Mr. Clark pointed out that the magistrates had granted licences for Good Friday with certain conditions and regulations attached, and he suggested that similar conditions and regulations be attached to Sunday licences, to ensure that the pictures shown were suitable to the day. He was prepared to give an undertaking on behalf of the exhibitors whom he represented that they would exhibit pictures that would be instructive, such as historical and natural history films, and that nothing of a comic nature, or anything that could give offence to anybody would be shown. Attendance at picture halls, where there was no licence for the sale of drink, was certainly the best way that had yet been put forward of keeping away from the public-houses those men who did not go to church. If people were to be kept sober and temperate and respectable, they must be provided with something to do, in order that they might not be tempted to waste their time in the public-houses. He ventured to say that the opening of picture halls on Sundays would be one of the greatest moves on behalf of temperance that had been seen in this country.

In answer to a question by the Chairman of the Bench (Sir Alfred Palmer), Mr. Clark said he was not aware of the general practice in North Northumberland, but in South Northumberland he believed all the halls had Sunday licences, excepting a theatre at Newburn. He suggested that the magistrates should give Sunday licences a trial until the next licensing sessions, and if they were not satisfactory, the magistrates need not then renew the licences.

After the Bench had consulted in private, the Chairman intimated that they had decided to refuse the application.

Of the many exclusive pictures that have been run none has achieved a greater success than did "The Curse of War," which was shown by Mr. Barry Rayne at the Grainger Picture House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, throughout last week's continuous performances.

The opening features of the Newcastle Picture House, the new theatre erected at the top of Grey Street by the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, have been the cinematograph versions of W. W. Jacobs stories. Last week's number was "The Third String," and whilst it was run from Monday to Saturday, the programme was revised in respect to the other items in the middle of the week. "Kronstadt" had an excellent reception. Mr. J. A. Lander, the manager of the Newcastle Picture House, by the way, can lay claim to being the oldest established cinematograph exhibitor in Newcastle. Films were shown in the city shortly before he entered the business, but he was the first to open a permanent place of entertainment when he took over the Tivoli in City Road, which, I believe, was a mission hall prior to that time. He is the lessee of the Raby Hall, Byker, where "Sixty Years a Queen" has just had a most successful run.

Messrs. Baker Brothers gave their patrons a highly sensational programme, the films shown including "The Black Spot," "Detective Daring and the Thames Coiners" and "The First Law of Nature." Other pictures at the Nun Street Gaiety Theatre were "The Tell Tale Photograph," "The Burglar's Sacrifice" and "Love and Dynamite."

There was a great show at the Scala, Heaton, where "Judith of Bethulia" was shown by Mr. W. M. Patterson to crowded audiences. Mr. Patterson continues his series of "Our Navy" pictures, two sections being shown each week until the series is exhausted.

EAST ANGLIAN NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

That Mr. J. W. Bruce's experiment with educational matinées at the Cinema Palace, Norwich, is an unqualified success is beyond doubt, and in connection with the matinées an interesting competition has been inaugurated, whereby the children will contribute an essay on one of the films exhibited.—At the Prince of Wales Palace, Mr. G. H. Howes is showing with success "The Stolen Inheritance" and "The Dare-Devil Rescue."—Among other attractive films at the Norwich shows last week were "The Curse" and "The Way of the World" at the Theatre de Luxe; "The Murdoch Trial" and "The Chest of Fortune" at the Picture Playhouse; "The White Lie" and "Reygate Squires" at the Electric; "The War Correspondent" and "Silas Marner" at the Empire; and "Silas Marner" and "The Discovery of America" at the Victorian Hall.

Good business is being done at the Lowestoft cinemas. Mr. C. J. Carpenter, at the Cosy Corner, is doing well with "The Convict's Son" and "The Shadows of a Great City," while Mr. Arthur Dagnall, at the Palace, is billing "The Golden Heart" and "On Sunset Ranch."

Trade is well maintained at Great Yarmouth. At the Coliseum a popular film was "A Message from Mars," while "Coney Gets the Glad Eye" proved a rousing farce.—At the Gorleston Filmland, brisk business is the rule, with "The Harper Mystery" and "Zoe."

Ipswich houses are doing well in spite of the by-election. The management of the Picture House are including local pictures, which are proving very attractive. This week a film of the Suffolk Yeomanry camp at Ipswich was responsible for big business. "He Would a-Hunting Go," "The Invisible Hand," and "Stanton's Last Fling" were recent attractions.

THE SELIG SERIAL FILM.

"The Adventures of Kathlyn." Part I.: "The Unwelcome Throne."

The producer of picture plays has not only created an entirely new form of art; he has also invented several original forms in which to present that art to the public. First of all he gave us tabloid drama, offering us tragedies and comedies of every character more closely compressed than any we had seen before. This did not exhaust his versatile imagination, however, and, having experimented freely with plays of all shapes and lengths, he ends by giving us serial drama, thus completing his chain of novelties, which includes both the longest and the shortest plays on record.

The picture play in serial form has already proved immensely successful in more than one case, thereby helping to substantiate the justness of the parallel which has often been drawn between the cinematograph drama and the novel. There is no doubt that the film play resembles the written story in more ways than one, and this fact serves to show that the serial picture is based upon a sound artistic principle, not being merely the freakish and transient novelty some people were at first inclined to consider it. For the serial story has long ago proved widely and permanently popular, and there is every reason to suppose that its younger sister, the serial film, will occupy an equally prominent and lasting place in public favour. Whether the ordinary stage is likely to be able to follow suit with the same results as it has tried to do within the last few weeks is another more doubtful matter, which it is scarcely necessary to discuss here.

The latest serial picture to appear on the market is the Selig Company's immense production, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," which will be released in thirteen parts on alternate Mondays, commencing on Monday, July 27th, the first part being about 2,950 ft. in length, and each subsequent part 2,000 ft. One is inclined to fancy that it would have been sufficient to allow a single week only, instead of a fortnight, to elapse between the release of each part, but it is unlikely that this somewhat unusually prolonged interval will prevent the public from following the story from beginning to end with the most lively and unwavering interest, if we may judge the whole by the first part, which is the only one we have had the pleasure of inspecting at the moment.

Although it is improbable that this first part indicates the full scope of the complete work, it is sufficiently fine to satisfy one that the latter will be of exceptional excellence and magnitude. We are all familiar with the extraordinary capabilites and resources, in many respects unequalled, of the Selig Company, and it is evident that their full powers in every direction have been brought to bear upon the preparation of this giant film, which seems likely to constitute a record for them in its artistic merit as well as in its dimensions.

As a story, so far as one can gather, "The Adventures of Kathlyn" is to be a connected record of various amazing episodes in the strange career of an adventurous American girl, a feature in which it is identical, curiously enough, with most of the other serial pictures already produced. Each part, we are told, is a distinct story complete in itself, but no doubt the author, with the ingenuity common to all serial writers, will hint just enough at sensations to come to whet the appetite of his audiences for the following instalments.

The heroine of these astounding "Adventures" is, of course, Miss Kathlyn Williams, the Seilg Company's well-known and accomplished leading lady, who has so often delighted audiences by her daring and her talent. No important Selig film would be really complete without its wild animal performers, and in this respect the present picture is more than satisfactory. Lions, leopards, tigers, elephants, camels—almost every species of beast, both tame and savage, is included in the presentation of Kathlyn's exploits, which, as far as the first instalment of them is concerned, take place largely against a marvellously realistic Indian background. No praise could be too high for the remarkable ingenuity and skill with which these numerous scenes in the Orient are accomplished. Palaces, temples, even whole towns, seem to have been built for the purposes of the production. In fact, it is improbable that the atmosphere of India could have been much more convincingly rendered if the film had actually been taken in the country.

The plot of the story is simple and very largely original, especially where its surprising incidents and its setting are concerned. One cannot help thinking that it might have been made somewhat more probable with advantage, but the onrush of its thrilling episodes leaves one little time in which to trouble about possibility, and there can be no question that it is all immensely effective. "The Unwelcome Throne," as the first part of the film is entitled, is entirely the sort of thing to delight the public, and if the further adventures of Kathlyn are in any way equal to her first exploit (as no doubt they will be) the Selig Company should succeed in establishing several records for themselves with this huge picture.

THE SOUTHAMPTON SHOWS.

The members of the Southampton Grocers' Association appear to have some curious ideas regarding the cinema. At the last meeting of the Association it was urged that a protest should be made against the granting of Sunday licences on the ground that the opening of the picture halls encouraged Sunday trading. The Southampton grocers may be interested to learn that since the introduction of the Sunday picture concert there has been a big decrease in Sunday drunkenness. Surely this is an important matter to take into consideration?

Quite a number of big films are still running on the local circuit of which Councillor P. V. Bowyer is the managing director. At the Shirley Electric Mr. Massey featured on Monday "A Tragedy of the Clouds" and to-day (Thursday), the top-liner is "Raised from the Ranks."—At the Cureton this week "The Curse of War" proved a great draw, and Mr. Appley is showing "The Midnight Wedding."—The latter film proved a splendid attraction at the Scala during the week-end, and was well backed up by a good programme of other films. Mr. Kuntze screened "Kissing Cup" on Monday, and "Old St. Paul's" will be shown at the Scala to-day. "Orders Under Seal" has been booked for next week.—The Northam Picturedrome, which, by the way, will complete the circuit, is rapidly approaching a finished state, and will probably be ready for opening early next month.

The class of programme submitted by Messrs. Hood and Bacon, at the Portswood Palladium, still maintains a very high standard of excellence. "David Copperfield" had a most successful run. "The Two Sergeants" had an equally good reception during the week-end, while "A Tudor Princess" was the attraction for Sunday, and on Monday "The Human Vampire' and "Beauty and the Barge" were submitted. "Life" will be screened later in the week, together with "Too Many Brides."

Following up "The Last Days of Pompeii," Mr. Lewis entertained delighted crowds at the Shirley Cinema during the week-end with "The Tower of Terror." Some very fine exclusives have been booked by Mr. Lewis, who is keeping up the reputation of his hall this week with "The Accusing Skeleton" and "The Dread Secret."

Edison's Kinetophone has been a very popular innovation at the Alexandra. During the week-end Mr. Percy M. Miller screened "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" and "The Antique Brooch."—Mr. Turner has had a very good top-liner at the Standard Electric, East Street, in "Should She Forgive?" It was backed up by a programme of other taking films in "The Revelation," "Tiny Tim, the Letter Writer," "Bess, the Outcast" and "Kelly Buys an Hotel."

At the Southampton Picture Theatre, East Street, "Love's Sunset" and "The Love Story of Her Youth" made a great appeal. On Sunday Mr. Lambert did exceedingly good business with "The Runaway Princess" and "Race with Death." "An Invisible Government" and "The Elusive Diamond" were featured early this week. "The Discovery of America" and "The Right and Wrong of it" taking their place later.

"Traitors to their King" will shortly be shown at the Ashelev Cinema, where Mr. Buck has been screening "The Mystery of the Old Mill." This week's leading pictures are "Beauty and the Barge," "The Convict's Son," "A Fatal Likeness" and "The Bo'sun's Mate."

One of the most humorous films screened at the Kingsland for some time was "Professor Bean's Removal," "The Eye of a God," "The Dark Cloud" and "The Judge's Vindication" had a successful run during the first part of the present week.—"Her Majesty the Little Queen" made a very good show at the Empire, and this week Mr. Bromley has featured "The Convent Gate."—Another 7,000 ft. programme of first runs was submitted by Mr. Will Murray at the Palace on Sunday. They included "Detective Daring and the Thames Coiners" and "The Masked Dancer." A strong Lubin production was also presented in "The Sleeping Sentinel."

PRESTON'S PICTURES.

The chief picture event in Preston during the past week goes to the credit of the management of the Marathon Palace. They could scarcely have made more profitable use of an excellent opportunity to score a success with the production of the "British Army" film. The first part was on the screen at the Marathon during Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and the second part on the remaning days of the week. At the initial performances of the first day of each part 600 troops of all ranks from Preston garrison and about 500 territorials attended. Headed by their bands, they marched to the hall, and the result was to draw huge crowds. The great effort is not going to be allowed to run to waste, for a splendid backing programme is being given during the current week.

A characteristic of Lancaster folks is their strict devotion to settled rules of life. Just now most of them will be mainly concerned in hoarding their money for the purchase of the annual new suit or costume at Whitsun. All other things are subservient to that one purpose. Bearing that fact in mind, as well as the general tendency to save money for a "bust-up" at the first good holiday of the year, I can only marvel at the excellent attendances seen at the picture theatres. No doubt money is fairly plentiful just now with mill folks, but it is in the great appeal of the picture shows to popular fancy that a reason must be found for the generous patronage.

The Temperance Hall has had a liberal share of good business. Its subjects last week were fully entertaining. They comprised three excellent dramas, —viz., "The Antique Brooch," "Against Desperate Odds" and "A Tragedy of Ambition," the comics being "Love Thy Neighbour" and "Grandpa's Will."

The special feature at the New Prince's Theatre was maintained in the production of a fine picture of Preston May-day carnival. An adventure story was furnished in "For the Freedom of Cuba," and a representation of troublesome times in Ireland was contained in "Eileen of Erin." There were two or three successful humorous pieces, the well-known figure of "Bunny" being to the fore.

The popularity of the Imperial wanes not, a matter not likely to create surprise among those who know its style of entertainment. Its latest pictures were "The Master Crook," "No Finer Death," and the good comics, "A Leak in the Pipe" and "Pimple in the Hand of a London Crook." Headlines at other halls were:—Alexandra, "A Good Little Devil"; Picturedrome, "The Villain Still Pursued Her"; Queen's Hall, "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" and "Capt. Kidd"; Embee Hall, "The Golden Pathway," "The Fortune Hunters," and The Joy Riders."

Round the Birmingham District.

During the past week the weather has been prejudicial to good business, but making allowance for this I find that conditions have been quite up to the mark.

Yet another of the W. W. Jacobs series, "Lawyer Quince" was presented to patrons of the New Street Picture House last week, and I have seldom seen a film better received. Altogether, Mr. Yeulett presented a programme of exceptional interest, including "Love's Old Dream," "The Staircase of Death" and "On the Lazy Line." During this week Mr. Yeulett is screening "The Bosun's Mate" for the whole week, and, for the first part, "'Neath the Lion's Paw." "She Stoops to Conquer" is billed for the 25th inst.

Mr. Bradbury, of the Masonic Hall, New Street, realised very good business when screening "The Golden Beetle" during the first part of last week.—The Scala Theatre, Smallbrook Street, made a remarkable hit with "Spartacus" last week, the picture proving a great draw.

Mr. Elbourne, of the Balsall Heath Picture House, prepared a strong and attractive programme, wherein, for the first part, were featured "In the Grip of a Villain" and "The Gambler's Oath," followed up in the latter half by "The Footballer's Honour" and "The Master Crook." I learn that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is the star picture this week. Business here is good, and Mr. Elbourne is to be congratulated upon a remarkably cool theatre.

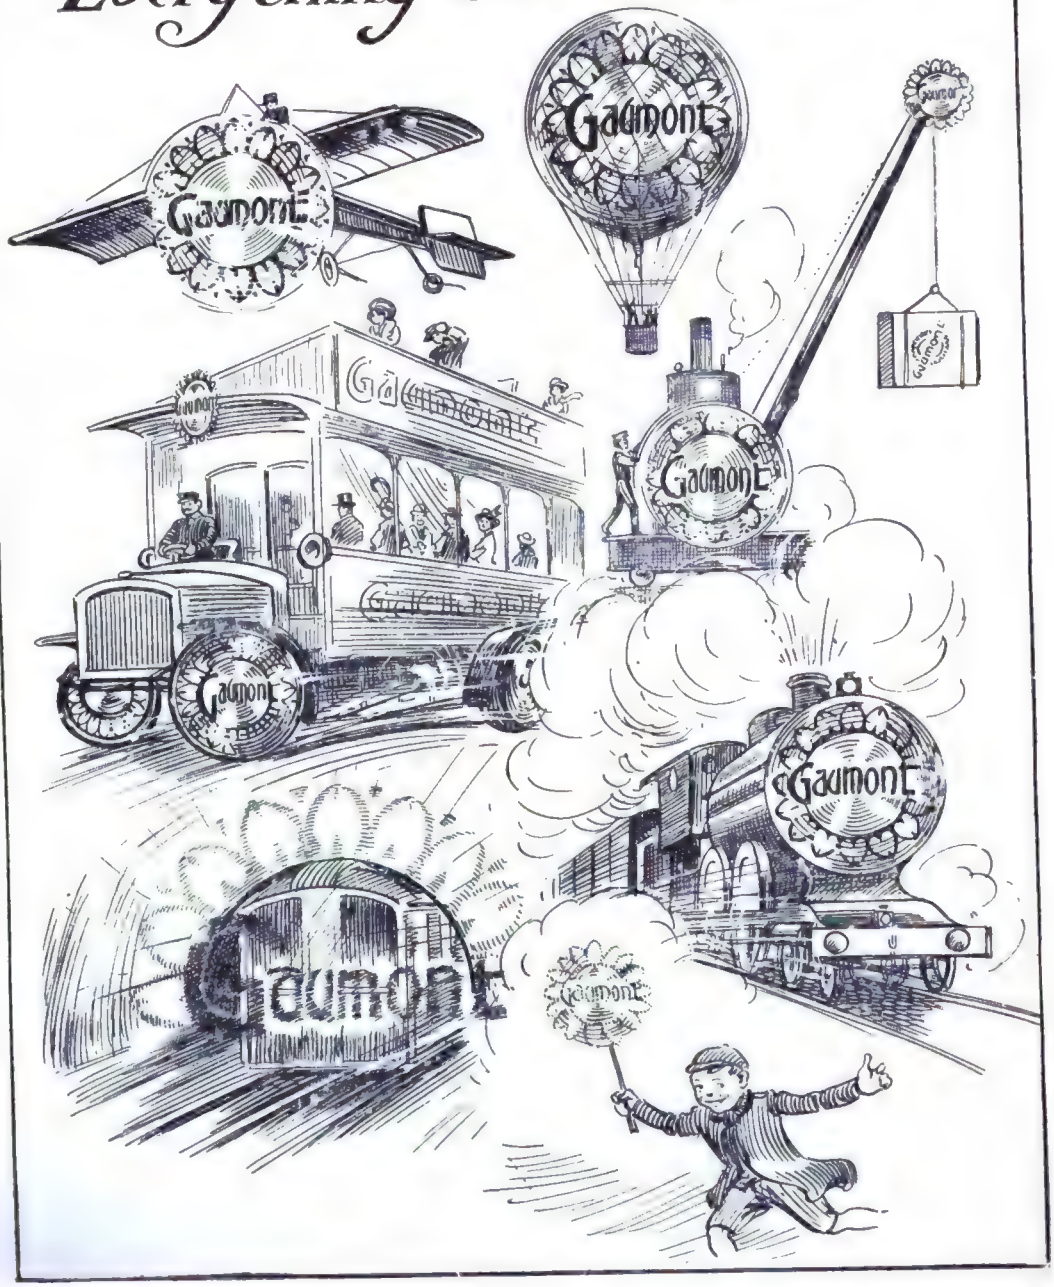
Mr. Mitchell, of the Ideal Film Company, is having great success with the Betty Nansen series, and I understand that "A Neglected Wife" was screened at the Elite, Bordesley Green, during the first part of last week, to very satisfactory business. The management followed this success up with "The Princess's Dilemma" for the latter half.

The Newtown Row Picture House presented a very strong bill last week, and a novel turn was that of a cowboy direct from out West, who, in illustration of his vivid description of life on a cowboy ranch, screened a very interesting film showing the cowboy at work and play.—Mr. Harris, of the Imperial, Moseley Road, screened "The Master Criminal" last week to appreciative houses, and followed up for the latter part with "The Maid and the Mice." This week "Sapho" is booked for a return visit.

Mr. Webster, of Cross's Pictures, Limited, John Bright Street, is giving a Trade show of "The Children of Captain Grant" and "The Lady of Monsoreau," at the Scala, Smallbrook Street, to-morrow (Friday), at 2.30 p.m., when exhibitors are cordially invited.

Visiting Mr. Hopton, of the House of Pathé, in Broad Street, I learned that business is exceedingly brisk now, and daily increasing. Mr. Hopton informs me that all his exclusives are doing remarkably well.—"The Curse of War" carries no less than twenty-five bookings, and is not available until December in this district. Recently the Bristol Street Picture House ran an all-Pathé programme, including the above film, to excellent business, and "The Rose of Thebes" is rebooked there. "The Mystery of the Old Mill" is also going great, and Mr. Boscoe has booked it for his circuit, while it is well booked up in Birmingham and district. Show days at Pathé are Thursday, Friday, and Saturday mornings. I understand that the Pathé machines have been selling very well lately, and some seven, all told, have been installed this month.

THE CINEMATOGRAPH ACT.



The different treatment meted out to cinematograph proprietors in the county of Northumberland in regard to Sunday entertainments, to which I have on previous occasions made reference, writes our Newcastle-upon-Tyne correspondent, has at length attracted the notice of those in authority, and an attempt has been made to remove the anomalies that exist. The attempt, however, has had no further result than that of drawing attention to the present state of things.

The matter was raised at the quarterly meeting of the Northumberland County Council, held under the chairmanship of Sir Francis D. Blake, Bart., at the Moot Hall, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Thursday last. In accordance with notice previously given by him, Alderman R. Irwin Dees moved that the Council revoke the order made under the Cinematograph Act on February 3, 1910, by which the powers conferred upon the Council under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, were delegated to the Justices sitting in petty sessions throughout the county.

Upon a vote being taken a very small proportion of the Council voted for the motion, which was therefore declared lost, so that the administration of the provisions of the Act remains in the hands of the Petty Sessional magistrates.

THE CARDIFF HALLS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

It is with regret that I record the resignation of Mr. Herbert J. Taylor, manager of the Empire. For over five years Mr. Taylor has directed the affairs of Moss's Cardiff Hall with conspicuous success, and is resigning in order to take up a position in commercial life, in which sphere he was before he became connected with Moss Empires, Limited. On his last night of office, Mr. Taylor and his wife were the recipients of a purse of gold and a gold watch wristlet respectively, subscribed for by the staff and friends. The presentation took place upon the stage of the theatre after the second performance, and many flattering speeches were made concerning the excellent manner in which Mr. Taylor had maintained the best traditions of the house, and the esteem in which he was held by the staff. If good wishes count for anything Mr. Taylor's future happiness is assured. He is succeeded by Mr. C. T. Hutchison, who should prove a worthy successor.

"Spartacus" was the top-liner at the Castle Cinema, and Mr. Reynolds-Benjamin was having record houses. A novel feature of this house is the exceptional lightness of the interior, this being effected by means of a "Day and Night" screen, which allows of more than the usual amount of light in the auditorium.

Calling at Olympia, I found Mr. Randolph Richards coping with capacity business. An excellent programme was being unspooled, the feature of which was "She Stoops to Conquer." Turns are included in the fare here, and the show is given once nightly, with three matinées. In spite of the long throw (120 ft.) a splendid picture is obtained with an Ernemann projector.

The Gaiety Grand, City Road, reports good business, and Manager Churchill is looking after the best interests of his patrons. Last week the "Brass Bottle" delighted his audiences, whilst the capital selections rendered by the orchestra added not a little to the enjoyment of the programme. The lady attendants at this cinema are dressed in early Victorian style, whilst the male members of the staff wear livery and have powdered hair.

An innovation at the Canton Cinma is the introduction of variety turns, at present one being included in the programme. Mr. Bert Spathaky tells me that this popular West-end resort is retaining its full share of patronage, in spite of outdoor attractions.—The smart advertising dodges of Mr. Barron J. Solomon, manager of the Canton Coliseum, are resulting in crowded houses nightly. A splendid programme is screened, "turns" being included in the fare. The performance is continuous, and popular prices prevail

Not a little of the popularity of the Imperial, Queen Street, is due to the excellence of the orchestra, which is highly praised by patrons of this hall. Mr. Edwards is at the helm here, and there is little doubt that business will be good right through the summer months.

Important developments have taken place at the Cardiff Branch of the Kine Trading Company, who are now handling no less than thirty exclusives. In the course of a short chat with Mr. Langham Brown, who manages the branch, I learned that more important changes are to be made in the near future of which more anon.

The South Wales Feature and Exclusive Agency have now removed to the Film Center, Quay Street. Under the direction of Mr. George Nightingale, there seems a prosperous future before this firm. They hold the agency for the Kamm and Simplex machines for South Wales, as well as those of the Mutual Film Company and Apex Films, Limited.

Messrs. Pathé Frères' windows are always a source of interest. Mr. Thorpe has made himself very popular with South Wales showmen.

SWANSEA & DISTRICT.

The most fastidious would not be displeased with the programme introduced at the recently opened Elysium, Swansea, where Mr. George Damer Vaughan, A.M.I.E.E., presides. Last week's attractions maintained the high standard looked for at this house, and included "Thor" and "The Great Football Mystery."

The Carlton Cinema, Swansea, still retains its popularity, and Mr. Hal Cummings, the manager, is providing his patrons with some exceedingly strong programmes. The outstanding features for the first art of the week were "The Message to Headquarters" and "The Goddess of the Dance." The orchestral selections here are all that can be desired. Special music to the latter film was composed by Mr. Fred Adington, the director of the orchestra.

Business is still good at the Picture House, "Thor," "The Heart of the Law," "Janet of the Dunes," and "The Life Saver" being included in very acceptable programmes during the week.

One is always sure of a thoroughly interesting programme at the Castle Cinema, and last week was no exception. Some of the chief items were "The Curse of War," "TheDowry," "A Fateful Likeness," "Lovt and Dynamite" and "The Tell-tale Photograph."—Again reverting to picture programmes, excellent business was experienced at the Theatre Royal, where throughout the week "Old St. Pauls" was screened.—The patronage extended at the Oxford Electric was amply justified by the excellence of the fare provided. "A Tragedy in the Alps" proved a film of merit and was well received. The music discoursed here is of a specially pleasing character.—Good business was done at the Uplands Cinema during the first part of the week, when "Whimsical Threads of Destiny," "A Muddy Romance," "The Child of a Smuggler" and "A Pair of Schemers" made up an exceptionally interesting programme.

The Picturedrome, the spacious and charming picture house in Morriston, continues to find much favour with the public. Mr. O. T. Haines, the manager, takes much care in the selection of his pictures, and they are always new and interesting. Leading attractions during the week were "Thor," "The Fight for the Black Diamond," "Janet of the Dunes" and "A Ride for a Bride."

At the Palace and the Shaftesbury, Swansea, both connected with the Coutt's Circuit, business is "going strong." Last week's pictures were splendid, and included "The Tattooed Will," "The Stolen Tapestries" and "At the Hour of Need."

Things are going well at the Alpha Cinema, Morriston, so well looked after by Mr. Frank Davners. Since his connection with the Alpha, Mr. Davners has rendered yeoman service to various charitable causes. On Wednesday evening, when two performances were given, the hall was packed to overflowing. The proceeds, it may be stated, were set apart for the aid of a well-known local [illegible]

HELP IN TROUBLE.

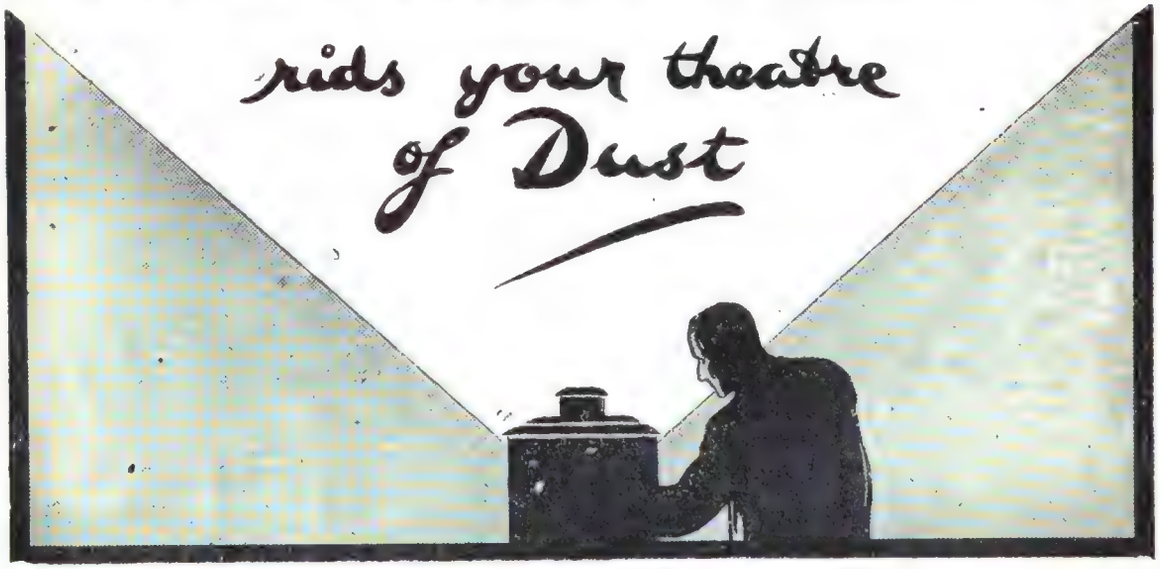
FOR PROPRIETORS, MANAGERS, AND OPERATORS.

MANAGER writes as follows:—"One of the projectors has, during the past six months or so, been developing an unsteady and generally imperfect picture. There seems to be a number of defects. The picture occasionally varies in focus without touching the lens, and if one attempts to refocus it is possible only to sharpen up either the extreme edges or the centre, never the whole field. The picture jumps very badly, and latterly without, I believe, the operator having interfered in any way with the mechanism, a ghost has developed. The machine is a Maltese Cross one."

From what you write, MANAGER, we should certainly think that your projector is in need of a complete overhaul, as, unless the adjustments have, unknown to you, been interfered with, there are evidences of considerable wear having taken place. Firstly, the lack of definition trouble is undoubtedly due to a faulty gate. In all probability the gate runners themselves are very much worn, so causing the film to come to rest in the gate in a condition other than in a plane, which condition is essential if a perfect focus of all parts of the picture is to be obtained. The gate aperture plate and film guides should be closely examined for wear, and those parts showing signs of uneven surface should be renewed. It may be advisable to completely renew the aperture plate, the film runners or bearing skates in the gate, and also the gate springs. The adjustment of the gate springs should be such that whilst there is no great drag imposed upon the film, the latter is nevertheless held securely, and without any signs of buckling across the aperture.

The unsteadiness of projection is most likely due to wear or incorrect adjustment of the Maltese Cross mechanism, coupled with an unnecessarily weak gate. Unless the Maltese Cross has been badly knocked about it would probably not be necessary to renew the parts, but to only correctly readjust. All modern projectors worthy of the name are fitted with some adjusting device for regulating the distance apart of the cross and actuating disc. The method of adjustment varies in different makes of machines. In some the cross shaft is carried in a member completely detachable from the projector, means being provided for regulating the distance of this member from the main casting to which it is clamped. In other machines the Maltese Cross spindle is carried in a bearing or bearings of the main casting. The actual bore of the bearing is, however, eccentric in relation to the bore of the casting in which the bearing is carried. In such cases adjustment is made by turning the bearing which, by its eccentric design, moves the Maltese Cross nearer or further from the disc. However, whatever form of regulation be provided the adjustment is generally made by screws provided with lock-nuts, so as to obtain michrometer exactitude of adjustment, and secure means of locking. The adjustment of the Maltese Cross mechanism is correct when, whilst the disc is free to revolve against each of the concave faces of the cross, it is quite impossible, when the curves of the disc and cross are in engagement, to effect any movement of the cross. The adjustment must be carefully carried out, or either binding may occur or an unnecessarily slack adjustment be effected. Should it be found upon examination of the Maltese Cross that the actuating pin on the disc be loose, or the disc or cross show any other signs of damage, it will be advisable, even if not absolutely necessary, to replace with new parts.

Regarding the shutter. If, indeed, this has not been touched, and the shutter has not merely slipped round the spindle, one can only conclude that considerable wear has taken place in the chain of driving gears, introducing thereby, through the back-lash, a lagging of the shutter spindle behind that of the Maltese Cross. Or, perhaps a gear wheel has become loose or displaced upon its shaft, so giving rise to the same effect. The shutter drive, right from the main shaft to the shutter spindle, should be carefully examined, and any corrections made. The shutter should be re-timed so as to insure that light is effectively cut off from the screen before the Maltese Cross begins to move the film. The shutter blade should also be of sufficient size, so that the obscuration period is a trifle longer than that of the film movement. This will ensure no sign of "ghost" being apparent.



It may be found upon examination of the machine that considerably more than adjustment is required. If bearings are found to be badly worn, or parts of the mechanism at all damaged, it would be advisable to return the projector to the manufacturers for a complete overhaul. We have, however, indicated the general lines for remedying the troubles of which you complain, and it may be that, with the aid of a competent mechanic and the necessary spare parts, you can carry out what is required on the spot.

HOPEFUL intends to fit up the electrical installation for a small cinematograph hall he is converting. His supply voltage is 100 D.C., and he asks: (1) Is a motor generator necessary? (2) What distribution board would be required to run thirty lights? (3) What size main cables, and what size branch cables should I use for the general lighting? (4) What size cables and what class of resistance and method of wiring up the projector lamp should be adopted? (5) What make of projector do you recommend?

(1) For a supply voltage of 100, no motor generator is necessary, that particular pressure being a most suitable one for the cinematograph arc lamp. For lighting it is almost immaterial.

(2) Thirty lamps, if each be of 25 c.-p. (30 watt lamps), will consume 900 watts—9 amperes of current at 100 volts pressure. We would recommend you to use a four-way 5 amperes per way distribution board, dividing the lights up into four sections, and arranging them so that in the event of a fuse blowing no place to which the public have access is thrown into complete darkness.

(3) We should recommend you to work on a current density of 1,000 amperes per square inch of sectional area of conductor. On this basis, and allowing a factor of safety, you would require for the main service to the distribution board cables 7/18 S.W.G. For the distribution runs use wires of 3/18 S.W.G.

(4) Without knowing the actual conditions of your projection, it is impossible to say the exact current you will need. One must consider length of throw and the area of picture. If your hall be a moderate size one, say with a throw of 60 ft. or 70 ft., and with a picture of about 12 ft. or 14 ft. in width, we would recommend you to allow for a current up to 50-60 amperes. For the projector arc leads wires of 19/16 S.W.G. should be employed. The resistance had better be of the ordinary wire frame sliding contact type. When you order this state the line voltage and the minimum and maximum amperage to be used. Connect up as follows:—From the positive pole of the main switch run a wire to the ammeter (this instrument should read up to 70 amperes). Connect up the free terminal of the ammeter to the positive terminal (top carbon) of the arc lamp. A wire should run direct from the negative of the arc lamp to the negative pole of the main switch. Fuses must be placed in circuit, and these had better be fitted, one in each line running from and close to the main switch. A voltmeter is not essential on a constant pressure supply such as yours, so this instrument may be omitted. Wiring diagrams covering arrangements for feeding projector arc lamps will be found in a useful little work published by THE BIOSCOPE, at 1s., post free, "The Bioscope Electrician's Handbook."

(5) It would be invidious to mention the name of any specific projector. There are a number of excellent machines on the market that have stood the test of time and usage. A letter requesting particulars of their specialities addressed to some of our advertisers would bring you much information concerning the question of projectors.

"J.M.C." is running a petrol engine generating current for his theatre. He complains of irregular running at high speed. He says the engine is a two-cylinder one, with accumulator ignition. The battery is kept always fully charged, and the tremblers are regularly attended to.

The irregular running is no doubt due to misfiring. You say, "I.M.C.," it is only at high speed that this occurs. We assume that by this you mean the trouble appears when you have brought the engine up to its normal running speed. If the tremblers are correctly adjusted so that there is even firing at the lower speeds, it points almost to the trouble being due to the contact-maker, making irregular contact.

Many contact makers consist of a revolving arm, to which is attached a roller, which latter wipes in its revolving alternate metal and fibre segments, the former of which are connected to the coils, the latter being insulators. Frequently it happens that wear has taken place very unevenly, the fibre portions being below the metal. The roller, in revolving at high speed instead of running freely over the segments, revolves with a series of jumps. Thus, as might be expected, the roller sometimes fails to touch a contact, causing thereby a misfire. The contact-maker should be examined closely, and if there are signs of uneven wear on either or both the rotating and stationary portions, the worn parts should be replaced. Alternative to the contact-maker described, the revolving portion sometimes consists of the alternately placed segments of metal and fibre, the stationary portions being the wiper blades connected to the coils. The aforementioned remarks apply with equal force to this type of contactmaker, as any unevenness of the revolving drum causes chattering of the blades. If the contact-maker be in good condition, then we can only suggest that the coil condensers are not as perfect as they should be. If you suspect the coils you would be advised to return them to the makers.

OLDHAM NEWS & NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. W. J. Parkes, manager of the Pop-in Picture Hall, Hollinwood, owned by Mr. McVittie, of Manchester, applied on May 7th to enter into recognisances to prosecute an appeal against his conviction on a charge of having obstructed the entry of a police inspector who wished to see the operating room of the theatre. (See THE BIOSCOPE, May 7th, page 624).

The position was explained by Mr. Booth, the magistrates' clerk. The law was that recognisances must be entered into within three days of notice being given of the intention to appeal. That notice was received by the Chief Constable on Friday. He (Mr. Booth) got the notice on Monday. In reply to a question as to when recognisances could be entered into he had written that Wednesday or Thursday would do, not knowing of the Friday's notice to the Chief Constable. Now, according to law, the recognisance could not be taken.

Mr. McVittie protested that he had Mr. Booth's own letter fixing Wednesday or Thursday.

Mr. Booth: Notwithstanding the letter, I should have to advise the magistrates that it is too late to enter into recognisances.

The magistrates, on Mr. Booth's advice, refused to allow the applicants to enter into the recognisances.

The licence of the Central Picture Hall, Royton, has been transferred from Mr. William Openshaw to Messrs. Albert Taylor and Joseph Broughton.

Mr. Nield, at the King's, is worthy of compliment for the excellent programmes he has shown this last fortnight. "Orders Under Seal" and "A Tragedy of the Clouds" were two popular films.

The all-Vitagraph programme at the Star and Osborne proved a big success, and better all-round pictures no one could wish for. The programme included "Love's Sunset," "When Women go on the Warpath," "The Portrait," "Beauty Unadorned" and "Soldiers Three." "Daniel" was one of the first Biblical subjects I have ever seen, and met with unanimous approval.

Mr. Watson, at the Palladium, has evidently become accustomed to the tastes of Oldham people. At the present time he is screening some very fine programmes. "The Red Club" was billed as a winner; and it proved one, for the subject was well patronised. "The Great Turf Sensation," "The Cry of the Blood" and "The Curse of War" are also of the very best.

Large audiences at the Empire were amply rewarded with the fare provided by Mr. Gaston, including "The Opium Smoker," "Duty" and "On Secret Service," while in "Love and Dynamite" he had a very funny Keystone. Always on the look out for topicals, Mr. Gaston screened a film of the local cycle parade.

The popular "Hip." has its fair share of the pleasure-loving publis. "Trapped" and "Measure of the Man" were the star subjects.

Some big films have been seen at the Electraceum, including "The Big Horn Massacre" and "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale." "The Third String." "The Actress," "Wrecker of Lives," "The Filly" and "Fallen Angel" were all high-class subjects.—Mr. Dobie has never yet had reason to complain of business at the Colosseum. His leading films were "The Grip of Circumstance," "Their Two Kids," "The Tragedy of Ambition," and a rattling Keystone comedy, "Cohen Saves the Flag."

OUR POSTER GALLERY.

With their forthcoming feature production, "The Crucible of Fate," the Vitagraph Company, Limited, are issuing a fine six-sheet poster, which is quite one of the most attractive we have seen.

The poster has been specially designed, and, as will be seen from our illustration, depicts three very dramatic scenes from the film. We compliment both the Vitagraph Company and their printers on their attractive piece of publicity.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

It was a week of great things in Sunderland last week, the film bills being exceptionally heavy, but managers tell me that, on the whole, the ventures justified.

When I called in to see Mr. J. McColl at the High Street West Picture House, I found him energetically moving about to find people seats, a task which he pleaded was pleasant enough in some senses, but tended to become monotonous. It was Max Pemberton's "Kronstadt" that was largely responsible for this happy state of affairs, yet later in the week "Detective Finn" went almost equally well.

Quite the biggest thing that the the old Avenue has yet tackled in the film line drew the crowds in there last week. This was "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil." When I went to the Avenue I found the utmost difficulty in getting a seat, but Mr. F. Sayer graciously worked the necessary "oracle" and I sat through the whole performance, and thoroughly enjoyed it. The new waiting-rooms are a splendid acquisition, and have already tended to increase the patronage of the "second-houses," particularly on wet and cold nights. Other improvements have also been effected, and the whole place is being redecorated, and much of the seating amended. Mirth-provoking subjects in "He Would A-hunting Go" and "Asking for Trouble," and two or three other good subjects were on the programme, upon which "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" was retained all the week, the other films being changed on the Thursday evening. Since I last visited the place, the orchestra has been improved, Mr. Sayers having appointed Mr. J. Marche as director, with the addition of a fine Cinfonium organ to the usual other instruments.

The much envied reputation of the Theatre de Luxe in Fawcett Street, was still further enhanced by last week's programmes, Mr. Frederic J. Hudspeth scoring heavily with "A Man from the West." "The Measure of a Man" and "United in Danger" were also most effective, whilst the remodelled orchestra, under Mr. Harry Pullan's direction, added to its laurels.

That much vexed question, the attendance of children at picture houses, was mentioned at Wednesday's meeting of the Sunderland County Borough Council, by Councillor W. Walker, an ex-mayor of the town and the leader of a big Sunday brotherhood. He asked whether something could not be done to ensure the absence of children from "second houses" unless accompanied by their parents. Alderman Kirtley (chairman of the Watch Committee) replied that the matter was under consideration, and when the licences came up for renewal an effort would be made to enforce such a regulation. Several members of the council wanted to voice their opinions on the topic, but further discussion was not permitted.

Few of the managers of the smaller halls in the town are indulging in bigger things than Mr. Hilton Fox, who had that fine drama, "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil" there last week. He screened "The House of Temperley" recently, and seems determined to make assurance doubly sure in view of opposition. He is, I am glad to say, reaping a most gratifying reward.

People of all grades in Sunderland smiled last week when there sedately walked past them an ass, bearing this inscription on a card:—"Everybody's going to Millfield Picture House except me, and I am an ——." It was a most effective advertisement, and Mr. J. Raymond Waller was heartily congratulated upon having struck upon such an effective idea. "Detective Daring and the Thames Coiners" was his star picture. The Millfield, I was glad to learn from him, is having a very satisfactory time of it at present.

Patrons of the Palace Theatre in High Street West, have become quite good authorities as to what is newest and best amongst the film creations, and they were not disappointed last week, for Messrs. Hamilton had secured "The Curse of War" exclusively for the town. This exceptionally exciting film was backed up by several other first-class reels, "The Success of Selfishness" in particular, going well.

Mr. Thomas H. Johnson, managing director of the Villiers, is there showing the shareholders of the new Roker Avenue venture, which he will also supervise, that the concerns are in capable hands. "The Golden Beetle" made the business last week, though the other parts of the programme were quite good enough and well worth the patronage.

Some time has elapsed since South Shields had so many good things as were the attractions there last week. The Kino, in Derby Street, had "The Gem of India," and the Queen's Theatre in Mile End Road, "The Midnight Wedding." "Golden Heart" was the main attraction at the Chichester, which Mr. Arthur J. Hutchinson is making into a success, and for which he has wisely booked "The House of Temperley" for this week. "As the Sparks Fly Upwards" was at the King's Picture House. "The Grand Electric, in Ocean Road, ran "The Black Spot," and its near neighbour, the Picture House, "For Love of a Man," whilst this week "Tess" is the truly great thing.

Another hall that I must mention is the Palace Electric in Frederick Street, where Mr. J. Franklyn Howard has the expert assistance of Mr. J. H. Tindle, of the Sunderland Film Agency. "A Midnight Guest" was the premier screen item, with "Duty v. Conscience" as its main support. South Shields being, like Sunderland, a shipping port, it always has a floating population of seafarers about, and let me write it as a good tip to other managers similarly situated, the Palace bills always have a few lines in French and German on them for the benefit of the sailormen, who, naturally, greatly appreciate this kindly and thoughtful consideration.

Edison's "talking pictures" were heard at the West Hartlepool Empire last week. It was the first time, I believe I am right in saying, that talking pictures had been presented in the North.

PATENTS GRANTED.

29,700.—Printing Cinematograph Films.—R. Rigby and N. J. Anderson, Premier Works, Little James Street, London.—In printing cinematograph films, the superposed films, whilst being fed, experience the weigh of a presser, supplemented or not by a light spring pressure, and whilst stationary, experience the augmented load due to a mechanically operated clamping device, such as the pivoted device operated by the rotating cam surface.

29,746.—Cinematographs, Phonographs.—E. Costatini, 12, Avenue Alexandre Dumas, La Varenne St. Hilaire, Seine, France.—The casing of a portable combined cinematograph and phonograph, geared together, has a screen extensible for focussing by racks and pinions. A frame may be arranged around the screen to intercept exterior light. An electric motor drives the shutter films feed and phonograph spindle by tooth and worm gearing, the speed of the whole being regulated by a spring drawn lever which contact with the governor disc, and is controlled by a cam rotated by hand. The sound may issue from a conical tube or from a wooden box acting as a sounding board or from a metal horn.

30,066.—Cinematographs, etc. Itala Flm-Ing. Sciamengo.—A Pastrone.—Barriera Casale, Regione Ponte Trombetts Turin, Italy.—With the object of producing stereoscopic pictures, a cinematographic camera is displaced slowly in front of the scene being photographed in such away that the angle between the axis of the camera and the direction of motion changes continuously. To facilitate the displacement, the legs of the stand on which the camera is mounted terminate in wheels or the like.

30,108.—Colour cinematography.—P. Ulysse, Chemin des Charteux, Marseilles, France. In colour cinematography, the component images constituting one complete colour record, are taken or projected at a time through a multiple lens comprising optical elements, the lens being moved in front of the film to project successively the groups of images, upon the completion of which the film is fed longitudinally to bring fresh images into position, is never less than two. Alternatively, the lens may be stationary and the film may be given transverse movements relatively to the lens to bring the images in front of the lens elements in this form may be one or more. In a further modification the lens movements and transverse movements may be used in combination. In order to superpose the projected images, the optical elements of the multiple lens are mounted on slides which are displaced by means of screws in guides perpendicularly arranged on the common mount.

620.—Cinematographs, etc.—A. Gottschalk, Bondgardstrasse, and G. Thiemann, Alsenstrasse, both in Bochum, Germany.—To prevent the spread of fire in cinematographs, etc., means are provided for lowering the support for the film carrying devices into a liquid container when a fire occurs. The support is attached to the hinged flap which is maintained horizontally by the roller on the lever connected by links to one end of a bell-crank lever, the other end of which is connected to celluloid strips which become ignited when the film burns, thus allowing the spring to move the roller out of engagement with the flap, the support is consequently lowered into the tank. The door is simultaneously moved to close the aperture by the release of the catch, and a door is also moved to close the aperture giving access to the film feed device by means of the cord connected to the flap. The projection aperture may be closed by a flap connected to an ignitable cord, and this flap may carry an abutment to close the switch and turn on lights in the room. The flap is provided with hinged flaps or guide plates to direct the water against the film. In a modification, the support is lowered vertically into the tank.

810.—Cinematographs, etc.—P. P. Benedetti, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.—This invention relates to films recording movements accompanied by music, and having photographed on them the image of the conductor or his baton to give the correct time for the music to the orchestra accompanying the projected pictures. According to this invention, the score of the music is also printed on the film, so that each picture is accompanied by a picture of the corresponding portion of the score.

1,330.—Cinematograph films.—F. Munie and T. and H. Week, Brussels.—A positive film for stereoscopic cinematography is prepared by exposing a film under one film of a stereoscopic pair, bathing it in a solution of dye, fixing, washing etc., then resensitising it and exposing it under the second of the stereoscopic pair, bathing it in a solution of dye of a colour complementary to the first, and finally fixing, washing, etc. The projected pictures are viewed through tinted spectacles.

A SECOND CONVERSATION.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Mr. TOPNOTCH - Manager, Palace of Art Picture House (Admission 2/6 to 6d.).

Mr. SMALLMAN - Manager, Paradise St. Cinema (Admission 6d. to 3d.)

Mr. Smallman (looking at advert. in trade paper) "I see there is going to be another Cinema Show this year."

Mr. Topnotch—"Is there? Well, Exhibitions don't interest me a scrap—waste of time to go to them."

Mr. Smallman—"Did you go last year?"

Mr Topnotch—No, not I. It takes me all my time to look after the Palace."

Mr. Smallman—"Yes. I suppose you are kept very busy. I hear you've had some trouble with your projectors."

Mr. Topnotch—"Yes. The blankety-blank things won't go right for two days together—I don't know what to do. Didn't you have some trouble, too?"

Mr. Smallman—"Yes, last year. But I went down to see the show at Olympia, and I picked up some most valuable hints, besides buying the 'Right-the-wrong' Projector. That Show saved me pounds, and gave a new lease of life to my House."

Mr. Topnotch—"You don't say so! Well, if that's the case, I might do well to go to OLYMPIA this year, and see what I can pick up"

Mr. Smallman—"Well, Topnotch, all I can say is that you'll both enjoy it and profit by it."

NOTE:—"Observer," January, Westmarsh. (Report of half-yearly meeting).

"Mr. Topnotch, Manager of the Palace Art Picture House, stated that owing to the increase in business since September, a dividend of 25% would be declared for the half-year (applause)."

There is a good moral to this story for Manufacturers, Renters, Allied Trades Managers and Exhibitors:—"That he who reads may run" and

KEYSTONE.

Rebecca's Wedding Day.—Comedy of Hebrew life, with the fat boy in a new part. (June 1st. 1,000 ft.)

Double Crossed.—Determined to get the girl for himself, Ford schemes a robbery and the arrest of the rivals. Unluckily for him, they escape and he has "a rough passage" while hiding in a trunk. (June 4th. 1,009 ft.)

Chasing Gloom.—A lugubrious subject is seen, even a street comedy failing to raise his smiles. A visit to a picture show thaws him and he emerges with antics which prove a good "ad." for the house. (June 1st. 426 ft.)

The Servant Question.—Trouble brews when the husband flirts with the maids, but the wife soon arouses furious jealousy when men servants a given a brief trial. (June 4th. 579 ft.)

H.M.N. (Reading.)—Several American companies will be producing pictures in England this summer. Most of them will send over their own artistes for leading parts and will engage further players here as occasion may require. Watch THE BIOSCOPE for further information.

X.Y.Z. (London, W.C.)—Write to the Secretary of the Authors' Society, 1, Central Buildings, Tothill Street, Westminster, S.W.

S.L.T. (Hackney.)—There is no place for such wild ideas in the cinematograph industry. We cannot help you.

F.M. (Paris.)—We think that you would do better to stay where you are. There is less scope over here than in Paris for your particular kind of work. In any case, don't come until you know of something definite. Apart from applications by letter, advertisement is the only way of finding such a post.

FELIX.—We recommend you to communicate with the Hepworth Manufacturing Company, Limited, 2, Denman Street, Piccadilly Circus, W.; the Clarendon Film Company, Limited, 167-169, Wardour Street, W.; and the Vocal Cinema Company, Limited, 170, Hope Street, Glasgow. "Picture Play Photography," by H. M. Lomas, will be published in a week or so.

[Several replies held over.]

PICTORIAL PERSHORE.

The Electric Theatre will for this week devote the whole of the programme to pictures instead of the interspersion of varieties. For the early part of the week they present "The Bridge of Shadows," and for the latter portion "The Burning Train."

FAMOUS LUBIN ARTISTE.

"The Beauty of Filmdom" is only one of dozens of similar titles bestowed by her admirers upon Miss Ormi Hawley. The three years she has spent in picture playing have brought the Lubin star a big following.

Miss Hawley's birthplace is Holyoake, Massachusetts, and it was from there that she set out a few years ago to accept her first engagement on the stage. After a short stock experience she was noticed by Mr. Lubin who immediately decided that his studio must enlist the promising young actress. Nearly three hundred rôles have been created by Miss Hawley, embracing every form of expression from modern melodrama to fantasy. Scores of those plays were cast with Miss Ormi Hawley in the lead.

Another player might lay stress on the fact that she had made her start as a leading lady and had never played anything less important, but such is not Miss Hawley's disposition. She is unaffected, with an estimation of her gifts and position which falls far below their true value. She is carelessly generous, and finds delight in surprising her intimates with gifts of originality and appropriateness.

FILM AND THE NOVEL.

Messrs. Everett and Co. announce the publication of a large first edition, in popular shilling form, of a novel by Laurence Cowen, entitled "The World, The Flesh and The Devil," founded on his well-known play of that name.

Matters Motographic.

"Most of you renting fellows don't seem to understand that I can't pay the big price that a man in a big town can. My hall is in a village, the nearest town is 14 miles away. There is a strong counter-attraction in the 'Red Lion,' and I simply can't stand high prices."

This is the text for my sermon this week, my masters. It was the remark of an Exhibitor who has the pluck to open out in a tiny, little place in the Fen district, and it states the case of scores more like him.

We of the Motograph took him to our hearts. He is just the sort of man we want to help. If you are like him, write to me and tell me how you are placed, and I will see how we can meet you.

At the moment of writing Mr. Fahrenheit is having a gay old time. Seventy in the shade, and goodness knows what in the sun. What are you doing to keep things cool and inviting in your theatre? I hear of one astute manager who invites his patrons to "Come in and shiver!" and another whose hall by the use of "fascinating perfumes is redolent of the charm of an old-fashioned garden." Bow-wow!

If you can't provide ideal coolness in your theatre, give it 'em by suggestion, and book "Big Game Hunting in the North Pole Icefields." Joking apart, it's marvellous what a power of suggestion there is in a picture of this kind. Still, glistening snow, icebergs, glaciers: the very words themselves conjure up coolness and comfort.

"Wintry pictures at summery prices." There's a slogan for you! Some of the cleverest work ever done is embodied in this wonderful picture. It was taken during the course of a millionaire's trip in the Far North. As our synopsis says: See the chase and capture of the Polar Bear and the Cubs. SEE the wild Musk Ox at bay. See the Walrus and Seal Hunt. Stuff like this is a change from the everlasting, eternal drama, and I know you only want to give it five minutes' thought and you'll fix a date. Don't get it into your head that this is purely educational stuff. It isn't. It is full of real, full-blooded thrills; it has for its story the struggle for supremacy amongst the savage denizens of the icy North. It is real drama, after all.

We've got our hands full with "The Finger of Destiny." The really fine acting, the varied nature of the scenes, and the dramatic finale have all contributed to a success which seems most likely to surpass all our previous ones. Don't forget that hundreds of real British Bluejackets take part in the conflict with the Chinese "Boxers" at the close of the second reel. It cost a lot to produce, but it's worth every penny of it. If I can only get you here to see it, I know you'll put it in your programme during the summer.

Does your theatre hold 1,000 people? If so, I have a proposition to make to you in which I know you will be interested. We are prepared to book you the wonderful series of animal films by Cherry Kearton, entitled "Nature's Zoo," on a sharing basis, and we do not ask for a guarantee. Our experience with this arrangement in different parts of the country has proved to us that success is assured. These pictures are by far the most wonderful series of nature studies ever cinematographed, and their success has been extraordinary.

Under the arrangement suggested above we supply all lithograph and letterpress posters free, together with smart advertising specialities for the front of the house, you being only liable for the printing of such additional local announcement slips as may be necessary. We also send an advance manager and with the film a lecturer. I think you will agree that this is a proposition worth considering; remember, we ask for no guarantee, so that you are protected in every way. Why not write to me for further particulars? By the way, the film is 5,500 ft., and I can send you a synopsis of the picture if you will drop me a card.

The name of Mr. Cherry Kearton is familiar to the man in the street, and his return from a recent expedition has been much paragraphed in the papers. Why not literally "Make hay while the sun shines?"

"Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery." When we made a picture some time ago in which daring Babs Neville climbed a 90 ft. crane over the river Thames we set an example to other producers and there was an epidemic of crane-climbing. We started the idea of scenes of London life as a background to pictures; now "everybody's doing it." In this connection will you note that "Those Who Dwell in Darkness" is the only film issued under the auspices of the National Institute of the Blind and bearing Mr. C. Arthur Pearson's personal appeal and signature. Others are simply the sincerest form of flattery

By JOHN CHER.

The London Film Company's "House of Temperley" is continuing its triumphal tour of Paris, prior to being presented to the provinces. This week the picture tops the bill at the Tivoli Cinema, and as a result of a display advertisement in the Journal thousands of people throughout France have read about the moving picture adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "Rodney Stone."

As was expected, Parisians are to be given further opportunities of seeing Mr. Herbert Ponting's historic films of Captain Scott's voyage in the Antartic. Arrangements have been made for Mr. Ponting's lecture to be delivered in French, and the complete entertainment will be given at the Theatre Rejane.

Messrs. Akoun, proprietors of Luna Park, are building two important picture palaces, which they hope will be ready for opening early next October. One is situate in the Avenue Motte Picquet, while the Victoria Cinema Theatre is in the Avenue de la Grande Armee, exactly opposite the Cinerama Theatre. The Victoria will have a large seating capacity, and will rank as one of the most beautiful cinemas in the capital. At both theatres varieties will be given in addition to pictures.

Monsieur Gabriel Kaiser, proprietor of the Cinerama Theatre, having failed to secure the position of director of the State-subsidised Theatre Odeon, has decided to start another picture theatre. The Cinerama Maillot Palace is now being constructed in the Avenue de la Grande Armee, and will adjoin the Victoria Cinema Theatre.

A company of picture play actors are now playing a Balkan War drama at Constantinople. The troupe is under the direction of Eugene Lacroix, and the scenario has been written by M. Ludovic Nadau, the Journal's war correspondent.

It is announced that a firm will shortly release a film showing how cinematograph films are manufactured.

"I have played in two films," said M. Mounet Sulley, the celebrated actor, to an interviewer, "and I discovered that the cinematograph, from an artistic point of view, has a great defect. It fixes for all time the acting of an hour, and the actor is never twice quite the same." M. Mounet Sulley explained that when he was shown the first prints of "Œdipus Rex" he was dissatisfied with his performance, and the pictures had to be retaken. He went on to say that when he saw the first-mentioned film and "The Kiss of Judas," he realised that in spite of his conscientious efforts he was far from the result he had attempted to obtain. Consequently, he advocates numerous rehearsals to arrive at the nearest approach to perfection. The tragedian is of the opinion that there is no difference between playing for the camera and on the stage. "The objection which I have heard raised that one plays without a public," he said, "is without justification." He is enthusiastic concerning the future of talking pictures. Like Sarah Bernhardt, M. Mounet Sully urges the increased exhibition of films showing foreign countries and wild animals. "The cinema is incomparable," he concluded. "It adds to the grandeur of the things it faithfully reproduces. The rest is art and literature."

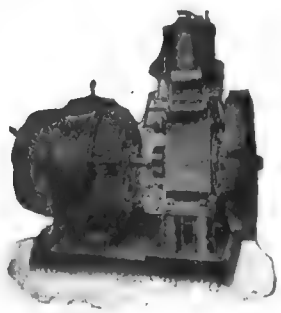
It is announced in the French press that the Kaiser's brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, has written a scenario, entitled, "Faithful Unto the Swimming Pool." The film was taken on board the steamship Cap Trafalgar, during the Prince's recent trip to South America.

Monsieur Paul Ladewig has disposed of the rights for Spain of "Les Pardaillain," an exceptionally fine French historical production. Mr. Ladewig tells me that he had a delightful time at Barcelona, where he was the guest of the editor of El Mundo Cinematographico.

The director of Ravissan Film informs me that he is about to place on the market a film of unusual merit, featuring two clever child artistes.

Monsieur Salembier, Presient of the Renters' and Exhibitors' Association of the North and Pas de Calais, has been elected a member of the Chamber of Deputies, as representative of Boulogne Sur Mer.

Mr. Couturier, of the Agence Moderne, has secured the agency for France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and Bresil, of Phœnix films.



The General Film Agency will handle Barker's "[illegible]"

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

LICENSING.

The annual court for the hearing of applications for the renewal of cinematograph licences for the City of Glasgow was held at the Burgh Court Hall on Monday. All the existing licences, with three exceptions, were renewed. In the reports by the Police Superintendents on two houses it was mentioned that the proprietors had been cautioned by the police for giving away confections at children's matinées. The Chairman of the Bench announced that this practice must not be continued, and only granted licences on that condition. A caution was also administered to a licensee who had been reported for allowing children under fourteen years of age to be on the premises of a picture theatre unaccompanied by parents or guardians at 9.40 p.m.

SUNDAY OPENING.

The Sunday opening question in Scotland has this week received its quietus, and now only o e town in the "Land o' Cakes" can claim the privilege. The favoured town is Lochgelly, in Fifeshire, and here the application was opposed by the local Presbytery, but the bench, recognising that the people desired Sunday amusements, granted the application. Other parts of Fifeshire were not so favoured, and at Buckhaven the licensees of halls in that town and the neighbouring township of Methill, both of which had previously enjoyed Sunday opening, were restricted to the six days. The County Council of Fife, which controls the towns in the county other than burghs, also had the question before it last week, and here again the fiat has gone forth that only six-day shows are permissible. At the Buckhaven Court the applicants were all represented by solicitors, who put most favourable cases before the bench. Petitions in favour of Sunday opening, signed by over 2,000 male residents, were presented, and a petition signed by 712 residents was presented against. In every case, despite petitions and eloquent pleading, the licences were restricted to six-day opening. The feeling in the Fifeshire towns and larger mining villages is very strong on the Sunday opening question, and the matter is likely to be made a strong point at the next town and county council elections.

In many towns in Scotland the cinema is guarded not only by Corporations and police, but also by "Citizenship Committees," who take the questions of the people's morals as being under their particular charge. In Kirkcaldy this is particularly the case, and here the Citizenship Committee not only appoint themselves censors of films, but "recommend" the licensing authorities as to what regulations they should lay down for the conduct of cinema halls. At the annual licensing court held on Tuesday last, the Kirkcaldy Citizenship Committee submitted a representation stating that further regulations were necessary to prevent moral and other dangers which had arisen, not only in Kirkcaldy, but all over the country in connection with cinematograph entertainments. It was alleged that objectionable pictures had actually been shown in the town. The Committee recommended that on receipt of two or three well-founded complaints (from "the Committee," I presume) regarding the entertainment of picture shows and variety entertainments, the magistrates should suspend for a time, or for the remainder of the year, the licence of the hall; that the presence of children under fourteen years of age be forbidden at all performances after 6.30 p.m. unless accompanied by parents or guardians; that free passes, free tickets, or reduced prices of admission be not given to any persons except those exhibiting bills in their premises, and those to be limited to two in each case. The Chief Constable said the hour of 6.30 was much too early to fix for children unaccompanied by parents, and thought that the present hour of 9 p.m. was working very satisfactorily. Provost Lockhart said they sympathised with the aims and objects of the Citizenship Committee, but the feeling of the magistrates was that the matter should be allowed to lie over for another year. All the licences were renewed on the old conditions. What will happen next year, when the "Committee" has had another twelve months to formulate more suggestions, no one knows, and I am sure that the exhibitors are not much concerned about it.

TRADE NEWS.

The Bendon Trading Company have some excellent subjects in hand just now, and the demand for them is brisk. The topical secured last Sunday was excellent, and the arrangements for getting the film taken and brought back for development were perfect in themselves. Motor-cycle, motor-car, and steam launch were all requisitioned.

The B.B. Pictures, 81, Dunlop Street, are experiencing a busy period. Several of the best of the new releases are in their handling, and are finding a ready market.

Major Schomburgk's African Films.

Major Hans Schomburgk, F.R.G.S., the noted explorer, who was the first to discover the pigmy hippopotamus, has recently returned from Western Africa with a most interesting collection of cinematograph pictures, a private view of which was given to the Press at Messrs. M.P. Sales' showrooms on Friday afternoon. Although Major Schomburgk has a distinguished record as a big game hunter, his recent explorations have been made with the object of studying the life, manners, and customs of the natives of Togoland and other little known districts of North-west Africa, and there is little doubt that such records, which have hitherto been little more than incidental to game hunting pictures, will create a very widespread interest and be of enormous scientific value to anthropologists. Major Schomburgk is also of the opinion that it is only big game hunters who are able fully to appreciate the difficulties of taking really good game pictures, and that therefore the general public may be supposed to take a far deeper interest in pictures of the daily life of the inhabitants of these picturesque and little known countries. It is difficult to over-estimate the educational value, for instance, of such films as that showing the active method of smelting and forging iron weapons, a method which has probably varied little since the days of Tubal Cain, but which, by the rapid advance of civilisation, must inevitably be replaced by more modern methods.

Another factor which must render these pictures widely popular is the extraordinary variety of interest of the different scenes, and Major Schomburgk has made himself on such good terms with the natives that they have entered into the spirit of the expedition with an enthusiasm which will firmly establish them as first favourites with the picture-going public.

Major Schomburgk was accompanied on his expedition by Miss Meg Gehrts, a clever young cinema actress, the first white woman to journey so far into the Togo hinterland, and the pictures of native manners and customs are varied by several dramas in which the Major and Miss Gehrts are supported by a vast number of native "supers," whose magnificent personal qualifications and picturesque costumes are supplemented by a grace of gesture and instinctive dramatic feeling which render them invaluable as cinematographic artistes. They are probably the first actors to receive their salary in salt, and an interesting picture shows how the "ghost" walks in Mangu, each actor holding out the tail of any garment he happens to possess to receive his two cupsful of salt.

A scene showing what smart soldiers are made of the Sudanese native is followed by an amusing picture of an embryo boy-scout movement, in which the brigade shows all the enthusiasm and spirit of their European colleagues, though the familiar costume is represented by a piece of string or a cowrie necklace.

The native woman is shown at work, washing the household linen in a small saucer, treading out and grinding the corn, or cooking the meals, while the display of the most up-to-date fashions in personal adornment is given chiefly by the men. Some of the hats worn by the dandy of Konkombwa will strike the modern "nut" with a thrill of envy and admiration, and the anxiety of the native to pose before the camera and give full effect to his quaint and wonderful head-dress proves that human nature is pretty much the same all the world over.

The native dances are notable chiefly for their exuberant and gymnastic energy, and seem to the uninitiated to be so lacking in meaning or purpose that they are likely to be keenly welcomed as successors to the departed tango. The films showing the method of travel and transport are full of interest, and include the capture of a large ostrich, which is run down and lassoed by mounted natives. A river is crossed, the porters carrying the baggage on their heads, and hippos. are seen at close quarters rising out of the water.

Major Schomburgk hopes to show these films at the Philharmonic Hall, and with the interesting lecture by which he introduces them they should prove as interesting and popular as the Antarctic pictures which are now having so successful a run.

Last week I turned my attention mainly to the West Hull district, and this week I have been paying visits in East Hull, where I met with the same flourishing signs on all hands. Despite the fine weather, the cinemas are having very little to complain about yet, although a falling off might be expected at any time now. With good programmes, however, such as those which are being provided, the slack period will be considerably shortened. As one manager said to me during my tour of the halls this week, it certainly costs more to fill a cinema in very fine weather, but the people are sure to go if the programme is sufficiently attractive. Not only in East Hull, but all over the city the exhibitors realise this, and are snapping up the good things for the fine evenings. One or two of the bookings which I have seen are sure to prove irresistible. The band nights in the Hull parks have now commenced, which, of course, means a counter attraction for those in search of recreation, but there is little doubt but that the cinema will hold its own.

I called on Mr. Norman Wilkinson, of the Holderness Hall, the first built of the East Hull picture palaces, last week, and found business progressing as usual, with a very attractive programme provided. Mr. Wilkinson has no light task in filling a picture palace which holds 2,000 people, and I notice a goodly number of the seats are always occupied. The Edison Kinetophone is still delighting those who hear it. During the last week or two the management have been running dramatic films in connection with the Kinetophone, lasting eleven or twelve minutes, and these have proved very acceptable. They have been about twice the length of the ordinary Kinetophone subjects. Many first release films have been included, amongst them being "Port o' Doom," "Old St. Paul's," "Confessing Stone," "The Mystery of the Old Mill" and "A Terrible Night at Sea." "The Harper Mystery" was so big a success recently that after an interval it was brought for a further three days.

Mr. F. Hainsworth is catering admirably for his patrons at the Dreadnought, another East Hull cinema, situated in Naylor's Row, and only a few yards from the Holderness Hall. The pictures are always good, and there is an added attraction in the singing pictures, which are proving very popular.

Building has been going on some time at the new Sherburn Palace, in Sherburn Street, and there is every likelihood of it being completed and opened before the coming autumn. The contracts are in the hands of local firms, and it looks as though they are going to complete the work with credit. The Sherburn is at the opposite end of the street from the Holderness Road, and rather in a corner, but it will soon become known, and will undoubtedly justify its inclusion amongst the cinemas of this populous district.

Mr. Chas. Mackey was in the midst of his annual "spring cleaning," when I called at the East Hull Picturedrome, Holderness Road, a few days ago. The interior is being nicely redecorated, and will be made even more comfortable and inviting than at the present time. Besides this, Mr. Mackey is providing additional ventilation. Ever since the opening, the management have made a proud boast of the admirable ventilating arrangements at the Picturedrome, and now all the single ventilators are being converted into double ones. Besides, there is a sliding roof, and windows which can be opened to admit the sun. The Picturedrome should now be one of the most comfortable of summer resorts. Mr. Mackey has been catering for his patrons with first release matter. In the present week the principal pictures have been "The Runaway Princess," "The Reward," "The Tragedy of Ambition," "The Elusive Diamond" and "His Faithful Servant," and I also notice the comedies have been quite new. Last week "The Murdock Trial," featuring Miss Florence Turner, was a capital attraction.

The demolition of the old Empire and Ring, I observe, has now gone so far that there will soon be a clear way for the builders of the Majestic. The Empire has been the object of a good deal of interest this week, as its old walls and roof have been taken away, and it will be more interesting still now to watch the coming of Mr. William Morton's palatial picture palace.

Although the Westbourne Avenue scheme has fallen through, it is quite within the bounds of probability that there will be yet another for West Hull, and I hear that in financial circles a site in the Boulevard district is favoured.

With half an hour at my disposal the other night, I called at the Prince's Hall, George Street, where Mr. Tom Bogue was screening "The Old Curiosity Shop," for the first time in Hull. Needless to say, the film was witnessed by packed houses every night, and though of necessity many incidents have had to be crowded out of this latest adaptation of a Dickensian novel, the picture came in for well-merited appreciation.

I must tender my heartiest congratulations to Mr. R. S. Comber on the vastly improved appearance of the Theatre de Luxe. The large blank panels at the front have now been adorned with life-size figures, and the de Luxe looks very artistic outside as well as in. This was instead of the original scheme of rebuilding the frontage, which has been deferred. Large ventilators have also been placed in the side wall in Brook Street. With these alterations and the recent interior redecorations and refurnishing the de Luxe compares most favourably with any of the other cinemas in the heart of the city.

There is every appearance of work being commenced very shortly in connection with the new Central Picture House, Prospect Street. The premises which will have to be pulled down have already been vacated.

Money is being quickly subscribed for the West Park Cinema, Anlaby Road, which promises to be a good investment. I hear that here, also, building will be started in a very short time.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

His Guilty Conscience.

This is an old story retold on imaginative and unconventional lines. Its plot, that is to say, is of less interest than its remarkable acting and its wonderful photographic effects and arrangements. It is interesting as showing the superior importance of treatment over subject matter, to see with what complete success the Danmark Company revivify an ancient tale and by approaching it in an original manner, give it almost the whole value of an entirely new thing.

Photographic beauty has been a distinguishing feature of Danish productions for some time, and the Danmark Company in particular seem to have developed this side of the picture play to the farthest limits yet reached. Almost all this company's films are notable for their great pictorial charm, not only as regards composition but also as regards lighting and brilliance of quality. It would be difficult to insist too strongly upon the importance of this side of film production, especially in view of the manner in which so many other manufacturers neglect or under-estimate it. In these Danish films there is none of that cold flatness which repels one so much in the average picture. They glow with warmth and with that sense of colour which is suggested by a cunning disposition of light and shade. Sometimes, even, so wonderfully is the lighting arranged, they have an almost plastic effect.

Considered from a purely dramatic point of view, "His Guilty Conscience" is quite a satisfactory production, and is, as we have said, magnificently acted. The interest is well sustained throughout, and at moments the action is of thrilling intensity. A particularly effective and imaginatve touch is lent to the story by the "mysterious stranger" who figures in the plot throughout, but whose identity is not disclosed until the end. Altogether it would be difficult to imagine an entertainment better executed in every particular. The film should be very successful. (Danmark S.R.H. film. Oscar Rosenberg. Three reels.)

In design and in general character this excellent farce is exactly similar to that phenomenally amusing picture, "The Blue Mouse." Frankly speaking, we do not like it quite so well, but, although the later film necessarily suffers in comparison by the absence of that delightful comedienne, Miss Madge Lessing, who was so largely responsible for the success of the earlier picture, it is nevertheless an exceedingly humorous entertainment, and one sufficiently far above the average to be quite certain of enjoying a wide popular triumph.

Although the somewhat mechanical ingenuities of the old-style farce may seem somewhat out-of-date on the ordinary stage, their possibilities have been so rarely explored by the cinematograph producer, and are so greatly superior to the primitive plots still considered good enough for many films, that such a picture as the present naturally appears both unusually excellent and highly original. "The Second Door on the Left" is full of cleverly devised situations, quite irresistible in their humour, and it is acted by everyone concerned with the speed and vivacity so essential in a work of this description. It is very well staged, and there is one particularly good setting showing a perpetually moving double lift, which figures prominently in the story and is productive of numerous diverting episodes. As was the case with "The Blue Mouse," the sub-titles are a notable feature of the production, and greatly add to the general fun by their up-to-date, allusive phraseology. Altogether, "The Second Door on the Left" is a most captivating piece of humour. Wildly and madly absurd, the whole thing nevertheless goes as merrily as a two-step; and it is sure to prove enormously successful. (Vitascope film. A. E. Hübsch and Co., Limited.)

Stolen Laurels.

The theft of a composer's brains has provided an excellent theme for more than one picture play, and in the present case a similar situation forms the basis of what is in many respects a first-rate dramatic comedy. The story tells how a nobleman purchases an opera written by a poverty-stricken genius and affixes his name thereto in the hope that the honour he unfairly wins on the successful production of the work may help him in his suit for the hand of a wealthy heiress. Subsequently, of course, the plot is discovered, and the heiress, having unmasked the nobleman, marries the poor composer.

Strictly speaking, the tale is not greatly probable or convincing, in respect either of its plot or of its characters; but it is so magnificently presented that, in spite of everything, it is singularly effective. It would be difficult to praise too highly the finished acting or the elaborate staging which are such notable features of the film, and we have no doubt that it will prove very successful with most audiences. The Eclair Company's "A.C.A.D." films may now be regarded as one of the most important brands on the market from an artistic point of view. Finer acting than that which is to be seen in every one of these pictures cannot be found anywhere, whilst their general production is equally masterly. Thus it is that, although it would be easy to pick small holes in the plot of their latest picture, "Stolen Laurels," the latter remains, nevertheless, an admirable piece of work in a great many respects, and one which is well worth seeing. (A.C.A.D. film. Eclair Company, Limited. Released June 25th. Length 2,090 ft.)

Guilty or Not Guilty.

An old story, pointing an obvious moral, this charming little picture is nevertheless immensely effective and quite certain to prove popular, especially with working class audiences. It deals with the well-worn tale of a child whom hunger compels to commit a small theft. We are shown the police court whither the little one has been haled to answer for her crime; her simple story is visualised for us as she repeats it; and then we see how Mercy triumphs over the letter of the Law when justice is humanely administered. As a film, it may be a trifle over-sentimental for some tastes, but it is presented with such strict realism and so keen a regard for natural sincerity that there is really nothing mawkish in the picture. One may be pardoned for wondering whether a police court collection is a very usual proceeding, but even if it is not its introduction in the present piece is not a very serious instance of dramatic license. The picture is founded upon a poem, various lines from which serve as sub-titles. "Guilty or Not Guilty" is likely to be very successful. (Thanhouser film. Released June 15th. Length 1,006 ft.)

The Price of His Honour.

Although in one or two respects slightly artificial and improbable, this unusual little play is exceedingly effective, and it is the vehicle for some very admirable acting. The earlier portion is particularly good. In fact, we have seldom seen so wonderfully human and pathetic a scene, carried out with such natural art and perfect sincerity, as the little episode in this picture wherein the heroine of the piece hears from the man to whom she is engaged that he loves her no longer. It is one of those moments, all too rare in most plays, which immediately seize one's sympathies and appeal to one with the direct force of an incident in real life.

The big situation in the film, showing the bold course adopted by a young girl to save a weak wife from betraying her husband, is both novel and striking. It might have been rather more ingeniously handled, but it is quite fine, and constitutes an excellent climax to what is throughout a very dramatic story. The acting, as we have said, is most praiseworthy. Miss Ruth Stonehouse as the heroine gives the best performance we can remember to have had from her, and Mr. Bryant Washburn makes, as usual, a most insinuating and convincing villain, whilst others who do well are Miss Lillian Drew as an erring wife, Mr. R. C. Travers as an unduly preoccupied husband, and Miss Helen Dunbar as a delightfully motherly mother. Essanay films are always splendidly staged, and the present picture contains one particularly effective scene showing a bird's-eye view of a big restaurant. "The Price of His Honour" is a thoroughly fine piece of work, which should meet with much success. (Essanay film. Released June 22nd. Length 995 ft.)

The Independence of Susan.

This is a tense and virile drama of healthy open-air life, giving a striking picture, graphic in its realism, of the strenuous existence led by pioneers in a new and uncultivated country. It contains a love story and plenty of adventure, and the scenes of free and open life are a refreshing relief from the ordinary drama of sentiment and social intrigue.

Susan Miller and Joe Williams have taken up adjoining claims, the conditions being that a certain amount of land shall be under cultivation within a certain period to prevent the claim from lapsing. Joe realises that Susan cannot do the work without assistance, and is only too ready to be the one to assist. But Susan wishes to be independent, and Joe's only resource is to spend long nights ploughing up Susan's land without her knowledge. His devotion is rewarded later on, for a wily stranger detects signs of minerals on Susan's land, and gaining her confidence learns that she has not fulfilled the conditions to establish her claim. He throws off his mask and makes a grab at her land, and when Susan finds that Joe's secret labours have secured her property to her, she realises that it will be to their mutual interest to unite their claims.

It is a fine drama, full of life and excitement, with magnificent views of spacious country, and played with spirit and vigour by an excellent company, including Miss Winifred Greenwood, Mr. George Field, and Mr. Edward Coxen. No one can produce this class of Western drama better than the Flying A Company, and the acting, stage management, and photographic quality are well up to their high standard. (Flying A film. American Company (London), Limited. Released July 6th. Length 1,026 ft.)

Trapped in the Mine.

Full of exquisitely beautiful examples of photographic art, acted with the force and vigour so characteristic of Italian players, and having the benefit of a dramatic and effective plot, this excellent melodrama of colliery life should enjoy much success. In view of the fact that it is quite obviously an Italian film, made in Italy, and acted by Italians, it seems rather unnecessary to have anglicised the names of the characters and to have introduced in one scene a bevy of "English" policemen. With the exception of these two small inconsistencies, however, it is difficult to find any serious fault with the film. Frankly a melodrama, one does not expect from it too much probability of detail, and as a whole it is quite convincing. There are some very cleverly contrived mine scenes and a good explosion, together with some delightful glimpses of a wild and romantic coast line. Altogether, "Trapped in the Mine" should prove quite a sound attraction. (Milano film. X.L. Film Company. Length Length 3,000 ft.)

The Man Who Came Back.

This is a play on a theme which is invariably dramatically effective, the story of the man who, slighted during his period of adversity, returns eventually to confound with his prosperity those who have thought lightly of him in the past. It is the old story of Cinderella, too, for the plutocrat on his return allows his valet to pose as the millionaire in order to dazzle his late fiancee and her family, while he makes love to the humble dependent and supplies her with a gorgeous frock in which to attend a ball at his repurchased family mansion.

The manners of the society ladies are a little crude and unsophisticated, and the hero lacks the distinction of the fairy prince of romance; but the piece is well mounted, and an excellent character study is supplied by the valet, who is obliged to pose as the millionaire, and some good comedy scenes are the result. (Beauty film. American Company (London), Limited. Released July 6th. Length 980 ft.)

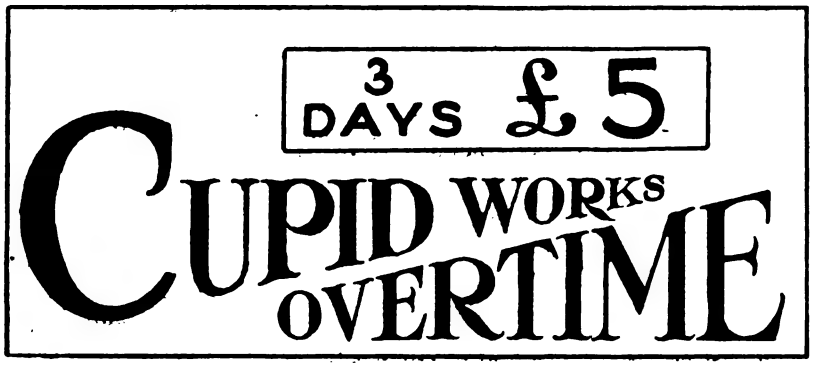
In the Moonlight.

This film is chiefly notable for the excellence of its photography and the wonderful beauty of its setting, some of the moonlit lake scenes being veritable triumphs of the art of the camera.

The story is not very convincing, and it would seem that the author has not himself been quite clear as to the working out of his theme. Mary Langton is deceived by a wealthy broker, George Lytton, a guest of her sister, Mrs. Westley, only discovering when too late that he is a married man. She goes abroad for years, and returns to her sister's home to find that her niece, Sunshine, is in love with Frank, the son of George Lytton. Mary starts a flirtation with Frank, presumably from motives of revenge, but though she causes Sunshine some degree of annoyance, she gains little by it, as the young man is not deeply involved, and easily manages to pacify his fiancee. Mary Langton and George Lytton both suffer pangs of remorse, but it cannot be said that they succeed in enlisting the sympathy of the spectator.

The Flying A Company is not seen to such advantage in society drama as in the more spacious atmosphere of the Wild West, but the play is worthy of great praise for its setting and the great beauty of its scenery and photographic quality. (Flying A film. American Company (London), Limited. Released July 2nd. Length 1,960 ft.)

Monsieur Lecoq, Detective: The Tragedy at the "Pepper Box" Inn.



The detective drama is a form of picture play which is so popular and of which so many examples, good, bad, and indifferent, have been seen in the past, that the producer desirous of adding yet another to the already lengthy list is faced with the necessity of working with more than ordinary skill and care. To produce a detective drama of a really original character, moreover, would seem almost an impossibility.

In spite of the many fine and varied plays of this type that have appeared, however, one feels quite justified in saying that the Eclair Company's remarkable and masterly film, "Monsieur Lecoq," is not only magnificently presented in every detail, but is also an entirely original work, absolutely unlike any that one can remember where the cinematograph is concerned. In the first place, it is not a farrago of wildly impossible sensations, nor is it an inhuman melodrama relying for its effects solely upon a heterogeneous collection of so-called "thrills." It is a perfectly orderly, well-developed story, full of subtle and realistic character drawing, and although deeply imaginative, never transcending the bounds of reason. As is pointed out in the excellent "Foreword" to the well-written descriptive booklet issued with the film, there is no real villain in the piece at all, and although it contains quite as much excitement as would be provided by the tracking down of the most bloodthirsty and repulsive criminal, one has the refreshing change of being able to sympathise fully both with the pursuer and the pursued. How the author manages to extricate his plot from the embarras which such a state of affairs would seem to imply must be left for the spectator to discover for himself, since it would be unfair to spoil so admirable a story, in which the expected never happens, by telling it beforehand. The element of surprise is one of the strongest features of the play, which is entirely unconventional in every respect, and one is constantly amazed throughout the piece by the novel turns the story takes right up to the finish, which threatens to be most unsatisfactory, but which, thanks to the author's cleverness, is one of the most completely satisfying endings one can recall. It should be mentioned, in parenthesis, that the film is an adaptation from a well-known work by Emile Gaboriau, the celebrated author and criminologist.

Apart from the striking excellence of its plot, "Monsieur Lecoq" is a notable production for its really wonderful acting. French histrionic art has so often been extolled in these columns that there is little need to return to the subject here, but it should be pointed out that no finer acting has reached us from any country than that which is to be seen in the present picture. Each character stands out with the distinct individuality of a person in real life. There are no jarring exaggerations or conventional posturings. The whole thing carries one away by its convincing naturalness and sincerity.

There is much more which might be said of "Monsieur Lecoq," though not a great deal to be gained by saying. One of the most absorbing stories of the kind ever seen, and at the same time one of the most artistic, it should appeal with equal force to the highest and the lowest classes of audience. We congratulate the Kinema Exclusive Company on their discriminate wisdom in securing this magnificent picture. (Eclair film. Kinema Exclusive Company. Length 3,000 ft.)

A Secret Crime.

This is a strong drama, dealing with a subject of very wide interest. Mrs. Maynard is a kleptomaniac, and the knowledge that she cannot resist the impulse of her awful affliction undermines her health, and destroys her chance of happiness with her husband and little daughter. Mr. Maynard discovers his wife's secret, and in order to work a cure he takes her into the country, where he hopes that a change of interests and environment will have a beneficial effect. For some time all goes well, until a sudden temptation overcomes Mrs. Maynard's resolutions, and she secretes some jewels from a case of samples. She comes upon her little child in the nursery reading to her dolls and copying texts on to a slate. Mrs. Maynard reads the words: "Thou shalt not steal," and taking this to heart she returns the jewels and makes confession to her husband, asking for his assistance and help.

It makes an effective drama, and is well played by Miss Irene Boyle, who contrives to suggest the mental conflict engendered by her affliction, and the final scene, if not absolutely convincing, is dramatically effective. (Kalem film. M. P. Sales Agency, Limited. Released June 16th. Length 1,073 ft.)

The Redemption of David Corson.

A curious but interesting story, this Flesh versus Devil drama by the Famous Players Company strikes what is in some respects an altogether new note. It deals with the sore temptations endured by a young Quaker, and shows how he falls a victim to the fascination of a travelling medicine seller's gipsy wife, to emerge subsequently from these sinful ways a somewhat smug penitent. It is difficult to feel very great sympathy for the character of the erring David, the young sinner in question, or to find any excuse, in spite of his temptations, for some of the things he does, nor is his rapid redemption very much more convincing than his equally sudden fall from grace. When one has said this, however, one has cited nearly everything that may be brought forward in disfavour of the film, which, on the other hand, contains much that is exceedingly charming and effective.

The scenes depicting the life and habits of Dr. Paracelsus (the one really admirable figure in the play) are entirely delightful, whilst the performance of Mr. Broderick as the poor duped charlatan is a magnificent piece of character work. As David Corson, Mr. William Farnum does all that is possible, with considerable talent, to make this unpleasant personage lifelike, but one feels that this fine actor, who is well known in America, is somewhat handicapped by what must have been a largely unsympathetic part. The lady who plays the wife of Paracelsus seems also to have been rather unhappily cast.

In spite of certain weaknesses, "The Redemption of David Corson" is in many ways a striking and notable film. As is usual with Famous Players' productions, it is magnificently mounted, and it includes numerous scenes of great pictorial charm. A film that is sure to evoke a certain amount of controversy, it is well worth seeing, and as we have said, it has much originality. It should enjoy a considerable vogue. (Famous Players film.)

A Romance of the Everglades.

This important two-reel film is of strong dramatic interest, and contains many scenes of intense excitement and some very beautiful pictures of popular winter resorts in Florida. At one of the palatial hotels Wayne Barrow has the good fortune to rescue a young lady from the water, and this unconventional meeting leads to a close intimacy from which Barrow is awakened by the shock of discovering that Norah Everett is engaged to Philip Carew. Barrow endeavours to forget the charms of the lady in a trip to the Everglades of Florida, and Norah goes with a party to Palm Beach. Here her fiancee, Carew, meets Mary Lon and becomes very attentive to her, to the neglect of Norah and the indignation of May's father and her lover, Bat Peterson. There is a boating accident, from which Carew is rescued, but May Lon disappears, and for reasons which are not rendered very obvious Carew is suspected of foul play. We here have the most dramatic moments of the play, Carew being besieged by an angry mob, from which he is rescued by Norah and her friends. Barrow, who has been instrumental in recovering May Lon, turns up to the rescue, and the play ends in an amicable readjustment, for Carew realises that May Lon is the real object of his affection, and Barrow and Norah find no obstacle to their happiness.

The story has strong interest, and is notable for the adroit manipulation of the strong situations. There is not much opportunity for any actor to stand out individually, but the combination is perfect, and the qualities of the photography are of the usual Edison standard of excellence. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released June 29th. Length 1,790 ft.)

Excelsior.

This novel production, of which a lengthy description was given by our Parisian correspondent of March 5th last, takes the form of a spectacular ballet. Originally created as an elaborate ballet, it has been very considerably extended for the purposes of the cinematograph by the introduction of numerous scenes which it would have been impossible to present on the ordinary stage. The basic idea underlying the production—the triumph of Progress through the ages and the conquest of Light over Darkness—is a fascinating one, full of attractive possibilities for the film producer. If one had to describe the production in two words, one might call it an "historical revue," and there is no doubt that it is of considerable educational value besides being very interesting as an unusual and pleasantly varied entertainment.

The ballet scenes, although elaborate and magnificent, are, on the whole, less successful than the wonderfully diverse glimpses of scientific and engineering achievements with which they are plentifully interspersed, and with which, truth to tell, they seem to have little connection. It is unnecessary, in view of the description which has already appeared in this paper, to detail in full the complete "make-up" of the film, but among the most interesting and effective of the scenes included may be mentioned the pictures of the first steamboat built by the ill-fated Papin, and of its modern developments; the glimpses of swing bridges, telephones, dynamos, telegraphic systems, submarines, aeroplanes, airships, hydroplanes, and all the other products of the inventor's genius which have so thoroughly revolutionised the life of the world; and the extraordinarily realistic scenes in the desert where any number of savage lions are seen to attack a little band of pilgrims. Lest the spirit of Italian patriotism, in which the original production was doubtless conceived, should appear to dominate the picture too greatly for English tastes, some excellent portraits of British kings and queens have been appended to the film, thus causing it to finish in a suitably loyal manner.

"Excelsior" is a picture unlike any other that has hitherto appeared, and the opportunity it offers the exhibitor to include in his programme yet another different kind of entertainment will doubtless be very heartily welcomed. As may be imagined, the film gains considerably by the special music which has been composed for it, and the success of the production, and especially of the ballet scenes, will be largely increased when this is carefully rendered.

Mr. J. D. Walker's taste in films is never at fault, and this his latest acquisition constitutes still another proof of his remarkable ability to gauge the demands of the public. (J. D. Walker's World's Films, Limited.)

Black-eyed Susan.

In selecting this well-known story of love and villainy in the days of Nelson as the subject for their latest picture play, the British and Colonial Company have secured a drama which not only has the advantage of ready-made popularity, but which also contains unusual and rather unique possibilities from a spectacular point of view. Curiously enough, in spite of its international importance, the particular historical period in which this story is set has seldom been touched upon by the film producer, to whom it offers extraordinary opportunities for picturesque scenic effect and impressive sensation.

This is by no means the first time that the B. and C. Company have attempted the representation of historical episodes on the screen, but it is certain that none of their earlier efforts has been so successful. The present film is notable for an accuracy of detail and a vivid realisation of atmosphere in which too many historical pictures are sadly lacking. It is true that the producers have been inclined to shirk the presentation of the bigger spectacles suggested by the theme, but so far as they have gone they have done admirably, and a modest work well executed is always preferable to an ambitious undertaking inadequately carried out.

Most people are familiar with the story of "Black-eyed Susan," and it is only necessary to say here that the lines of Douglas Jerrold's popular melodrama have been followed throughout with very few alterations or additions save those which were rendered necessary in adapting the play to the cinematograph. There are many very striking scenes in the film, the backgrounds for which have been chosen with the utmost regard for pictorial charm, and the whole thing is redolent of that spirit of old-world loveliness and homely beauty which the English countryside alone can afford. The studio scenes also are all that they should be, and there are some exceedingly clever and effective pictures of early nineteenth century battleships. The acting is straightforward, sincere and natural, Miss Elizabeth Risdon giving a particularly delightful performance as the heroine of this fine old romance. Among others whose work is notable is the gentleman who plays the landlord—a finished and irresistible piece of character comedy — whilst Messrs. Frederick Groves and M. Gray Murray, as William and Captain Crosstree respectively, act with a hearty vigour which is entirely in keeping with the character of the play. Last, but not least, let us congratulate that clever producer, Mr. Maurice Elvey, who has never been responsible for a better film than this excellent version of "Black-eyed Susan." The picture has every qualification for a big popular success — a thrilling and romantic story, beautiful scenery, picturesque costumes, fine acting and most artistic photography—and we can recommend it with honesty to exhibitors. "THE DECLINE OF THE PICTURE PALACE."

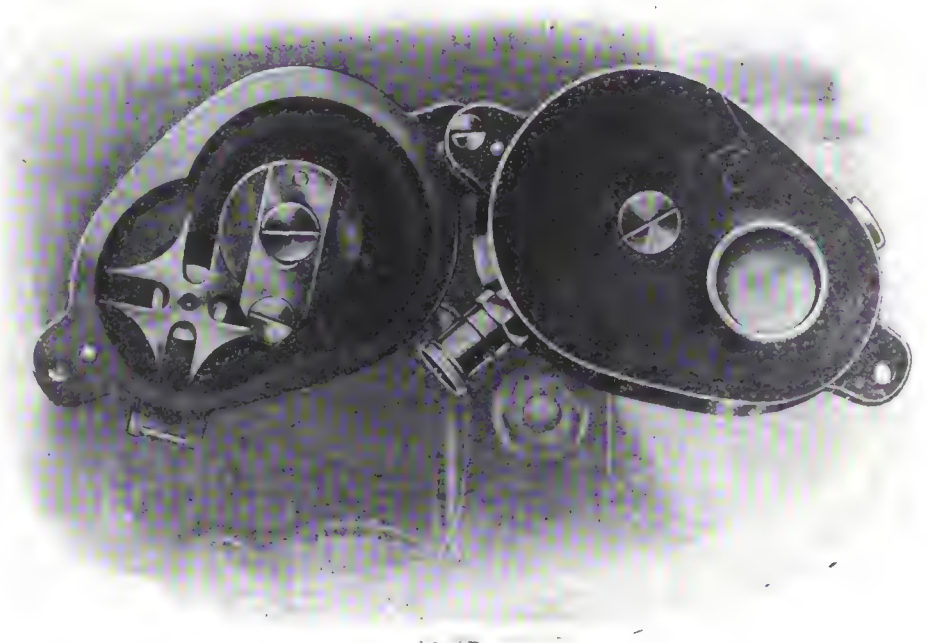
To those of us who have been associated with the moving picture industry from the days when popular fancy was first touched by the wonders of the cinematograph, the periodical appearance of articles in the lay Press on the "decline of the picture palace" creates little or no interest, so accustomed are we to the "swan song" which has been sung over the cinema. Critics have so frequently declared that the picture palace "craze" is on the wane, that the public regards their gloomy forebodings with an utter indifference—an indifference all the more emphatic because it is based on the incontrovertible fact that to the great majority of people the picture theatre has become what may be termed without exaggeration part and parcel of their everyday life. It is so easy to label anything to which one has an objection "a craze"; for one thing it is a cheap and handy form of sarcasm, and for another it singles out the would-be critic as being a somewhat superior person.



We feel that this slight digression is necessary in dealing very briefly with two articles which appeared last week in certain journals, both of which, while paying a somewhat grudging tribute to the popularity of the cinema theatre, nevertheless assert that its influence with the public is on the wane. As we pointed out only recently in these columns, no trade or profession of such youth as the cinematograph industry could hope to enjoy an uninterrupted run of great and increasing prosperity without experiencing occasional "bad patches." Offering something entirely new, something which made an appeal to people's imaginations, which gave them entertainment at a cost hitherto undreamed of, the cinematograph immediately became a great, world-wide form of amusement. It was undoubtedly its novelty which first secured the attention of the public. That attention once secured, has never diminished. The cinematograph to-day is a recognised and legitimate entertainment; its appeal is not confined to those whom we are wont to describe as the "lower classes." It has invaded society; its usefulness is acknowledged by eminent educationalists and scientists alike; and perhaps, above all, it remains the most wholesome amusement that can be offered to the public.

Admitting the truth of the assertion that competition has been strained, in certain instances, to the very utmost, and that some theatre proprie-

—with a movement as clean as that of a watch
—with a movement scientific and reliable—The Maltese Cross of the Silent Empire.

THIS movement is perfect in every respect and is but another example of the Empire way of going better than the previous best. It is cut out of the best cast steel, correctly hardened and tempered, and this in combination with the special mechanical means provided for ease and secure adjustment ensures the best possible results and maximum durability. Constructed on modern scientific principles, the movement is absolutely reliable, and although ample provision is made for readjustment no attention is required in this respect for many years. It is entirely enclosed in an oil bath with an inspection window fitted in the cover. Remember the cross movement is the heart of your machine. If this is at all faulty you will never get satisfactory results. The Silent Empire is your guarantee for perfect projection.

This is the last of a series of four advertisements dealing with the distinctive features of the Silent Empire. A special booklet de luxe, "Perfect Projection for the Picture Palace." fully describes them. Send your card for a copy. Let us tell you where one is running in your district.

tors are making a hard struggle for existence, it surely cannot be argued that herein is proof of the decline of the picture theatre. The true answer is supplied in the inevitable law of supply and demand, and undoubtedly the penalty of excessive competition will have to be paid. One thing is certain—the picture theatres will in the future enjoy the same large and increasing patronage.

There is no need for us to enter the lists in defence of the cinematograph—it can take care of itself. No better or surer sign of prosperity can be found than in the healthy and vigorous condition of the Trade to-day. In the early days it had to fight hard for recognition; it encountered opposition from all quarters, and had to overcome the prejudices of those in authority. But from all this the industry has emerged stronger and firmer of purpose than ever. Its policy is directed by three capable associations, in whose hands may be safely trusted the future of the cinema trade.

TRADE TOPICS.

We are informed that the famous Ambrosio Company, of Turin, have entered into arrangements with a well-known firm to handle their products in future throughout the world, and, moreover, that Messrs. A. E. Hübsch and Co., Limited, have secured the agency for all English-speaking countries.

Notwithstanding the gorgeous pageants of Indian life with which Mr. Chas. Urban has made us all so familiar, no subjects dealing with Indian romance and mythology have as yet been presented in this country on the screen. Some two years ago Mr. D. G. Phâlke, a well-known artist of Bombay, came over to this country and studied the moving picure industry in every phase, and in this connection he acknowledges in very warm terms his indebtedness to, among others, Mr. Cecil Hepworth, who invited him to Walton and gave him much valuable advice and information. Upon his return to India, Mr. Phâlke, who took back with him considerable plant, found that he had very different conditions to contend with, owing in great measure to the hot climate and the difficulty of securing the services of suitable artistes, operators and others requisite for the efficient equipment of his enterprise. However, by diligent study and perseverance each obstacle was gradually surmounted, and eventually, in April, 1913, his first drama, "Harishchandra," was produced, and met with very considerable favour. Mr. Phâlke has since screened another drama, entitled "Mohini," and very shortly a third one is to be placed to his credit, bearing the title of "Nala-Damayanti," which has been produced at very considerable cost. These subjects have been taken from Indian mythology, in which Mr. Phâlke intends to specialise in many of his future productions.

Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant have frequently introduced the cinematograph as an aid to their illusions, but rarely, we think, has the cinematograph itself provided one of the principal features of entertainment at that well-known house of amusement. "Talking to the Picture," the title of the turn in question, provides excellent material for Mr. Harry May Hemsley's ventriloquial and acting powers as, whilst appearing as a principal character on the screen, he actually provides the voices for the trio of pictorial artistes.

The scene pictures the dining-room of a house, with a mischievous child of about eight years, and a baby of eighteen months. A conversation ensues between the elder child and her father, Mr. Hemsley, who is seated in front and at one side of the screen. The result, as one may gather, is particularly novel and decidedly interesting, combining, as it does, the real actor with that of the screen. Mr. Hemsley impersonates his daughter's voice with extreme cleverness, the lip movements being in perfect synchronism. The conversation that takes place is a particularly lively one, the capricious daughter being no less witty with her tongue than she is agile of foot. The illusion is considerably heightened by Mr. Hemsley in person ultimately rising from his seat at the side of the screen, walking behind and appearing photographically in the picture.

We understand that Mr. Hemsley is arranging for a tour to commence at the completion of his contract with Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant, and those managers who wish to feature this novel act are recommended to communicate with Mr. Hemsley, who is the author and proprietor of the film.

We had the pleasure of a visit last week from Mr. Kurt W. Linn, lately of New York, who is opening permanent offices in London at 29a, Charing Cross Road, where he will act as European representative of Messrs. Pathé Frères, of New York. Mr. Linn will deal for Messrs. Pathé Frères (U.S.A.) as examiner and purchaser of films upon the British and Continental markets. He is open to buy good negatives of every kind, and will be glad to hear from firms with films not already disposed of in America.

"I am delighted to be acquainted with London," said Mr. Linn, "and although the work incidental to opening my offices has prevented me hitherto from seeing as much as I want to, I already like it very much indeed. I intend to make a scientific study of Trade conditions, and of the entire European market, and I want to buy the very best films to be had."

Mr. Linn is already housed in comfortable offices at the above-mentioned address, and he is expecting his telephone installation to be completed "at any moment."

Dr. C. H. Heydemann is now engaged upon a lecture tour with the Carnegie Museum Expedition pictures of Alaska and Siberia. Last week he was at the Maida Vale Theatre; this week he is at the New Picture House, Bradford; and the subsequent weeks he will be in Manchester, Newcastle and Sunderland respectively, with numerous other places to follow.

Mr. W. A. Fenning, of the Fenning Film Service, Limited, has made arrangements to open a branch at Liverpool. He has, so he informs us, secured an excellent place at 5, Slater Street, extending to Wood Street, in the great Mersey City, and with contractors hastening toward completion, expects to effect an early opening. Needless to state, a first-class private showroom is included in the capacious buildings, and here local exhibitors will have an opportunity of seeing such fine exclusives as the W. W. Jacobs and the Sherlock Holmes series. In all respects the house will form a replica of the London business, and we wish Mr. Fenning all the success he deserves upon its opening.

Mr. Norman Whitten, of the General Film Supply, Dublin, advises us that his firm have been compelled, owing to increase of business, to take additional premises at 17, Great Brunswick Street. These are at present being fitted up, and will include laboratories with the latest machinery for film development, also a very fine showroom. He asks us, also, to state that the firm would be pleased to secure the Irish agency for any London house, or for apparatus concerning the Trade not already represented in the Emerald Isle. Local exhibitors are requested to note that the new 'phone number will be "Dublin 2444," as distinct from the Talbot Street premises. There should be an opportunity for some fine local "topicals" when everything is in going order at "General's" new premises.

The X.L. Exclusive and Feature Film Company request us to state that the address of their South Wales agents—S. W. Exclusive and Feature Film Company—is Quay Street, Cardiff.

We had the pleasure one morning last week of seeing several further instalments of the Selig Company's huge serial film, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and we can assure our readers that the high qualities of the first part, which we reviewed last week, are well sustained and even surpassed in the following parts. The film is particularly remarkable for its spectacular scenes, and for its wonderfully contrived pictures of Indian life. Its production must have involved the erection of several complete cities, and it certainly affords a striking example of the film-maker's extraordinary enterprise.

In the Companies Winding-up Court on Tuesday, Mr. Justice Astbury again had before him the petition of the New Agency Film Company for the compulsory winding up of the Big A Features, Limited. The petition was directed to stand over last week, his lordship having expressed doubts as to the correct service of the notice of the petition.

Mr. Rowlands, for the petitioners, now produced affidavits, proving that regular service had been made, and the Company not appearing his lordship made the usual order.

Certain contracts entered into by Big A Features, Limited, with the Zenith Film Company, have also been annulled by order of the High Court.

As will be seen in our advertisement columns, Miss Lucille Love ("The Girl of Mystery,") starts to-day (Thursday) on a tour of the provinces. Miss Love will visit the principal towns en route, the tour embracing the Eastern and Midland counties to Scotland, and down the west coast to Devonshire and Cornwall. Mr. Lavine, the publicity director of the Trans-Atlantic Company, is controlling the tour, while Captain Sarll is responsible for the camera.

We understand that Mr. Will Day is now engaged upon the preparation of a complete history of the cinematograph industry from its earliest beginnings. Mr. Day hopes that the work, which necessarily entails an enormous amount of study and research, may be ready by the opening of the forthcoming Cinematograph Exhibition.

The most up-to-date form of humorous film, that of the animated cartoon, is now quite a standing dish at many theatres, and we are pleased to hear that Cherry Kearton, Limited, are participating in the harvest. Their "Kine-Quips" are certainly remarkably amusing, and being "on tap" twice weekly, are an excellent addition to the programme. The fact that the series is on show at the Alhambra will afford some little idea of the popularity this notable issue has already achieved. They present a very bright and agreeable form of pictorial fare, and as we have said, such issues are forming a new field for the black and white artist and the cartoonist.

We very much regret to hear that M. Fabre, the famous entomologist, is lying seriously ill at his residence at Avignon.

Mr. George H. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, Limited, writing from the London offices, wishes to state that the company are not, and never have been, in the market for scenarios, and requests writers to kindly refrain from sending same to his offices. The firm will not, in any case, hold themselves responsible unless stamped addressed envelopes are enclosed. Mr. Smith is, in fact, being inundated with plots daily, mostly minus stamps or envelope, and has some thousands on hand owing to this cause.

The Co-operative Cinematograph Company, Limited, are giving a Trade show of "The Lure of London," at the Theatre Royal, Swansea, to-morrow (Friday) at 11 o'clock.

The Capitol Film Company wish members of the Trade to note that Mr. A. Sydney is no longer associated with the company. By the way, the firm have taken over the premises lately occupied by the Brockliss Cinemachinery, Limited, and are moving in next week.

We regret to learn that Mr. Harry Battersby is seriously indisposed, and his many friends will join with us in wishing him a speedy and complete recovery.

Messrs. Cross's Pictures, Limited, request us to state that they have changed the title of their exclusive, "For Another's Crime," to "A Burden of Crime."

An excellent opportunity is afforded budding picture playwrights in this week's issue of Ideas, in conjunction with Lucrative Films, Limited, who are offering £30 in prizes—£20 for the best film scenario sent in, which will be produced by Lucrative Films, and published in Ideas, and ten consolation prizes of £1 each.

At the meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday, Mr. Yeo, the new M.P. for Poplar, asked the Chairman of the Theatres and Music-halls Committee whether it was proposed to convert disused school premises in Brunswick Road, Poplar, into a cinematograph theatre, and if so, whether the Committee, in dealing with the application for a licence would take into consideration the serious annoyance to patients at Poplar Hospital which would be caused by the proximity of a cinematograph theatre. Further, did the Chairman not think, in view of the dangerous nature of the street crossing at this point, that the presence of crowds awaiting admission to the theatre would tend to add to the number of patients who would need hospital treatment, as well as retard the recovery of those who were already in the hospital.

The Chairman replied that the school premises were to be converted into a cinematograph theatre. Notice of this intention had been exhibited by the intending licensee in the usual way, and no representations had been made by the hospital authorities. As to whether the gathering of audiences would tend to street accidents, he could only reply in the historic words of the present Prime Minister, "Wait and see!" In reply to a further question, the Chairman said representations from the hospital authorities would receive attention.

We are invariably pleased to hear from our friends overseas, and note a letter, couched in cheery terms, from Mr. Peter C. Naylor, formerly London representative for African Films, Limited, who, writing from Lorenco Marques, informs us that he is on the way to India. He arrives at Bombay on the 28th, and is to open up a film hiring branch for the African Films Trust. His intention is to visit all the principal towns overland, en route to Calcutta, where he will make his headquarters. Having arranged for about a million feet of films from London, Mr. Naylor should make an excellent start in his new sphere. In conveying his good wishes to friends in the Trade, we think that we may take the liberty, on their behalf, of wishing him good luck in the great empire whither he has journeyed after his brief spell of relaxation.

One of the finest sets of postcards we have seen in connection with a film production is that issued by Morgana Films in relation to their release, "Captain Blanco." The views are actual scenes from the film, and are most artistic in character. As a foretaste of what is to follow, we are pleased to welcome this notable little package, and shall await with a keen interest the first exhibitions of the film. A signed photo, by the way, of Giovanni Grasso gives an additional value to this smart piece of publicity.

Mr. David Harvie, a well-known press photographer, attached to the staff of the Daily Sketch, met with a fatal motor accident on Monday last while returning from Aldershot, where he had been taking photographs of the army manœuvres. The news of Mr. Harvie's death in such tragic circumstances was received with profound regret by his many friends in journalistic and photographic circles.

"CINEMACHINERY HOUSE."

The announcement made in our advertising columns last week that the business of Brockliss Cinemachinery, Limited, had been purchased by the Bioscope, Film and Supply Company, Limited, led us to make further inquiries of this young and enterprising firm, and accordingly we directed our steps to "Cinemachinery House," 7, Lisle Street, Leicester Square, to have a talk with the directors of the company.

"Yes," said Mr. Facey, to whom we addressed our inquiries, "it's quite correct. We—Mr. de la Cour, Mr. Thearle, and myself—met in conclave last week, and everything is satisfactorily settled. We are taking over the entire business, goodwill, etc., of the Brockliss Cinemachinery, Limited, and as you see, we've already started on orders. Then our supplies department is busy too, and at the moment, in addition to other work, we are engaged in completely rewiring the Palais de Luxe, Wood Green, and the Imperial, West Green, Tottenham.

"Are we satisfied? Quite. We are making arrangements to take over the whole of these premises, which, when all the alterations are completed, ought to become one of the best equipped houses in the Trade."

We were then handed over to Mr. Thearle, who conducted us on a tour of the premises. A special department under Mr. Thearle's charge is that of floral decoration, and we learned that the magnificent new theatre at Finchley—the Bohemia Winter Gardens and Cinema—had been specially equipped with decorations supplied by the company and installed under Mr. Thearle's supervision.

The stockroom was a veritable hive of industry, and we were informed that machines were selling exceptionally well, two having been supplied to theatres at Windsor and Worcester.

On the same floor as the stockroom is the projection theatre, which is being fitted up in a very comfortable manner, and we were assured that every little detail that would make for comfort and convenience will not be forgotten.

A word or two regarding the directors of the firm may be of interest to our readers. Mr. Facey, of course, is one of the best known men in the Trade. Indeed, he confessed to us that he could hardly remember the number of years he had been associated with the industry. For nearly seven years Mr. Facey was with the house of Brockliss, and he paid a warm tribute to Mr. Brockliss, his old chief. Mr. de la Cour is the proprietor of the Dulwich Cinema, and a director of several cinema companies, including the Palais de Luxe, Wood Green; while Mr. Thearle, who also was one of Messrs. Brockliss' staff, brings with him many years' experience of the entertainment profession. We congratulate Messrs. de la Cour, Facey, and Thearle on their big deal, and sincerely trust that their company will continue on a successful career.

FILMS AT THE RUBBER EXHIBITION.

A feature of the Rubber Exhibition to be held in London, from June 2nd to July 7th, will be the use of the cinematograph to show the many phases of the industry. No charge for admission to the various halls will be made, and among the countries and firms who have already arranged for the display of films are the Governments of British Malaya and Brazil. Their pictures will show the method of production and preparation of rubber, and take the visitor through the rubber-producing districts. The North British Rubber Company will illustrate the process of manufacture in their Edinburgh works.

NOTES FROM SURREY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

At a meeting of the Music and Dancing Licensing Committee, held at Kingston last week, two new applications were granted under the Cinematograph Act. Mr. E. Lanchberry obtained a licence for premises at Cranleigh, and Mr. Joseph T. Mears secured one for the handsome new theatre to be built in Hill Street, Richmond. These licences, of course, were granted for six days only, Sunday opening being discountenanced by the Surrey Committee. At the same meeting cinematograph licences were transferred from Mr. L. Ross, of Coulsdon, to Mr. Isidore Barnett, and from the late Mr. H. Hilkowitz, of the Empire Cinema, Richmond, to Mr. W. Hinde.

Though Sunday opening is discouraged in the county, it seems that in certain isolated cases the wishes of the Licensing Committee in this respect are not altogether respected. This incidentally led to the prosecution of a licensee at Wimbledon last week, when a fine of £5, with costs, was imposed. On Sunday, April 26th, a visit was made to the hall by the police, who asserted that on testing four of the films being used they found three of them to be inflammable, this being a breach of the Act, the house not being licensed for the display of such films. For the defence it was urged that the use of the films in question—only one inflammable film was used, it was contended—was quite accidental, as it was a rule observed by the manager that a programme of non-inflammable films only was ordered for exhibition on Sundays. This is the first prosecution under the Act in Surrey.

The Talbot Theatre continues to be a popular rendezvous at Richmond. With the cold, damp weather during the latter part of the week the excellent programme formed a capital indoor attraction. W. W. Jacobs' "The Bo'sun's Mate" was the leading feature. To this was added "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," and a most appropriate travel picture displayed the glories of the Thames from Oxford to Windsor. This week "A Tragedy in the Clouds" heads the bill.

At most of the local theatres arrangements have been made to show pictures of the Derby as soon as possible after the race. This is always a popular feature and hundreds who are not usually picture theatre patrons never fail to look in. At some of the houses the result is also being thrown on the screen immediately after the event.

The management of the Cinem Palace, Kingston, never fail to provide their patrons with a well-selected programme. "Whimsical Threads of Destiny," "Before the Last Leaves Fall" and "The Invisible Hand" have been leading features of the week-end programme, and this week a bid for popularity is being made with "A Fatal Likeness" and "The Man from the West."

At the Kingston Coliseum Mr. Knight, the manager, is re-exhibiting "Alone with the Devil." He describes his theatre as "Kingston's coolest cinema." The alliteration certainly has an attraction, and he adds that it is the coolest place in which to see the Derby. There is decidedly much to be said for the comfortable seating and attractive appearance of the interior.

LINCOLNSHIRE NOTES.

I mentioned a little time ago that a company was being formed for the purpose of erecting a second picture house at Spalding, the plans of which have already been passed by the Council. Information now comes to hand that the proprietors of the Spalding Picture House (Messrs. G. A. Howden and W. White) have decided to convert their popular house into a limited liability company. The prospectus will shortly be issued, and £1 shares offered to the public, with a limit in the first instance of an allotment of five shares. It is confidently expected these will be speedily taken. The directors of the company, which will be known as "Spalding Picture House, Limited," are Mr. G. Aspland Howden (managing director), Messrs. G. J. Barrell, C. L. Harvey, E. Milne, and H. W. White.

All that is best in the cinema world continues to find its way to Spalding, "Antony and Cleopatra," "The Iron Man," "The Hour of Dawn," "The Antique Brooch," "Hearts and Flowers" and "His Sister's Kids" being screened during the last fortnight. Quite a feature of the Picture House are the delightful violin and 'cello solos frequently rendered by members of Mr. Wood's orchestra.

Mr. Will Gadsby, proprietor and manager of the Regent Hall, Lincoln, is meeting with much success. I called at this well-conducted house recently, and found the building packed with an enthusiastic audience. Mr. Gadsby has been catering for the amusement of the public for many years, but it is only recently that he started in the cinema industry, and he informs me that he is well satisfied with the venture. Two Gaumont chronos show a fine picture, and the programmes are well chosen. "The Shadow of Guilt," "Master Crook Outwitted," "In the Firelight" and "Tell-Tale Photograph" have recently met with much favour. Mr. Gadsby is always glad to hear from the Trade of anything good to put before his patrons.

I dropped in at the Electric, High Street, Grantham, during one of the hot evenings we experienced last week and found this splendidly managed house delightfully cool and fresh, and the programme one of the best I have seen for a long time. Foremost on the list was "Orders Under Seal." Mr. W. Longhurst celebrated Empire Day by an all-British programme the first three days of this week, the special exclusive being "Old St. Paul's." "Back to Life" is Thursday's special, followed next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by "Sixty Years a Queen." The latter film was screened at the Theatre Royal a week or two ago, but it is confidently anticipated big business will result from a second visit. The "Gaumont Graphic" is a popular "standing dish" at the Electric.

There was a packed house on Saturday evening at the King's, Grantham, where Mr. R. F. C. Sanderson continues to place good programmes before his patrons. "The Children's Hour," a very pleasing film, and "A Fiend and His Friend" were received with much enthusiasm. "Alone with the Devil" is the week-end feature, and Mr. Sanderson announces the latest of the "Fantomas" series.

Mr. Howden shows great resourcefulness at the Electric, Boston. Following "Antony and Cleopatra" and "The Iron Man," good houses last week greatly enjoyed the fine detective drama, "The Antique Brooch" and "At the Hour of Dawn." "A Tragedy in the Clouds" and "The Wastrel" are this week's stars.

NORTHERN NOTES.

Mr. Dixon Scott has relinquished the proprietorship of the Kino Electric, Jarrow-upon-Tyne, and has sold the theatre to Mr. Richard Thornton, the well-known music-hall proprietor of the Moss-Empire tours. It is Mr. Thornton's intention to continue running the Kino as a picture theatre for some time, until certain alterations which he has arranged to have carried out have been completed. When these have been made the programme will cease to be of pictures only, and will consist of varieties and pictures. To mark his gratitude for the hearty support accorded him by the Jarrow public during his ownership of the theatre, Mr. Dixon Scott gave the proceeds of two evening performances last week to local charities, and on their behalf he raised a substantial sum.

The National Musicians' Union endeavoured to win over the support of the Northumberland miners in its fight with the cinematograph exhibitors in the county. The protest of the Musicians' Union against the employment of non-Union members in local orchestras has been given publicity in the minutes of the Northumberland Miners' Association Executive Committee. The complaint made appears to have been that the exhibitors were employing members of the Miners' Union as musicians outside of their ordinary working time in the pits, and it was alleged that these part-time musicians were being paid a less salary than the standard rate of wage recognised by the Musicians' Union. The Miners' Executive has replied to the effect that it has assured the agent of the Musicians' Union that it strongly condemns such action on the part of cinematograph exhibitors and miners, as in its opinion it is disloyal to the spirit of trade unionism. The Committee also states that it is of the opinion that the members of the Northumberland Miners' Association would refuse to patronise such places of amusement where this was done if the facts were made known to them.

When up in the Consett district last week, I paid a visit to the Royal Picture House there, and found the management in every way pleased with the degree of patronage they were receiving. The lessees of the theatre are Messrs Smart and Todd, and they cater for their public with very attractive programmes. "The Thirst for Gold" and "The Grip of Circumstances" were two of the outstanding films, and there were, in addition to these, a number of excellent comedies and travel pictures, which were highly appreciated by the audiences.

The East-end of Newcastle-upon-Tyne is well catered for in the way of cinematograph theatres, and the proprietors of these have little cause for grumbling, in a general way. It might be that, having regard to capital cost and establishment charges, some of the smaller halls in the suburbs are given quite as good a turnover as the palatial buildings in the heart of the city.

At the Sun Theatre there was a good show of films, in which the leading items were "Black Cloud," "Blinded Heart," "The Norwood Case," and "Father."—Not far away the Raby Picture Hall was showing "When the Earth Trembled," "The Girl in the House-boat," "The Black Ball," "The Speed King," and a strong list of comedies, whilst at the Minerva were "An Indian's Honour," "The Juvenile Kidnappers," "The Efficacy of Prayer" and "Rival Fishermen." Surely a wide choice in a narrow area.—Mr. George Westgarth has been appointed manager of the Raby Hall, upon the lessee, Mr. Lauder, taking over the management of the Newcastle Picture House for the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited. Mr. Westgarth is a brother-in-law to Mr. Lauder.

Long films of great dramatic force are the special favourites at the Picturedrome, and Mr. George Besford had "The Tempest" and "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves" both in the one show. In the programme for the second half of the week he included "Give Us This Day —," and the "Joining of the Oceans" film was a very popular item, too. —The Brinkburn Theatre, one of Mr. McHarg's group, showed "Detective" Finn," "The Price of a Ruby," "The Streets of New York," "Heartease," and a number of comedies, and for the excellence of his programme Mr. G. Thompson, the manager, received numerous congratulations.

In the centre of the city "'Neath the Lion's Paw" was a great draw at several of the theatres.—Mr. F. W. Wolters featured "Jane Eyre" at the Queen's Hall, and at the Newcastle Picture House many visitors went specially to see a series of golfing pictures, taken at the open championship meeting, at Sandwich.—Golf of a different sort was also a lively attraction at the Grainger, where were shown Harry Lauder and Neil Kenyon playing the game under very unorthodox conditions. Newcastle is a strong golfing centre, and these films were a particularly enticing attraction to many of the male folk, who would probably go to see them when they would not find the time to see the dramatic and comic programmes shown in the ordinary course.

DANISH NOTES.

Copenhagen, May 16th.

Besides Danish films, American and French are mostly exhibited here, German very few, and now and again some Italian. The modern drama up to about 1,200 metres is liked best, and here just as everywhere else it seems to be difficult to get hold of a really humorous film.

Some of the manufacturing companies run their own cinemas, which, as a rule, do not hold more than from 300 to 400 people; consequently long films over 1,500 metres, or thereabout, cannot be screened in these theatres, the Palace Theatre, with its seating capacity of 2,500 people, being the only place in this town for long films.

A co-operative movement has seized the film business in this country, and a lot of provincial people are about to start a co-operative picture house, or rather "ambulant" cinemas spread all over the country, carrying the films from one place to another by motor-cars which will be used to produce the power wherever this is not available. These co-operative societies will buy the films direct from the manufacturers, through a head office, and if started and managed successfully, they are likely to interfere in some way or other with the arrangements existing at present between the renters.

HOW FAMOUS FILMS ARE MADE.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. E. S. PORTER AND MR. HUGH FORD.

That marvellous artistic organisation, The Famous Players Film Company, have set a standard in the production of picture plays during their comparatively short existence which many far older firms are still unable to approach. Everyone is familiar with this company's works—many of them have been amongst the greatest masterpieces yet forthcoming from America—and there is no need to reiterate the almost innumerable points of staging, acting, construction and general production, first seen in these films, which are gradually being adopted by other manufacturers.

In view of the great importance, artistic quite as much as commercial, of the Famous Players Film Company, it was with deep interest that we met last Friday Mr. Edwin S. Porter, their well-known technical director, who is so intimately connected with the creative side of their work, and Mr. Hugh Ford, the well-known theatrical producer, who has lately joined their ranks to bring his genius to bear upon the picture play. Quiet, unassuming, and almost shy when asked to talk of their own achievements, we were compelled, in gleaning the following interview, to get each to tell us of the other where personal matters were concerned, though in questions of artistic principle these two wonderful American gentlemen, who have both done so much for the development of the dramatic art, both on stage and screen, were unanimous in their opinions.

MR. E. S. PORTER.

The object of Messrs. Porter and Ford's brief visit to London on Friday was to witness the "Command" performance at His Majesty's Theatre of "The Silver King," the famous melodrama which they are adapting for the cinematograph.

"Our mission in Europe," commenced Mr. Ford, "is to produce big 'feature' films for the Famous Players Company, and to establish permanent studios both in England and in France. At present we are working in France upon our first picture, 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' from the well-known play of the same name, with the famous American actor, Mr. James K. Hackett as the Duc d'Orléans. The French incidents in the piece are being taken at such places as Versailles, Fontainebleau, etc., and when we have finished these we shall come over here to do the English incidents. Our plan is to take every scene on the original spot as far as possible in order to secure local colour. For the English parts of 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' for example, we shall visit such places as Bath, whilst Hall Caine's 'Eternal City,' upon which we shall be working later, will be taken, with Italian artistes in the smaller parts, in Rome. Miss Mary Pickford will join us in Europe shortly, and we shall journey to all sorts of places with her, including Scotland, where we shall produce an adaptation of Barrie's 'Little Minister.' We consider that there has not been sufficient attention paid in the past to detail and to exactitude in matters of costume, manners and characterisation. Our method is to visit any country that the scenes in a picture may call for. One of our films, for instance, includes incidents played in Los Angeles, New York, and London. No, I can't tell you how soon we shall finish 'Monsieur Beaucaire.' We don't fix dates for anything. One cannot turn out really good films by the clock; to make so many pictures a week is 'manufacturing,' not 'producing.' In the matter of artistes, one of our latest 'captures' is Mdlle. Gaby Deslys, who will probably appear in a play specially written for her."

Then we asked Mr. Ford to tell us something of Mr. Porter, seizing upon the opportunity offered by the latter gentleman's momentary absence from the room to talk about him behind his back.

"Mr. Porter," replied Mr. Ford, "is the inventor of about 50 per cent. of the mechanical devices in cameras and projectors used all over the world. He was the inventor of the 'Simplex' machine, and the originator of many devices now generally employed in scenarios, such as the 'cut back,' and the incorporation of the 'vision' in the construction of a picture. The first real picture play, as we know it to-day, was made by him in 1899, when he was working with Mr. Edison. Its title was 'The Life of an American Fireman.' Just at present Mr. Porter is experimenting with colour cinematography and stereoscopic effect."

Mr. Porter, returning at this moment, we changed the object of our attack by leading him on to speak of Mr. Ford—a subject on which he was ready to discourse with enthusiasm.

"When the Famous Players Company was organised," said Mr. Porter, "the ideal which we held before us was to 'get out of the rut.' We realised that a large proportion of the pictures made at that time were being turned out, so to speak, by the yard by 'stock producers,' who eschewed originality and imagination and worked almost entirely by precedent on purely conventional lines. Seeing that the art of the picture play was still an undeveloped infant, this was not good enough for us, and we accordingly recruited some of the best stage producers in America to 'come over and help us'—men of originality and high intelligence who would be able to grasp the possibilities of this wonderful new form of dramatic expression, and make the most of them. We have the services of five of the representative producers in America, whilst Mr. Ford, who has now joined us, is one of America's greatest producers. Mr. Ford has been producing for more than fifteen years, among his recent successes being: 'Joseph and His Brethren,' 'The Garden of Allah,' 'The Daughter of Heaven,' 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch,' 'The White Man,' 'Alias Jimmy Valentine' and 'Potash and Perlmutter,' many of which he produced in England as well as in America. It is very seldom indeed that you find a producer with two or three big successes running simultaneously at important theatres. But Mr. Ford could boast such an achievement, if boasting were his habit, which it is not."

"Upon what lines do I consider the picture play will develop in the future? Well, I think the perfection of colour photography and stereoscopic projection are the next biggest steps to be taken. We must get into the colour of actual life, and out of black and white. No, I don't feel very deep interest in 'talking pictures.' They cannot be perfect until the phonograph has been perfected, and even then I doubt whether they would ever be a great success. They are outside the art of the picture play, which is essentially a silent medium.

"Among the most necessary developments is the author's side of the picture play. As soon as the classical and popular modern books and plays have been exhausted, producers will be compelled to rely a great deal more than they do at present upon good original work, of which, as you know, there is still a very great dearth. There is no doubt that the prices offered hitherto have tended largely to restrain the growth of picture playwriting as a separate art, but we are now making sufficiently large offers for original scenarios to induce really skilled authors to enter the film world, and I believe that before long the big writers will come into this new field quite as readily as the big actors and producers already have. The time is coming when important film plays will tour the theatres after the manner of stage plays, and then authors will get their royalties on the box-office receipts just as the ordinary dramatists do at present. This will solve what is now a great objection in the eyes of many writers, and I must say that personally I believe the percentage system will be the ultimate method of working.

"We have no trouble now in finding artistes, especially during the summer season. The prejudice against the cinematograph, once so strong in theatrical circles, has been entirely removed by the influx of 'stars' into films. Yes, I consider that 'legitimate' experience is very valuable, indeed, almost essential, for the picture actor. It takes very little time for the practised 'legitimate' player to become 'camera wise' as we call it. He already has repose, manner, the knowledge how to wear clothes and the ability to portray emotions without distorting his features out of all recognition. The rest is largely a question of adaptation."

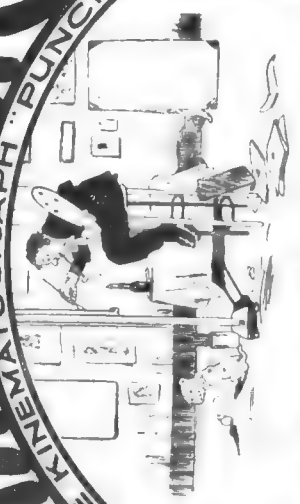
Things have been rather quiet in the local cinema world during the past fortnight. Nothing further has yet been decided with regard to the terms on which the Corporation supply the picture theatres with current for power purposes, but with such an able spokesman as Mr. G. Yate Ashwell to present the case for further revision, it goes without saying that the matter is not being allowed to rest.

A change in the conduct of the Picturedrome, Edward Street, is inaugurated this week, the picture programme being supplemented by varieties. This popular hall, which has no rival within a wide district, is now under the supervision of Mr. Edward Hardiman, with Mr. Perce Farmer as manager.

"Germinal" made a great hit last week at Mr. George Bloch's theatres, the Imperial and Coronation. Other recent films have included "A Question of Right," "Daniel," "Love's Sunset," "The Mirror of Death," "Too Late" and "In Mid-Atlantic."



Mr. Ashwell has had some notable films at the Duke of York's Theatre, among them being "Orders Under Seal," "Love, the Victor" and "The Murdock Trial," "The Millionairess" and "Stolen Papers." Special attention is paid to "effects" at this theatre, with strikingly realistic results.

The conversion of the Empire Novelty Theatre in West Street into a cinema rifle range, to which I alluded in my last notes, has been carried into effect. The new venture had an auspicious send-off, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Berry Cusack-Smith, K.C.M.G., who commands the 1st Home Counties' Brigade, R.F.A., performing the opening ceremony and referring to "Life Targets" as a valuable invention which he could recommend to everyone. Mr. W. Harold Speer, who is responsible for the introduction of the novelty to the town, announced that he had received letters from Lord Roberts and Lord Charles Beresford, wishing him every success.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

FOR THE LOBBY.

The American Company (London) Limited, inform us that they have now on hand a large number of half-plate photos of their principal artistes which are eminently suitable for lobby display. They are for both the "Flying A" and "Beauty" companies, and will be given to applicants in rotation. "First come first served."

ANOTHER LUBIN.

Lawrence McCloskey, editor of the Lubin scenario department, has added another good writer to his staff. Chandlee had before made his mark with essays, and submitting two scripts to the Lubin Manufacturing Company, the editor realised the value of his work, and added him to the scenario staff. Chandlee had before made his mark with stories freely accepted by other film companies, but will now give his entire attention to the Lubin Company.

RADIUM IN A DRAMA.

The use of radium in a motion picture is an up-to-date novelty which is exploited in a forthcoming single-reel "Reliance" detective drama. It will be entitled "The Stolen Radium," and is the second of a series of detective dramas. The first will be "A Pair of Cuffs" and the New Majestic Company, of 5, Gerrard Street, will show both subjects.

FEATURES AT LEICESTER.

An unusually large number of exclusives figure in last week's programmes. Prominent among them the "The Mystery of Three Faces" and "The Accusing Skeleton," showing at the recently opened Tudor Cinema, which has a seating capacity of 1,250.—The Coliseum, with its 2,000 seats, had as its leading features "The Watchdog of the Deep" and "A Chest of Fortune." The very fine orchestral renderings here are an undoubted attraction.—"The Streets of New York" made an exclusive appearance at Clayton's Picturedrome, David Copperfield" doing similar service for its near neighbour, the Imperial.—At Olympia of which Mr. Frank D. Gray is the manager, "On Secret Service" played a dominent part. Old age pensioners are admitted free to the matinées. —"'Midst Raging Beasts" and "A Game of Cards" were of outstanding interest at the Empire—Other top-liners in "the outer circle" included "The Redemption of Steve Harding" at the Boulevard, "Hearts of Women" at the Belgrave Cinema, and "Love's Sunset" at the Knighton Cinema. Here, too, the racing drama, "The Filly," made a big appeal.—In the centre of the town the premier houses are going strong, "The First Law of Nature" at the Silver Street Electric, and "Lawyer Quince" at the Picture House being in the front rank of good things. The W. W. Jacob series are having a very successful run just now at the Picture House, Granby Street, "Lawyer Quince" for the week just concluded having been much appreciated. For this week "Bosun's Mate" is a leading feature—another being the Sherlock Holmes item, "The Adventure of the Copper Beeches."—At High Street Mr. Kingstone Trollope features "A Legacy of Vengeance."—"True Irish Hearts" is a dominant feature of Silver Street, where "The First Law of Nature" has just concluded a gratifying week's run. Ices and afternoon tea, supplied free in the higher-priced seats, are a much appreciated attention at this popular house.

RETURNING TO PICTURES.

Mr. Manville Morton, whom it will be remembered opened the King's Hall, Dover, the Globe, Clapham, and other theatres, has just been appointed manager of the Park Palace, South Street, Sheffield.

PRIZES OFFERED.

We are informed that a competition with cash prizes for the eleven best scenarios sent in, will be announced in Ideas in its issue of June 5th. The first prize winner's effort will be produced in film by the Lucrative Films, Limited.

ON THE OILFIELDS.

Ever foremost in their efforts to secure full realism as well as technical detail, we are informed that in order to get actual true local colour for their two-reel feature, "The Widow's Investment," the American Company journeyed to the exact locations stated in the story of the film, "Santa Maria, California." Some exceedingly fine panoramic views are included in this issue.

SEEN AT SHEFFIELD.

The coming autumn will witness the advent of several additions to the numerous halls in the city. Amongst these contemplated and in course of erection are the Greystones Palace, Ecclesall Road, the Lansdowne in London Road, and others situate respectively in Abbeydale Road, William Street, and Wincobank. There are also two shows to be erected within a stone's throw of each other in the Walkley district. The latter has already a show, the Walkley Palace to wit, which, by the way, has been sold by the proprietress, Mrs. M. L. Morpeth, to a syndicate, who are dismantling the building and intend reopening on the most modern lines.—A visit to the Woodseats Palace resulted in a report of excellent business for Mr. O'Neill. The music is interpreted in a most pleasing manner by a trio of instrumentalists. "Queen's Love" and "Expert's Secret" were the outstanding items of a good programme.—Continued success has been the keynote at the Electric Palace, Heeley. Mr. W. W. Austin has now organised a cricket club composed of members of his staff, and the opening match of the season will be played during the week against Clayton's Bioscope team. —For the convenience of patrons, Mr. H. Bushell is having plans prepared for the provision of a new entrance to the Heeley Coliseum which will obviate the climbing of stairs. The organ installed is provits worth and the resulting effects are much appreciated by packed audiences.—Dinnington, a colliery town of but a few thousand souls, possesses two picture halls and with the consequent competition the public benefits in the excellence of the programmes. Since the advent of the later hall, varieties have been introduced at both shows. The Palace, Dinnington, under the management of Mr. J. England, has had a new stage erected. "The Curse of War" and "The Golden Pathway" lead the way. Business is of the first water.—The Lyric Theatre, Dinnington, features "Lord of the Jungle" to good audiences, who also appreciated the variety items. The management has been changed of late the show now being under the control of Mr Butler, late of Blyth.—Bourne-Lyne, vice Mr. Allen.

EVIDENCE BY "PICTURES."

Among the many recent developments in the use of moving pictures, it is interesting to learn that the aid of films was recently taken advantage of in one of the civil courts in America, in order to illustrate the action of an automatic shoe machine, which was the subject of a patent case. How far this innovation may be carried only the future will tell, but it would without doubt facilitate the hearing of complicated cases of a technical nature, if moving pictures were utilised instead of long explanations by counsel.

SUNDAY OPENING CRITICISED.

At a meeting of the Hampshire County Council the General Purposes Committee were strongly criticised for having granted two Sunday cinematographic licences at Eastleigh.—Alderman J. G. Wood said it would be another step in the direction of secularising the Sabbath. He moved that it be an instruction to the committee in granting future licences to insert an addition prohibiting the opening of the premises on Sundays.—Mr. H. H. Culme-Seymour, J.P., seconded, and said that the idea that the halls kept people out of the public-houses was a delusive one. If folks wanted to go to the public-house they would leave the shows early and crowd in the public-houses at the end of the evening. It was also hard on the employees that they should have no day of rest.—Mr. F. J. Hendy said he had had interviews with clergymen at Eastleigh on the subject, and there was scarcely one but preferred the picture hall being opened to the public-house. The pictures were the only source of amusement some of the working men had got.—Mr. Arnold Tebbutt said that a strong case had been made out at the committee meeting for the people of Eastleigh. The religious element was in favour of the opening. They considered the pictures less harmful than other methods of employment. He was in favour of each case being dealt with on its merits, and they ought to consider whether they had a right to force their opinions down other people's throats.—The resolution was, however, carried by forty-nine votes to fourteen.

POPULAR PLAYER'S RETURN.

The Coliseum, Bristol, was filled at every performance recently with audiences assembled to specially welcome Mr. Tom Powers on his return visit to Bristol. Recollections of the previous visit in February (soon after Mr. Powers' arrival in England) were so favourable that all records were broken. Mr. Powers is possessed of an unusually keen sense of humour, and many hundreds availed themselves of the question-box provided in the vestibule, and the replies to these formed one of the most amusing features of the entertainments. In the course of an interesting conversation with our representative after the performance, Mr. Powers said "I was afraid that since most of the patrons of this picture house had seen my performance before, perhaps we should not have good houses, therefore I cannot but express my deep appreciation of the splendid reception I have received, not only in Bristol but throughout England and Scotland." Mr. Powers continued: "I'm doing some very interesting work over here, and the Turner Films, Limited, have sub-let me to the Hepworth Company, so that I am playing in all films which Mr. Hepworth himself is producing. We are to begin 'Barnaby Rudge,' and I am to play the name part. Even now, at my house in Walton there is a big cage containing a raven, who has been rechristened 'Grip" and who is fast making friends with me. Hepworth's are planning to make this a big production, and it is a delight to work with English actors and producers who are so careful in their work.

"HIS GUILTY CONSCIENCE."

We are asked by Mr. Oscar Rosenberg, sole agent for "Danmark" films, to mention that the correct length of "His Guilty Conscience," which received a special notice in our last issue, is two reels, or 2,300 ft., and not three reels. This fine drama is being placed upon the open market, and is not to be handled as an exclusive.

NEW YORK'S NEWEST.

An American correspondent informs us that the recent opening of the Candler Theatre, on 42nd Street, just west of Broadway, passed off very successfully. "Antony and Cleopatra," George Kleine's "latest and greatest," was the opening attraction, this being its initial presentation in the metropolis of the U.S.A.. Mr. Kleine's production will be continued throughout the summer. The Candler is one of the most magnificently appointed theatres in New York, the first floor containing 625 seats, while the one balcony, of the cantilever type, seats 575. The stage is ample in width and depth for the largest scenic productions. During the run of "Antony and Cleopatra" two daily performances will be given, while a high-class orchestra and a famous conductor will look after the special score. The American theatres in which the Kleine features are to be shown are: The Auditorium, the largest playhouse in Chicago; the Columbia Theatre, Washington, D.C.; the Detroit Opera House, Detroit; the Park Theatre, Boston; the Academy of Music, Baltimore; the Euclid Avenue Opera House, Cleveland; the new Pitt Theatre, Pittsburg; and the Auditorium, Minneapolis.

AT THE ANGLO-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Among the extremely interesting exhibits shown by Messrs. Dallmeyer, Limited, at the Anglo-American Exposition are test plates by means of which the polishing of a Dallmeyer lens is checked to an accuracy of 1-500,000th of an inch, probably the highest accuracy humanly attainable. A series of Iris diaphragms, from 1.05 in. to 4¾ in. outside diameter is also seen, and have been carefully designed in accordance with a paper read before the Optical Society by Cyril F. Lan-Davis, F.R.P.S. The portait lens No. 71,022 works at the very large aperture of F/2.4, and is designed for photographs of small children. The very short exposure required allows the photographer to take advantage of the best pose. Patent portrait lens No. 76,184-5 are rapid studio lenses which give the sharpest possible pictures of subjects in one plane. The Series II. Dallmeyer Stigmatic No. 83,199 and No. 4 Series IV., Carfac No. 81.515, are lenses for all types of cameras, giving sharp definition all over the plate. The front combination, which is full corrected for astigmatism, gives a picture double the ordinary size, or a picture the usual size from a point twice as far away. The back is also a useful single lens, and gives pictures midway in size between the complete lens and the front, these stigmatics thus being four lenses in one. The projection lense XII. and XIV. are designed for cinematograph pictures. In cinematograph lens, No. 83,391, working at F/1.9 is seen what is claimed to be the most rapid lens regularly made for any class of work in the world. At this enormous aperture exposure may be reduced to one-quarter that necessary with the lenses usually fitted to cameras. Film-producing companies in England, the United States, Japan, Australia and elsewhere have, it is said, fitted them with great satisfaction to their cameras, and find these lenses invaluable for studio work or outdoors as late as 9 p.m. on a summer evening. There are many other excellent features upon Messrs. Dallmeyer's stand, and visitors to the exhibition are assured of an interesting display when calling upon the firm's representatives.

A MUSICAL MEM.

We hear that Miss Hilda Lucas, who was for some time at the Dorset Hall, Dublin, and afterwards played at the Kingstown Pavilion, has accepted a post as pianiste at the Select Palace, Brighton.

"POPULAR PLAYERS" CONTEST.

The result of the recent competition held by our contemporary, "Pictures and the Picturegoer," is as follows:—Mis Florence Turner, 32,025 votes, with Miss Mary Fuller and Miss Alice Joyce a splendid second and third, while Messrs. Maurice Costelloe with 32,106 votes, and Messrs. Bunny and G. M. Anderson appear with a very narrow margin between. The competition has proved an excellent notion, and a goodly list of prizes has been distributed.

RECORDS AND REBOOKINGS.

Remarkable success has attended the initial performances of the film version of the Magnet Company's exclusive, "The Lights o' London," which bids fair to achieve as big a name in filmdom as on the legitimate stage. A BIOSCOPE representative attests its remarkable success both at the Camden Hippodrome and the Kentish Town Palace, these being large theatres having done record business. Other excellent reports are to hand from Edmonton and from the Balham Palladium. Rebookings are in several cases being arranged, the houses having found a real "Magnet" in this fine four-reel drama.

ON THE SOUTH-EAST COAST.

The exceptionally fine weather has brought many visitors, and steady business is maintained. Folkestone's halls find much favour with the public. The Central, George Lane, did well with "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" and "'Neath the Lion's Paw."—"Whitewashing the Ceiling" has been one of the most pleasing comics seen at the Electric. "Conscience" was the principal dramatic feature.—"The Great Leap" was much appreciated at the Playhouse.—The Golf Tournament at Sandwich caused Mr. G. C. Claringbold to be busy with his camera, and the topicals shown at the Empire created much interest.—At Ramsgate four distinct programmes are now given at the Queen's. "In the Firelight," "Chinese Death Thorn" and "The Lure of Gold" were amongst the best. Mr. Bert Parker had a film taken of the Constitutional Club Walk, and, well advertised, this proved very popular. Mr. Reg V. Crow is doing remarkably well at the King's. The fare provided is always of the best, and fills his theatre. "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" and "Staircase of Death" were the chief features.—"The Next Generation" and "A Night on the Atlantic" were well received at Shanly's.—At the Cinema, Broadstairs, appreciative audiences witnessed "The House of Temperley" and "Kissing Cup."—Business is well up to the average at Margate. The Parade Cinema invariably screens a thoroughly acceptable programme. "Kissing Cup" and "Detective Finn" were prime favourites, whilst hearty laughter greeted "Caught in His Own Net" and "Bunny's Mistake." Through the interest of Mr. Claude Lumley and others, the children of the Jewish Orphan School frequently spend an enjoyable evening at this popular house.—Mr. C. W. Ellis is securing some excellent subjects for the Clifton Cinema. "Thor" and "The Great Turf Sensation" were much appreciated by good audiences.—In addition to the excellent programmes provided at the Lounge, Cliftonville, two extra features were screened in "The Secret of Adrianople" and "David Garrick."—"The Joke that Kills" and "False News" were the stars at the Town Hall, Westgate.

OPENING AT FINCHLEY.

The many friends of Mr. J. J. Cotter, formerly of The Pictures, will be interested to learn that he is this week opening as lessee and manager, the Stanhope Gate Cinema, Finchley, N. Mr. Cotter has several big productions in store for the inhabitants of the Garden City suburb and is opening to-day (Thursday), with a well-known British production, "Jim, the Fireman."

EDISON NEWS.

"The Unopened Letter," an Edison two-reel feature, for Monday, July 13th, contains a very interesting and original plot built around the theme of a secret marriage, and the acting and production are said to be all that can be desired.—We are asked by the Company to announce that the last date for ordering their two-reel feature release for June 11th, "All For His Sake," is on June 4th.—In the 700 ft. comedy subject, "Quarantined, released on July 23rd. The story is played entirely by Edison juvenile "stars."—This quaint conception has been worked out in a delightful manner, the clever juvenile performers entering gleefully into the spirit of the "heart-rending" drama, "The Austere Butler," "The Solemn, Pompous Physician," the "Agonised Mothers," and the "Irresponsible Father," being alike captivating.

BREEZES FROM BRIDLINGTON.

Mr. Palmer, manager of the Corporation's cinema, the Royal Victoria Rooms, had a very attractive programme for patrons, the most prominent picture being "The Flames of Vengeance." Other dramas during the week were "The Field Foreman." "The Black Gang," and "His Wife."—No less carefully arranged have been Mr. Forman's pictures at the Picturedrome, in the Old Town, where other forms of amusement are also provided.—Mr. J. Austin, of the Picture House, has become noted for his enterprise, and he has given a further example of this by securing a picture of the Derby, to be shown the night following the great day. In the early part of last week big houses witnessed "Alone in the Jungle." "The Dead Secret" was a welcome attraction to the book-loving public, and "The Price of Thoughtlessness" made good business doubly sure. This week's special events, up to time of going to press, have been "A Message to Headquarters" and "The Chinese Death Thorn."

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

The outstanding attraction at the Playhouse last week was the British Army film, and crowded houses showed their appreciation. Capt. H. A. P. Littledale, the adjutant of the 1st Cambs. Regiment, attended on the Monday, and spoke of the opportunities offered by the army as a career for young men. About 400 men of the battalion attended on the Monday, and the Playhouse Orchestra was augmented by the regimental band, under Bandmaster J. Blane. The manager (Mr. A. P. Jordan) kindly allowed all soldiers and sailors to enter at reduced rates. The programme this week includes "The Stolen Inheritance" and "Ghosts." On Thursday Ouida's "Moths" is the special attraction. Mr. Gustav Hamel, in his sensational feats at Cambridge, was also shown.—The star picture at the Empire last week was "The Rival Actresses," and this week large crowds are witnessing "The War Makers" and "The Golden Pathway."—Good programmes continue to be shown at the Electric, under the management of Mr. A. P. Jordan and Mr. S. Mortimer. Two pictures of great local interest were screened to large audiences in the Ulster Demonstration on Parker's Piece, and Mr. Gustav Hamel's sensational flights. These films were taken by the Electric's own operators.

PETERBOROUGH PAR.

An exceptionally good programme was presented at the Broadway Kinema last week, the chief films including "Peace and War in Mexico," "Alexia's Strategy" and the R.S.P.C.A. film, "The Traffic in Old Horses." This week the attraction is "The Three Musketeers."

RE NORTHERN RIGHTS.

We are asked to direct our readers' attention to the fact that in the advertisement for the James Starr Exclusive Film Company, in last week's issue, it should have been mentioned that the Newcastle Film Supply Company, Cross House, Westgate Road, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, are the agents for the "Mystery of the Black Domino" for Northumberland, Durham and Scotland.

NEW LICENCES IN LONDON.

During the first quarter of the year there were granted in the County of London seventeen new cinematograph licences. Four were transferred and one lapsed. Occasional exhibitions in premises not licensed under the Cinematograph Act were held on thirty-eight occasions. The Theatres and Music-Halls Committee of the London County Council notes that during the quarter no legal proceedings were taken against cinematograph licensees.

NOT AN EXCLUSIVE.

We are asked to state, in connection with the comic film, "Buying a Horse," as mentioned in our issue of April 30th, on p. 481, that the Universal Film Company, Limited, of 40, Gerrard Street, W., now control the world's rights for this release. Also, that the film is being issued on the open market and not as an "exclusive." Messrs. Lucrative Films were, in the first place, the producers, but all rights for this very amusing comic are now controlled as above. The Universal Company have also in prospect some very fine British dramas for early issue.

SCHEMES FOR THE SUMMER.

With the coming of summer improvements in ventilation are being taken in hand at many of the London halls. The London County Council has approved ventilation schemes at 140, High Street, Clapham, the Kilburn Grange cinematograph hall, and hall at 300, Mile End Road. Alterations at a hall in Goldsmith's Row, Hackney, the Holborn Cinema, 210, High Holborn, and the enlargement of a hall at 92-94, Uxbridge Road, have been approved. The provision of a new projection chamber at the Empire, Leicester Square, has also been sanctioned. Plans have been passed of a new hall to be known as the Orion Hall, at East Bank, Stamford Hill.

NEW NORTH LIVERPOOL THEATRE.

The Rice Lane Picture House, opened under the direction of Mr. Eric Thornber, will undoubtedly be a big attraction to North Liverpool and Bootle residents. The Picture House is one of the most luxurious in the north of Liverpool, and has seating for 1,000. An outstanding feature is the beautifully appointed lounge, which is fitted up on a most lavish scale. Several of the directors were present at the initial performance. Mr. G. Gordon, the chairman, formally opening the theatre. Among the films already booked are "Life," "The Opium Smoker," "The House of Fear" and "A Little Bugler." The music, which is provided by the Picture House Trio, under Mr. C. Edward Price, is really first-class.

AN ENGINEERING INTEREST.

We herewith thank the A.E.G. Electric Company, Limited, for a copy of their latest publication, "Electricity in the Home and Workshop," and note the excellence of its 200 odd pages. The whole is well bound, and, while containing a goodly amount of catalogue matter, is also remarkable for a number of very informative articles, that upon outside lighting being of especial value.

MILITARY WEEK AT OTLEY.

Otley is in the throes of militarism. At Farnley Park, in the magnificent grounds attached to the residence of Major F. H. Fawkes, of the Yorkshire Hussars, is an encampment of the Northumberland Hussars and a squadron of Royal Scots Greys. The two picture theatres of the Wharfedale town rose to the occasion and made a speciality of military subjects. At the Picture House, Burras Lane, the British Army film had been opportunely secured. On the first evening the picture was witnessed by the officers and men of the 10th (Otley) Battery and 4th West Riding (Howitzer) Brigade Royal Field Artillery, under the command of Captain Kenneth Duncan. The second section, shown in the second half of the week, was witnessed by the entire regiment of Northumberland Hussars, who attended with their band, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Viscount Ridley. The interior of the theatre had been lavishly decorated with flags. The proprietors of the King's Hall also showed programmes which were largely of a military character the pictures of the week including "A Soldier's Duty," "Brothers at War," "Regimental Powers," and "The Two Sergeants," and the theatre was well attended by members of the military camps.

MISS TURNER ENTERTAINED.

Miss Florence Turner, in the course of her tour, appeared last week at the Bradford Empire, and received a very hearty welcome from the Trade, which culminated in a dinner in her honour on Friday night at the Victoria Hotel, the affair having been organised by the Bradford section of the Exhibitors' Association. The gathering numbered about eighty, Mr. J. S. Clayton, of the Picture House, presiding. The loyal toast was given by Mr. Percival Craig, manager of the Empire Theatre. Mr. Craig related, in his inimical way, his own experiences as a cinema operator and lecturer. The toast of the evening, "Miss Florence Turner" was proposed by the chairman, who expressed the hearty good wishes of the Trade of the City. Miss Turner briefly responded and thanked those present for the treatment which she had received in the city, and in this country generally since her arrival from America. "The Trade" was proposed by Mr. Henry Hibbert, of Hibbert's Pictures, Limited, who referred to the fact that the coming of the picture theatre had done more to suppress intemperance than any other agency. He urged for the Sunday opening of picture theatres in order to elevate the lives of the young people who at present thronged the streets. Mr. A. E. Shields, local secretary of the Association, responded. Entertainment was provided voluntarily during the evening by artistes from the local music-halls, including Miss Turner and Mr. Craig. On Friday afternoon Miss Turner and Mr. Larry Trimble, her manager, enjoyed a motor spin as the guests of Mr. Arnold M. Crowe, of the Exchange Film Service, Bradford. The party first visited the West Bradford Golf Links, at the invitation of Mr. Percival Craig, manager of the Empire, who had a party there. Here Miss Turner took her first lesson in golf and an interesting photograph was taken. Afterwards the drive was extended into Wharfedale and to Ilkley and Bolton Abbey. A thorough exploration of the beautiful woods was made and Miss Turner was so enchanted that she expressed herself strongly in favour of utilising these grounds for a future film.

Cinematograph Exhibitors' Mail.

. . . . . "another brilliant success with the big feature of this week's programme. . . . . The dramatic episodes are numerous and thrilling. The playing of Ben Wilson is superb. Miss Gertrude McCoy is also deserving of great praise. The plot is very easily followed right through, and there is a notable absence of 'padding.'"

Cinema News:

. . . . "Is full of stirring episodes, and is particularly remarkable for the clever acting of Mr. Benjamin F. Wilson in the dual rôle of hero and villain. By means of double exposures, some extremely clever effects are obtained. . . . . Will tickle the palate of those members of the public who like thrills."

Kinematograph:

"Mr. Wilson draws the two antagonistic characters with clear distinction, and Miss Gertrude McCoy does some admirable work in the part of the mysterious girl. The story concludes with a sensational fight in an office building wherein Anisty is killed."

HELP IN TROUBLE.

FOR PROPRIETORS, MANAGERS, AND OPERATORS.

"F.A." is equipping an operating-box, and asks if the automatic shutter on the projector is a feature made necessary under the Cinematograph Act. Our correspondent also asks if glazed operating apertures with self-closing iron shutters are necessary requirements.

The automatic light cut-off, although a fairly standard feature of modern projectors, has been introduced solely by the projector manufacturer with the view of the danger of eliminating the danger of film fire. The Cinematograph Act does not refer to this shutter, so its use is in no way compulsory.

Glazed operating and inspection apertures are a somewhat recent requirement of the London County Council and probably of some other bodies. The idea is to make a smoke-proof opening, and so make up for one of the shortcomings of that legal requirement, the semi-automatic iron shutter to the openings. For the hand-actuated release self-closing iron shutters are made necessary by the Cinematograph Act, and their use is essential in any licensed cinematograph hall in the country.

For your advice, "F.A.," we would say that to avoid distortion of the picture the glazing of the projection opening should be carried out in good quality plate glass, and should be set parallel to the plane of the film. The iron shutter should be well made, with the slides as smoke-proof as possible, without risk of binding. It is a mistake to make the shutter too small, and the iron shutter opening should be 2 ins. larger in every way than the actual aperture in wall.

NORTHAM writes as follows: "I am running a petrol electric plant, and lately it has been working in a very erratic manner. The engine is about eighteen months old, and until a few weeks back had given no trouble. Recently it has developed the following trouble: After about half an hour's run the engine gets very noisy, and then, after a series of thuds, stops dead. It probably takes ten minutes or so to restart, but soon afterwards the thumping symptoms redevelop and another shutdown occurs. The ignition seems to be quite in order, and there is no stoppage of fuel. I note, however, that when the engine is not running and the petrol-tap is turned on petrol trickles from the carburetter. This used not to be the case."

All the symptoms point to preignition, which no doubt is due to your running on an over-rich mixture. There is no doubt that the carburetter is flooding badly, the needle valve being either out of adjustment or very much worn. Alternatively, perhaps the float may have punctured, thereby by lack of buoyancy not controlling as it should the height of petrol in the jet. As you are doubtless aware, NORTHAM, a mixture of petrol and air is required to make an effective explosive mixture. There is a fairly wide range of proportions of air and petrol; one might have a too-diluted mixture or an over-rich mixture. The latter is by far the more harmful, as an over-rich mixture accompanies with it the leaving of a carbon deposit on the cylinder head and piston top, the products of improper combustion that will, even if the gas proportion be again correctly adjusted, perhaps cause trouble unless removed. We should advise you, therefore, to go over your engine as follows: Firstly, dismantle the carburetter and remove the float. Shake this latter to ascertain if any petrol has found its way inside. If it has, it is certain the float has punctured or one of the soldered seams has given way. To find the spot, slightly warm the float and plunge into water; the punctured spot will be indicated by bubbles appearing. The hole had then better be enlarged, the petrol driven out, and the spot again soldered. Replace the float, and when the carburetter is fixed in position the petrol should reach just below the top of the jet. If it be too low it will make starting difficult, whereas if the level be high continual flooding will take place. The height can be adjusted by bending slightly the arms controlling the needle. Upon dismantling the carburetter, should it be found that the float is in order, the needle itself should be inspected. It may require, as, indeed, needles sometimes do, to be ground in the valve seating. This is best effected by using a little crocus powder. The point of the needle should be moistened with oil and sprinkled with the powder, and then pressed into and turned backwards and forwards in the seating. This should be repeated until both the needle point and valve seating possess smooth surfaces. This will ensure that the valve will seat properly without petrol leaking. After this is done test for height of petrol in the jet, which should be as previously explained. The cylinder should now be removed, and any carbon deposit scratched from the piston head. A screwdriver will make an effective tool for this purpose. The carbon must also be removed from the inside top of cylinder. This is a little more difficult than scraping the piston head, but by firstly breaking up the carbon by tapping with the business end of a screwdriver, the carbon can generally with a certain amount of patience be quite removed. Care must be taken in replacing the cylinder to correctly enter the piston rings. They should be sprung in by one person, whilst another drops the cylinder over. There must be no forcing, or a ring may easily break. The openings of the rings should also be spaced equi-distant around the piston—if in line oil will easily work up and assist in the formation of carbon deposit.

If you attend to the above as directed, NORTHAM, we anticipate that your engine will again run in its old sweet manner.

"E.R." asks if there are any special rules to be observed in the starting of a motor generator, and if a man with mechanical ability, but without any previous experience of a motor generator, would be capable of running and maintaining one in a fairly efficient condition.

We might indicate the starting of a motor generator as follows: Firstly, see that the parts are quite clean and that no dust is resting on the surface of the commutator. Spin by hand to see that the armature is free to revolve. Make certain that the oil is at the correct level. The height should be such that the lower part of the lubricating rings are dipping in the oil. Examine the fuses. See that they are intact. Before closing the main switch make certain that the starting resistance lever is in the starting or "off" position. Next see that the operating-box circuit is quite open—that is, if the switch be out, thereby ensuring the machine being started up on no load. The motor main switch should now be closed and the starting lever moved to the first notch. The machine will then start. The lever should then be moved gradually notch by notch until it reaches the full "on" position, when the motor will be running at its normal speed. The lever should be maintained in that position automatically. If it shows an inclination to fly back, it should be held in the "on" position for a few moments before releasing the hand. The lever is held over by an electro magnet, and sometimes the magnet armature attached to the lever does not "bite" the magnet properly. The bearings should next be inspected to see that the oil rings revolve, as upon their proper working the lubrication of the bearings depend. They may be started by the aid of an ordinary pencil. After ascertaining that the generator is running normally, one can proceed to strike up the arc. It is imperative that all resistance should first be inserted and the arc struck up on the lightest load possible, the current being afterwards gradually increased.

It would be difficult here in the space at our disposal to deal with the questions relating to motor generator maintenance, and you would certainly be well advised to obtain our publication, "The Motor Generator in Theory and in Practice." From this you will obtain all the practical information to run successfully a motor generator installation.

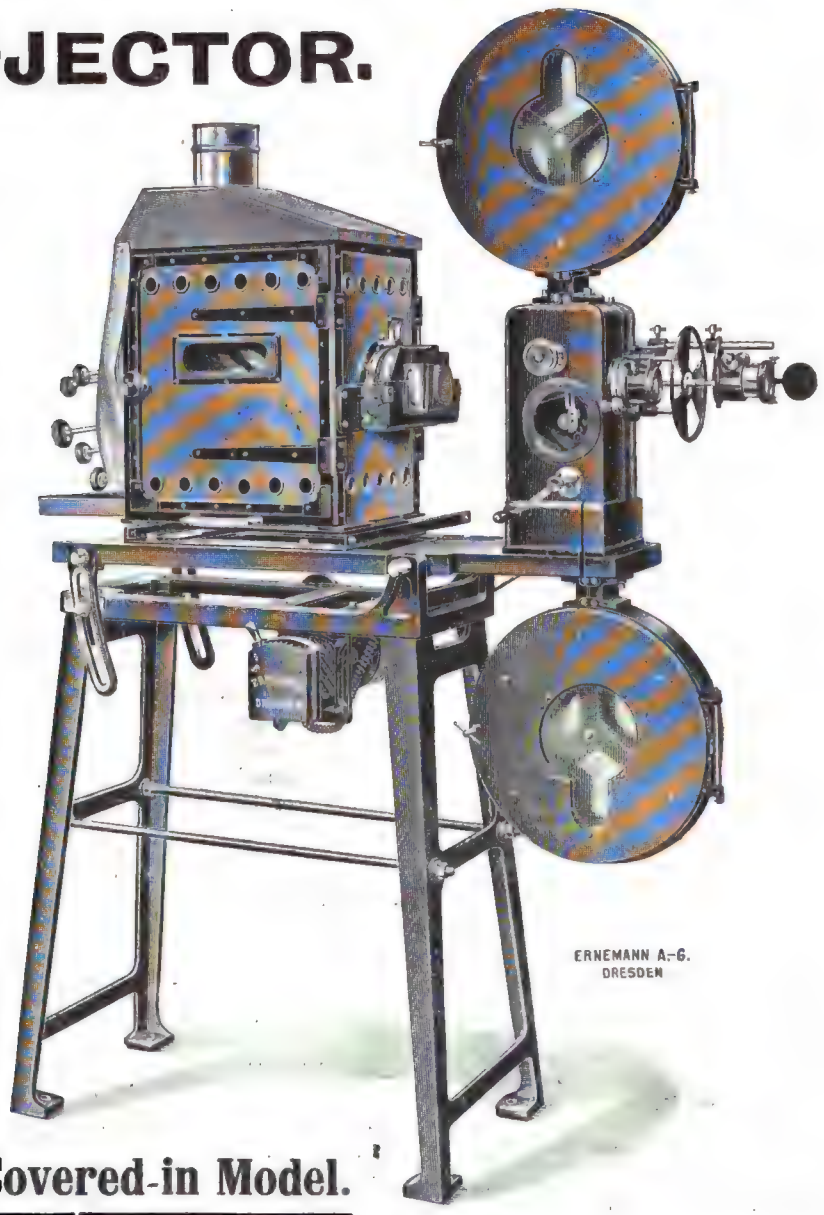
HALIFAX HINTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Messrs. Greene Brothers, proprietors of the Gem, Crossley Street, the Picturedrome, King Cross, the Cosy, Sowerby Bridge, and also theatres in other districts, have in conjunction with a company of local amateurs produced an excellent little cinema play entitled "The Plotters." The film was screened later in the week and proved a distinct success.

At the Electric, Wards End, last week, Mr. Leslie Stansfield once again secured an excellent programme. "The Staircase of Death," which headed the bill during the early part of last week was a fine production. For the current week Mr. Stansfield provides "She Stoops to Conquer." Novelty will be introduced in the programme during the week by a children's beauty show, the judging being by popular vote. I am informed that the Electric management are opening another picture house at Sowerby Bridge. The building is now in progress of erection, and the position selected is in one of the best and busiest parts of the town and should prove a successful venture.

Good business has been the rule at the Picture House, Wards End. There can be no question as to the popularity of the W. W. Jacobs series of subjects the third of which, "Lawyer Quince," will be showing during the current week. The delightful music supplied by the first-class orchestra is alone worth the price of admission.



Although the lengthening days and the fine weather are the means of providing numerous outdoor attractions, good reports are forthcoming of brisk business from Mr. Harmsworth, manager of the de Luxe, Northgate. "The Shadows of a Great City" was the leading subject for the earlier part of last week and proved to be one of the best dramas shown here for some time.

The Palladium, King Cross, is a very popular theatre in the town, and will be considerably more so when the final interior decorations have been made and it will be able to rank with the best in this part of the West Riding of Yorkshire. "The Lure of Gold" which was the top-liner for last week was a big success and drew large audiences. For the first three days of this week, "Hook and Hand" is to be at the head of affairs, to be displaced on Thursday by "The Bride of Mystery."

The Ideal, Raglan Street, continues to draw very good crowds. The programme submitted last week was up to the usual standard of excellence.—The summer season of pictures commenced last week at the Albert Theatre, Brighouse. The programme shown last week included "Thou Shalt Not Steal," and was much appreciated.—Mr. Avcott, manager of the Picture House, Hipperholme, is providing his patrons with some excellent programmes. The Sherlock Holmes series proved a strong attraction.
